October 1986

Thanks to the never-ending vigilance of users of this text, especially the students of CUNY's Greek Institute, we have been able in this new edition to make a few corrections and improvements. To all who gave us suggestions we offer our thanks and again solicit from users of this text their comments.

The second edition was at the printer when the terrible news arrived that Gerald M. Quinn had died in an automobile accident. All those who knew him mourn the loss of such a generous, caring, and committed teacher, colleague, and friend. Gerry's enthusiasm and humor, his real personal concern for every individual, his unflagging dedication to the highest standards—all were evident in everything he did, most recently as Dean since 1989 of Fordham University's College at Lincoln Center and as a member of the 1991 Greek Institute. Every word of this book bears his imprint. He was unique, and irreplaceable.

ON THE USE OF THIS TEXT

Users of the preliminary edition of this text will be pleased, we trust, by some major improvements: continuous pagination, an index, and a now complete English–Greek vocabulary. We would also like to draw attention to some minor changes: the second aorist has been moved to Unit 7 from Unit 8, and the imperative to Unit 11 from Unit 17. The comparative is now introduced in Unit 17, and additional material has been incorporated into Unit 20. Certain rules are highlighted in SMALL CAPITALS, and new terms are given in boldface.

Although this text was written for use in the intensive summer Greek Institute of the City University of New York, the experience of the last decade has shown that it can be used successfully in a wide variety of regularly paced courses.

We present the grammar in such a way as to enable students to grasp whole morphological and syntactical systems as soon as possible: all principal parts of all verbs are learned as soon as the verb is encountered, and by Unit 8 the student has acquired the complete conjugation of the thematic verb, except for the imperative mood. It is especially important that the subjunctive and optative are introduced early, in Unit 3.

In the Greek Institute each unit is presented in a two-hour afternoon session during which the students practice the material they are learning by doing some of the drills of the unit. These drills focus on the points of morphology and syntax which are new, but, except where necessary, they do not employ any of the new vocabulary of the unit. Thus students can immediately practice new morphology and syntax with familiar words. We strongly urge instructors of regularly paced courses to use these drills orally as the new material is being presented, before the students go home to master it. We indicate in the text of the first ten units where the drills can appropriately be done. In the Greek Institute these drills add liveliness to the grammar presentations and give the students self-confidence.

The exercises in each unit employ the new vocabulary; there are enough of them so that not all need be assigned. In the two-hour morning sessions of the Greek Institute, the students are expected to translate the assigned sentences and to do others at sight. They are always responsible for identifying every form fully and for accounting for it syntactically. Most of the morning session is spent in ringing changes upon the sentences: e.g., changing from singular to plural, active to passive, or an aorist to a future.

The result of this process is that when the students read real, unedited Greek they hold themselves to the same standards of explication. It is hard work, but they get a real grasp on their first substantial text, Plato's Ion, which they begin in their seventh week.

Starting with a number of fragments of Menander in Unit 4, unaltered selections from ancient authors are presented at the end of each unit; by Unit 16 students are capable of starting a passage of Plato's Gorgias which continues through Unit 20. Glosses at the bottom of the page give standard vocabulary listings for each word which the students do not yet know. Not every unit needs a full two hours for the presentation of new material, and, time allowing, some of these passages from ancient authors are read at sight in the afternoon sessions; others are used in optional sight readings during the lunch breaks. These sight readings serve two functions: first, it is very important that students learn how to handle unseen Greek systematically and without fear; second, although the concentrated practice necessary for mastering the morphology and syntax of ancient Greek cannot be provided by unedited ancient texts, students want and need the reward of reading real Greek. Thus, the readings are something of a treat, but they also show the students the linguistic strengths they are building through doing the drills and exercises.

During the summer, each unit requires about four hours for the presentation of the material and the doing of the exercises. In adapting the book to a regularly paced class, teachers may want to assign some of the drills as homework while the student masters the vocabulary and the first half of the grammar of the unit. Some teachers may also want to spend more than four hours on certain units, e.g., Unit 5 or Unit 8.

The pronunciation suggested in the text is that used most frequently in the United States. Others may want to use the pronunciation reconstructed by modern philology; they need only explain their system to their students when they present the alphabet and the accents.

When the grammar is presented at the Greek Institute, students are given one- or two-page handouts for each Unit which serve as summaries of the material to be learned. Copies of these for reproduction will be sent to those instructors requesting them from the publisher on their letterhead:

CONTENTS

Greek: An Intensive Course is divided into a Text, with twenty Units, and an Appendix. Each Unit is divided into Sections which are numbered continuously (1–153). At the end of each Unit there are Vocabulary, Vocabulary Notes, Drills, Exercises, and, beginning with Unit 4, Readings of original Greek texts. The Appendix contains additional grammar (Sections 154–168); a summary, for reference, of morphology and syntax; Greek–English and English–Greek vocabularies; and an Index of the Text and Appendix. The Appendix has a separate table of contents.

INTRODUCTION

1. THE GREEK LANGUAGE

Ancient Greek belongs to a large family of languages which includes English, Russian, Latin and the Romance languages, Persian, and Sanskrit, whose common characteristics show that they are descended from a single ancestral language, called Indo-European.

The history of Greek extends back from modern times to the second millennium B.C., and the language, as written in different locales and in different ages, varies. At any one time there are various dialects, differing somewhat in pronunciation, vocabulary, and grammar, but mutually comprehensible. Over the centuries also, the language has steadily changed.

This book presents Attic Greek, the dialect of Athens, as it appears in prose authors of the fifth and fourth centuries B.C.—the Greek of Plato, Lysias, Xenophon, Demosthenes, Thucydides. Attic prose lays the foundation for reading the poetry of Attic tragedy and comedy, the closely related Ionic dialect of the historian Herodotus, and the archaic Ionic poetry of Homer. Also, there developed out of Attic Greek the later Koine or "common dialect" in which the New Testament is written.

3. ROUGH AND SMOOTH BREATHING

Greek also has an h-sound, which occurs only at the beginning of certain words (cf. English hand, his). This sound is indicated not by a separate letter but by a rough breathing (‘) placed above the initial vowel of a word and pronounced before the vowel sound.

    ἑξάγωνον   hexagon

When a word is capitalized, the rough breathing is written before the initial vowel.

    ῾Ελένη   Helen

In words beginning with a vowel and lacking an h-sound, the absence of this sound is indicated by a smooth breathing (’) placed in the same manner as a rough breathing.

    ὀλιγαρχίᾱ   oligarchy
    ᾽Ηλέκτρᾱ   Elektra

All words beginning with a vowel must have either a smooth breathing or a rough breathing. All words beginning with upsilon have a rough breathing.

    ὑπόθεσις   hypothesis

Likewise, all words beginning with rho have a rough breathing; this is not pronounced. Note the name of the letter: rho. Rho is the only consonant which takes a breathing.

    ῥητορική   rhetoric

4. LONG AND SHORT VOWELS

Greek vowels can be classified into five long vowels and five corresponding short vowels. Long vowels took approximately twice as long to pronounce as short vowels.

The vowels alpha, iota, and upsilon are either long or short. Greek did not mark the length of these vowels, but in this text a long mark or macron (¯) will be placed above these vowels when they are long, as in the chart below. Short vowels and those vowels which are always long (eta, omega) will not be marked.

LONG VOWELS	SHORT VOWELS
ᾱ	α
η	ε
ῑ	ι
ω	ο
ῡ	υ

Pronunciation Drill I, page 11, may now be done.

5. DIPHTHONGS

Certain pairs of vowels, called diphthongs, are pronounced together to produce one continuous sound. Words beginning with diphthongs, like words beginning with vowels, require a rough or smooth breathing; this breathing is placed over the second letter of the diphthong, as in the examples below.

All diphthongs are counted as long.

DIPHTHONG	PRONOUNCED LIKE THE boldface LETTER(S)	EXAMPLE
αι	defy, fine	αἰθήρ
ει	wait, bait	εἰρήνη
οι	boy	οἶνος
υι	wit	Εἰλείθυια
αυ	scow, plow	αὐτόνομος
ευ	(ε + υ)	᾿Οδυσσεύς
ηυ	(η + υ)	ηὕρηκα
ου	boot	Οὐρανός

Note that the diphthong ει and the long vowel η are pronounced alike.
Likewise, the diphthong ου and the long vowel ῡ are pronounced alike.

A Greek word has as many syllables as it has vowels or diphthongs.

αὐ-τό-νο-μος
᾿Ο-δυσ-σεύς
οἶ-νος Εἰ-λεί-θυι-α
φι-λο-σο-φί-ᾱ

6. IOTA SUBSCRIPT AND ADSCRIPT

When the long vowels ᾱ, η, and ω are combined with short iota, the iota is written beneath the long vowels as an iota subscript and is not pronounced.

ᾳ   ῃ   ῳ

If the long vowel is capitalized, the iota is written after the long vowel as an iota adscript and is not pronounced. A rough or smooth breathing is written before the long vowel.

ᾠδή   (iota subscript)
᾿Ωιδή   (iota adscript)

Contrast the placement of the breathing over the second vowel of a diphthong.

Εἰλείθυια

Pronunciation Drill II, page 11, may now be done.

7. GAMMA COMBINED WITH CERTAIN CONSONANTS

The consonant gamma, when combined with a palatal ($\varkappa$, γ, χ, or ξ; see Section 8) has the sound of ng in such English words as "baking."

COMBINATION	SOUND	EXAMPLE
$\gamma\gamma$	anger	ἄγγελος
$\gamma\varkappa$	banker, anchor	ἄγκῡρα
$\gamma\xi$	larynx, Sphinx	λάρυγξ, Σφίγξ
$\gamma\chi$	(ng in baking $+ \chi$) lunkhead	Ὀξύρρυγχος

Pronunciation Drill III, page 11, may now be done.

8. CLASSIFICATION OF CONSONANTS

Certain consonants are classified according to the part of the mouth in which they are formed.

Labials	π	β	φ
Dentals	τ	δ	θ
Palatals	$\varkappa$	γ	χ

The lips are used in forming labials, the teeth in forming dentals, the palate in forming palatals.

The consonants ζ (= dz), ξ (= ks), and ψ ($=$ ps) are double consonants.

The combination of any labial with σ produces the double consonant ψ.

$$\left.\begin{array}{l} \pi\sigma \\ \beta\sigma \\ \varphi\sigma \end{array}\right\} \quad \psi$$

The consonants φ, θ, and χ were originally aspirated: they indicated a labial, dental, or palatal accompanied by a puff of air. (Cf. English "pea," "tea," "key.") Thus certain unaspirated consonants, when followed by a word beginning with a rough breathing ($=$ h), are written as aspirates.

$$\pi + \text{ʽ} = \varphi$$
$$\tau + \text{ʽ} = \theta$$ $$\varkappa + \text{ʽ} = \chi$$

This text adopts the standard pronunciation of unaspirated Greek π, τ, and κ as English p, t, and k (sometimes aspirated, sometimes not: contrast "pin," "spot") and the standard pronunciation of aspirated Greek φ, θ, and χ as the fricatives f (as in "fit"), th (as in "thought") and ch (as in German "lachen").

9. PUNCTUATION AND CAPITALIZATION

Greek employs the same comma and period as does English.

A single mark serves as both colon and semicolon. This is a dot written above the line.

> Ἕλληνες · Σοφοκλῆς, Περικλῆς, Δημοσθένης.
> Greeks: Sophokles, Perikles, Demosthenes.

The question mark is the same as the English semicolon.

> Σοφοκλῆς; Περικλῆς; Δημοσθένης; > Sophokles? Perikles? Demosthenes?

Proper names are capitalized, as are the first words of paragraphs and of quotations. But the first word of a sentence is not normally capitalized.

Greek did not employ quotation marks, but in some texts quotation marks are occasionally employed.

10. ACCENT

Most Greek words had one syllable whose musical pitch varied slightly from that of the other syllables of the word. Such a syllable is said to be accented, and this difference of pitch is called the word's accent. In English, accent is shown by an increased stress on the accented syllable (e.g., relative, religious, reconstruct) rather than by a difference in musical pitch.

Unlike written English, written Greek marks accents wherever they occur.

THE ACCENT OF A GREEK WORD MUST BE LEARNED AS AN INTEGRAL PART OF ITS SPELLING.

Greek indicates accent in the following ways:

´	Acute accent	Marked a raising of the musical pitch.
`	Grave accent	Marked a lowering of pitch or substitution of a steady for a raised pitch.
ˆ	Circumflex accent	Marked a raising and lowering of pitch in the same syllable.

Since native speakers of English are used to a stress accent, it is customary to pronounce all accented syllables of Greek words, whichever of the three accents they have, with a slight stress as in English.

The range of possible accentuation of Greek words is strictly limited by the following rules:

General rule for Greek accents: No matter how many syllables a word may have, the accent can appear only over one of the last three syllables.

The final syllable is called the ultima (from the Latin for "last") and is abbreviated "u." The next-to-last syllable is called the penult (from the Latin for "almost last") and is abbreviated "p." The third syllable from the end is called the antepenult (from the Latin for "before the next-to-last") and is abbreviated "a."

Rules for ACUTE accent: appears over the ultima, the penult, and the antepenult.

appears over short vowels or long vowels or diphthongs.

Restrictions:

CAN appear over the ultima ONLY when a pause follows, i.e., at the end of a sentence or before a comma or semicolon.

CANNOT appear over the penult when it is accented and contains a long vowel or diphthong and the ultima contains a short vowel.

CAN appear over the antepenult ONLY when the ultima contains a short vowel.

Rules for GRAVE accent: appears ONLY over the ultima.

appears over short vowels or long vowels or diphthongs.

Restrictions:

MUST replace an acute accent over the ultima when another word follows directly without a pause.

CANNOT appear otherwise.

Rules for CIRCUMFLEX accent: appears ONLY over the ultima and the penult.

appears ONLY over long vowels or diphthongs.

Restrictions:

MUST appear over the penult when the penult is accented and contains a long vowel or diphthong and the ultima contains a short vowel.

CANNOT appear over the penult when the ultima contains a long vowel or diphthong.

Accents are placed directly over vowels, and over the second letter of diphthongs.

Ἑλένη, Εἰλείθυια, δρᾶμα, ψεῦδος

When an acute or grave accent and a breathing appear over the same syllable, the breathing is written first.

ἄνθρωπος, ὕμνος, ὅν

When a circumflex accent and a breathing appear over the same syllable, the breathing is written under the circumflex.

ἧτα

Accents, like breathings, are written before capitalized vowels, including vowels followed by iota adscript, but over the second letter of diphthongs whose first letter is capitalized.

Ὅμηρος, Ἦτα, Αἵρεσις, Ἅιδης

Since the circumflex accent is written only over long vowels or diphthongs, the macron is not written over long alpha, iota, or upsilon when these letters have circumflex accents over them. Contrast δρᾶμα and δημοκρατίᾱ; both the circumflex accent and the macron indicate that the alpha over which they appear is long.

POSSIBILITIES OF ACCENT

(1) -a-p-ú + pause
(2) -a-p-ù + word without a pause
(3) -a-p̂-u BUT NOT -a-p̂-ŭ
(4) -á-p-ŭ
(5) -a-p-ū̃
(6) -a-p̂-ŭ MUST, if -p̄- is accented
         BUT never -p̂-, if -ū

⏑ = short vowel

– = long vowel or diphthong

Not marked = short vowel, long vowel, or diphthong

11. RECESSIVE ACCENT

The accent of a word is said to be recessive when it goes back from the end of the word as far as allowed by the rules for the possibilities of accent. Most verb forms have recessive accent.

Consider the accent on the following forms of the verb which means "stop."

(1) ἔπαυσα

The ultima contains a short vowel and thus permits the accent to go back as far as the antepenult.

(2) ἐπαύσω

The ultima contains a long vowel and thus prevents the accent from going beyond the penult. The length of the ultima also prevents the accent on the penult from being a circumflex.

(3) παῦσον

The accent has to be on the penult. It contains a diphthong, and the ultima has a short vowel. The accent must be a circumflex on the penult.

(4) παύσῃ

The accent has to be on the penult. Although the penult contains a diphthong, the ultima contains a long vowel, which prevents the accent from being a circumflex; it must be an acute.

Thus, to accent a word of three or more syllables which has recessive accent, check the ultima. If it contains a short vowel, the word has an acute accent on the antepenult. If the ultima contains a long vowel or a diphthong, the accent will be an acute on the penult. Contrast the verb forms παίδευε and παιδεύει.

In a two-syllable word which has recessive accent, the accent must be on the penult and is an acute or a circumflex depending on the length of the vowels in both the penult and the ultima. To accent such a word, check the penult first. If it contains a short vowel, the accent must be an acute, since the circumflex cannot appear over a short vowel: μένε. If the penult contains a long vowel or a diphthong, check the length of the vowel in the ultima. If the ultima contains a short vowel, the accent is a circumflex; if the ultima contains a long vowel or a diphthong, the accent is an acute: μεῖνον, μείνῃς.

Accent Drill I, page 12, may now be done.

12. PERSISTENT ACCENT

The accent of a word is said to be persistent when it tries to stay the same accent, over the same vowel or diphthong, in all the forms of the word unless forced by the rules for the possibilities of accent to change in nature (e.g., from circumflex to acute) or position (e.g., from antepenult to penult). Persistent accents change in nature, exhausting all possibilities for remaining on the same syllable, before changing in position. The accent on most noun forms is persistent and is learned as part of the vocabulary.

Observe carefully the accents on the following set of words, the original accent of which is given by the first form.

    (1) βιβλίον, βιβλίον

The accent is given by the first form. (The rules for the possibilities of accent would have allowed the word also to be pronounced with the accent on the antepenult or the ultima, but we know from the manuscript tradition that the word was accented on the penult.) In βιβλίον, even though the ultima now contains a diphthong, no change of accent is necessary; the accent stays the same as in the first form.

    (2) ἄνθρωπος, ἀνθρώπου

The accent can appear on the antepenult of ἄνθρωπος because the ultima contains a short vowel. In ἀνθρώπου the ultima contains a diphthong, and so the acute accent cannot remain over the α of the antepenult; it is forced to move to the ω of the penult.

    (3) νῆσος, νήσου

The accent of νῆσος is on the penult, which contains a long vowel, and the ultima has a short vowel; the accent must be a circumflex. In νήσου the ultima contains a diphthong, and so the accent cannot remain a circumflex over the η; it changes to an acute.

    (4) δρᾶμα, δράματος, δραμάτων

The accent of δρᾶμα would like to stay over the initial α. In δρᾶμα the initial α is in the penult, which contains a long vowel while the ultima has a short vowel; the accent must be a circumflex. In δράματος the initial α is now in the antepenult; the accent cannot remain a circumflex but changes to an acute. In δραμάτων the ultima now contains a long vowel; the accent cannot remain on the antepenult but moves to the penult.

Accent Drill II, pages 12 -13, may now be done.

13. NOUNS: OVERVIEW

Greek nouns have gender, number, and case.

1. GENDER

All Greek nouns are considered to be of masculine, feminine, or neuter gender. Gender in Greek is a grammatical category and is not identical with sex. Usually, however, words that refer to living beings of the male sex are of masculine gender, and those which refer to living beings of the female sex are of feminine gender. Nouns which in English are neuter, i.e., those referring to non-living things without sex, are in Greek of the masculine, feminine, or neuter (grammatical) gender. Thus, $\lambda\acute{o}\gamma o\varsigma$, "word," is of masculine gender; $\tau\acute{\epsilon}\chi\nu\eta$, "art," is of feminine gender; and $\acute{\epsilon}\rho\gamma o\nu$, "work," is of neuter gender. In memorizing the vocabulary, the gender of each word must be learned separately; it cannot be guessed. Gender will be indicated in the vocabulary lists by the appropriate form of the definite article "the": $\acute{o}$ for masculine nouns, $\acute{\eta}$ for feminine nouns, and $\tau\acute{o}$ for neuter nouns.

2. NUMBER

By number is meant whether a noun is singular (one) or plural (more than one). In addition to the singular and the plural, Greek has another number, the dual, for things thought of as pairs. (The dual is relatively rare; its forms will be found in the Appendix.)

3. CASE

The case of a Greek noun indicates its grammatical relation to the rest of the sentence, e.g., subject, direct object. Each Greek noun can be divided into two parts: a stem, which shows the dictionary meaning of the word, and an ending, which shows the noun's number and case. The various relations a noun can have to the other words of a sentence are shown by changes in the endings. Changing the ending of a word to convey different information is called inflection, and a language which uses this device is said to be inflected. The inflection of a noun is called its declension, and nouns are said to be declined. The inflection of a verb is called its conjugation, and verbs are said to be conjugated.

Modern English shows grammatical relations by word order or by the use of prepositions. For example, the subject usually comes before the verb and the direct object after it; the indirect object can be indicated by word order or by a preposition.

> The girl gives the boy the rose.
> The girl gives the rose to the boy.

In these two sentences, girl is the subject, rose is the direct object, and boy or to the boy is the indirect object.

English has only a few traces of inflection left, e.g., man/man's, where the -'s is used to show possession; he/his/him, where he can only be the subject of a verb, his shows possession, and him can only be the object of a verb or preposition. In English, however, even where inflection is still used, word order is still usually essential to show the relations among the words. In Greek, inflection alone can show the relation among the words of a sentence.

Greek nouns have five cases: nominative, genitive, dative, accusative, and vocative; each case puts the noun in one of a possible number of relations to the rest of the words in the sentence.

4. THE GREEK CASE SYSTEM

In Indo-European, the language from which both Greek and English developed, there were eight cases, each noun having various endings in the singular or plural to show different relations to the rest of the sentence. The Greek noun lost three of the eight original Indo-European cases and redistributed the functions of the three lost cases among the remaining five. Thus, some of the Greek cases have more than one basic function.

The Greek cases and their functions are as follows:

(1) NOMINATIVE CASE: used as the subject of a sentence and as the predicate nominative with linking verbs like "am," and when one wishes to state the name of a thing.

(2) GENITIVE CASE: (a) used to make one noun limit or depend upon another. The relation between the two nouns can usually be shown by the English preposition of when it is used as it is in the phrases "a man of courage," "a building of glass and steel," or "the father of the boy." (Note that of when it equals about as in "Let us speak of cabbages and kings" is NOT the equivalent of a Greek genitive.)

(b) also used to indicate motion away from or separation, the idea expressed by such English prepositions as away from or out of.

Thus, the genitive case has two separate basic functions.

(3) DATIVE CASE: (a) used to show someone or something other than the subject or the direct object of the sentence affected by or interested in an action or a state of being. The relation of this kind of dative to the rest of the sentence can usually be shown by the English prepositions to or for as they are used in the sentences "The boy gives the rose to the girl" or "This is good for the man." (Note that the English preposition to when indicating motion to is NOT the equivalent of a Greek dative.)

(b) also used to show instrumentality, i.e., the means by which one does something, or accompaniment, the ideas conveyed by the English prepositions by and with when they are used as they are in the phrases "hit by a bat," "written with a pen," or "together with my brother."

(c) also used to show place where or time when, the idea conveyed by the English prepositions at or in.

Thus, the dative case has three separate basic functions.

(4) ACCUSATIVE CASE: used as the direct object of verbs, or to convey the idea of motion toward or length of space or of time.

(5) VOCATIVE CASE: used to show that the noun is being addressed directly, e.g., "John, I like Mary."

SUMMARY OF GREEK CASES

> (1) NOMINATIVE: subject, predicate nominative, naming things
> (2) GENITIVE: of; away from/out of
> (3) DATIVE: to/for; by/with; in/at > (4) ACCUSATIVE: direct object, motion toward, or length of space or time
> (5) VOCATIVE: shows that a noun is being addressed directly

At times, the case alone can express the relation of the noun to the rest of the sentence, e.g., when the dative shows instrumentality (by/with), no preposition is used in Greek. At other times, a preposition is used with the case, e.g., the dative showing place where usually needs the preposition ἐν, "in."

The following diagram shows the relation between the nominative, accusative, and dative cases in a simple sentence with a transitive verb:

┌NOMINATIVE────verb───→ ACCUSATIVE┐   DATIVE
└Subject                 Direct Object ┘  Interested Party
   The girl        gives    the rose        to  the  boy.
   The boy         does     this            for  his  father.
In both these English sentences, the relation of each of the nouns to the rest of the sentence is shown by word order and prepositions. In Greek all of these relations would be shown by the endings. The same grammatical relations could be expressed by the endings with the words in different order and the different word order would show different emphasis.

The accusative, genitive, and dative cases can indicate movement or lack of movement in space and time. The accusative shows motion toward a place; the genitive, motion away from a place; and the dative, the absence of motion, i.e., location in a place. Since there can be various types of motion away from or toward a place, or of location (e.g., "away from the inside of" in contrast to "away from the outside of"), prepositions are often used to specify the general notions of these cases. The following diagram represents the relations among these cases:

     ACCUSATIVE        DATIVE          GENITIVE

 motion to  →┌────────────────┐→ motion  away  from
             │                │

             │                │
             └────────────────┘
                   under
5. DECLENSIONS OF NOUNS

The vocabulary entry for each noun consists of its nominative and genitive forms, an article which indicates the noun's gender, and the English meaning of the word. Thus the vocabulary entry "τέχνη, τέχνης, ἡ ... art, skill, craft" consists of the following four items:

(1) τέχνη = nominative singular
(2) τέχνης = genitive singular
(3) ἡ = nominative feminine singular of the article, which shows that the gender of the noun is feminine
(4) the English meaning(s) of the word.

TO DECLINE ANY NOUN, TAKE THE GENITIVE SINGULAR, REMOVE THE GENITIVE SINGULAR ENDING TO GET THE STEM, AND THEN ADD THE PROPER SET OF ENDINGS TO THE STEM.

There are three different patterns of endings for Greek nouns, each of which is called a declension. Each noun belongs to only one declension and can have only the endings that belong to that particular declension. Those nouns most of whose endings use the vowels -η- or -ā- belong to the first declension. Those nouns most of whose endings use the vowel -o- belong to the second declension. The remaining nouns form the third declension.

14. FIRST-DECLENSION NOUNS (Nominative in -η or -ā)

Most of the nouns of the first declension end in -η or -ā in the nominative singular; -ā will be found only in nouns whose stems end in ε, ι, or ρ. All first-declension nouns ending in -η or -ā are feminine. The first-declension -η and -ā endings are:

NOMINATIVE SINGULAR	-η	-ā
GENITIVE	-ης	-ᾱς
DATIVE	-ῃ	-ᾳ
ACCUSATIVE	-ην	-ᾱν
VOCATIVE	-η	-ā
NOMINATIVE PLURAL	-αι	-αι
GENITIVE	-ῶν	-ῶν
DATIVE	-αις	-αις
ACCUSATIVE	-ᾱς	-ᾱς
VOCATIVE	-αι	-αι

Thus, to decline τέχνη, τέχνης, ἡ, "art," take the genitive singular τέχνης, remove the genitive singular ending -ης to get the stem τεχν-, and add the appropriate endings to the stem. (A model inflection of a noun or a verb, such as that of τέχνη given below, is called a paradigm.)

NOMINATIVE SINGULAR	τέχνη	(an) art as subject, predicate nominative
GENITIVE	τέχνης	of (an) art; from (an) art (with the preposition ἐκ, "from")
DATIVE	τέχνῃ	to/for (an) art; by/with (an) art; in (an) art (with the preposition ἐν, "in")
ACCUSATIVE	τέχνην	(an) art as direct object, object of certain prepositions
VOCATIVE	τέχνη	art being addressed directly
NOMINATIVE PLURAL	τέχναι	arts as subject, predicate nominative
GENITIVE	τεχνῶν	of arts; from arts (with the preposition ἐκ, "from")
DATIVE	τέχναις	to/for arts; by/with arts; in arts (with the preposition ἐν, "in")
ACCUSATIVE	τέχνᾱς	arts as direct object, object of certain prepositions
VOCATIVE	τέχναι	arts being addressed directly

Observations: (1) Greek does not have an indefinite article like the English "a, an." Such an indefinite article must occasionally be supplied in an English translation.

(2) THE ACCENT OF NOUNS IS AS A RULE PERSISTENT. Thus, the accent of τέχνη is given by the nominative singular and stays on the -ε- of the penult except in the genitive plural, which is an exception to the rule. THE GENITIVE PLURAL OF ALL FIRST-DECLENSION NOUNS IS -ῶν WITH A CIRCUMFLEX ACCENT ON THE ULTIMA. Whenever the accent on an ending violates the rules for persistent or recessive accent, the accent will be indicated on the ending when it is first given (cf. -ῶν on page 21).

Compare the declension of τέχνη with that of χώρᾱ, χώρᾱς, ἡ, "land." Note the use of abbreviations for the names of the cases and for singular and plural. Note also that when the vocative is the same as the nominative it will be given with the nominative. THE VOCATIVE IS THE SAME AS THE NOMINATIVE IN THE PLURAL OF ALL NOUNS.

Nom./Voc. S	τέχνη	χώρᾱ
Gen.	τέχνης	χώρᾱς
Dat.	τέχνῃ	χώρᾳ
Acc.	τέχνην	χώρᾱν
Nom./Voc. P	τέχναι	χῶραι
Gen.	τεχνῶν	χωρῶν
Dat.	τέχναις	χώραις
Acc.	τέχνᾱς	χώρᾱς

Observations: (1) There is no difference in meaning between first-declension nouns ending in -η and those in -ᾱ. Originally, all such nouns ended in -ᾱ. In Attic Greek, this -ᾱ changed to -η except after ε, ι, or ρ.

(2) Note that the form χώρᾱς can be either genitive singular or accusative plural. Context usually allows one to distinguish the two cases.

(3) First-declension nouns differ only in the singular. ALL FIRST-DECLENSION NOUNS FOLLOW THE SAME PATTERN IN THE PLURAL.

(4) THE DIPHTHONG -αι WHEN FINAL (AT THE END OF A WORD) COUNTS AS A SHORT VOWEL FOR PURPOSES OF ACCENTUA-TION. Hence in the nominative plural χῶραι the accent changes from an acute to a circumflex, since the penult is accented and contains a long vowel, and the diphthong of the ultima counts as short for purposes of accentuation.

(5) Once again, note that, as with all first-declension nouns, the genitive plural ending is -ῶν with a circumflex accent on the ultima.

WHEN A FIRST-DECLENSION NOUN HAS AN ACUTE ACCENT ON THE ULTIMA
IN THE NOMINATIVE, THE ACCENT IS CHANGED TO A CIRCUMFLEX IN THE GENITIVE AND DATIVE, IN BOTH THE SINGULAR AND THE PLURAL. Compare the declension of ψῡχή, ψῡχῆς, ἡ, "soul," and ἀγορά, ἀγορᾶς, ἡ, "market place," with those of the words learned thus far.

Nom./Voc. S	τέχνη	ψῡχή	χώρᾱ	ἀγορά
Gen.	τέχνης	ψῡχῆς	χώρᾱς	ἀγορᾶς
Dat.	τέχνῃ	ψῡχῇ	χώρᾳ	ἀγορᾷ
Acc.	τέχνην	ψῡχήν	χώρᾱν	ἀγοράν
Nom./Voc. P	τέχναι	ψῡχαί	χῶραι	ἀγοραί
Gen.	τεχνῶν	ψῡχῶν	χωρῶν	ἀγορῶν
Dat.	τέχναις	ψῡχαῖς	χώραις	ἀγοραῖς
Acc.	τέχνᾱς	ψῡχᾱ́ς	χώρᾱς	ἀγορᾱ́ς

Drill I.1–10, page 34, may now be done.

15. SECOND-DECLENSION NOUNS

Nouns of the second declension have either the nominative singular ending -ος for masculine and (more rarely) feminine nouns, or -ον for the neuter. The endings for the second declension are:

	Masculine/Feminine	Neuter
Nom. S	-ος	-ον
Gen.	-ου	-ου
Dat.	-ῳ	-ῳ
Acc.	-ον	-ον
Voc.	-ε	-ον
Nom./Voc. P	-οι	-α
Gen.	-ων	-ων
Dat.	-οις	-οις
Acc.	-ους	-α

Thus, to decline λόγος, λόγου, ὁ, "word," take the genitive singular λόγου, remove the genitive singular ending -ου to get the stem λογ-, and add the masculine/feminine declension endings to get:

Nom. S   λόγος   (a) word as subject, predicate nominative

Gen.   λόγου   of (a) word; from a word (with the preposition ἐκ, "from")

Dat.   λόγῳ   to/for (a) word; by/with (a) word; in (a) word (with the preposition ἐν, "in")

Acc.   λόγον   (a) word as direct object, object of certain prepositions

Voc.   λόγε   word being addressed directly

Nom./Voc. P   λόγοι   words as subject, predicate nominative, or being addressed directly

Gen.   λόγων   of words; from words (with the preposition ἐκ, "from")

Dat.   λόγοις   to/for words; by/with words; in words (with the preposition ἐν, "in")

Acc.   λόγους   words as direct object, object of certain prepositions

Observations: (1) The vocative singular has a form different from that of the nominative singular. In the plural, as in all nouns, the nominative and the vocative are the same.

(2) Note that the accent in the genitive plural does NOT shift to a circumflex on the ultima as in the first declension.

To decline the neuter noun ἔργον, ἔργου, τό, "work," take the genitive singular ἔργου, drop the genitive singular ending -ου to get the stem ἐργ-, and add the neuter declension endings to the stem to get:

Nom./Voc. S   ἔργον   (a) work as subject, predicate nominative, or being addressed directly

Gen.   ἔργου   of (a) work; from (a) work (with the preposition ἐκ, "from")

Dat.   ἔργῳ   to/for (a) work; by/with (a) work; in (a) work (with the preposition ἐν, "in")

Acc.   ἔργον   (a) work as direct object, object of certain prepositions

Nom./Voc. P   ἔργα   works as subject, predicate nominative, or being addressed directly

Gen.   ἔργων   of works; from works (with the preposition ἐκ, "from")

Dat.   ἔργοις   to/for works; by/with works; in works (with the preposition ἐν, "in")

Acc.   ἔργα   works as direct object, object of certain prepositions

Observations: (1) IN ALL NEUTER NOUNS, THE ACCUSATIVE AND THE VOCATIVE ARE THE SAME AS THE NOMINATIVE, BOTH IN THE SINGULAR AND IN THE PLURAL.

(2) THE NOMINATIVE/VOCATIVE AND ACCUSATIVE PLURAL ENDING OF ALL NEUTER NOUNS IS -α.

The paradigms of the second-declension nouns given above are uncomplicated by questions of accentuation. To see how inflection can affect accent, compare the declension of λόγος with that of the following second-declension nouns:

> ἄνθρωπος, ἀνθρώπου, ὁ   man > ἀδελφός, ἀδελφοῦ, ὁ   brother > νῆσος, νήσου, ἡ   island
> δῶρον, δώρου, τό   gift

Nom. S	λόγος	ἄνθρωπος	ἀδελφός	νῆσος	δῶρον
Gen.	λόγου	ἀνθρώπου	ἀδελφοῦ	νήσου	δώρου
Dat.	λόγῳ	ἀνθρώπῳ	ἀδελφῷ	νήσῳ	δώρῳ
Acc.	λόγον	ἄνθρωπον	ἀδελφόν	νῆσον	δῶρον
Voc.	λόγε	ἄνθρωπε	ἄδελφε	νῆσε	δῶρον
Nom./Voc. P	λόγοι	ἄνθρωποι	ἀδελφοί	νῆσοι	δῶρα
Gen.	λόγων	ἀνθρώπων	ἀδελφῶν	νήσων	δώρων
Dat.	λόγοις	ἀνθρώποις	ἀδελφοῖς	νήσοις	δώροις
Acc.	λόγους	ἀνθρώπους	ἀδελφούς	νήσους	δῶρα

Observations: (1) The accent of nouns is by rule persistent and is given by the nominative singular. Thus, in ἄνθρωπον, the accusative singular of ἄνθρωπος, the accent is the same as that on the nominative, since the ending -ον contains a short vowel which allows the accent to remain on the antepenult. In those endings which contain a long vowel or diphthong, the accent cannot remain on the antepenult but must move to the penult.

(2) Just as the diphthong -αι when final counts as a short vowel for purposes of accentuation (cf. the first-declension nominative plural χῶραι), so too THE DIPHTHONG -οι WHEN FINAL ALSO COUNTS AS SHORT FOR PURPOSES OF ACCENTUATION.
This allows the accent to remain an acute on the antepenult in the nominative plural ἄνθρωποι.

(3) As in the first declension, WHEN A SECOND-DECLENSION NOUN HAS AN ACUTE ACCENT ON THE ULTIMA IN THE NOMINATIVE SINGULAR, THE ACCENT IS CHANGED TO A CIRCUMFLEX IN THE GENITIVE AND THE DATIVE, BOTH IN THE SINGULAR AND IN THE PLURAL. The change in accent from ἀδελφός to ἀδελφοῦ is similar to the change in accent from ψῡχή to ψῡχῆς in the first declension.

(4) The accent on the vocative singular ἄδελφε is an exception which must be learned separately. Other words, however, of the second declension which accent the ultima of the nominative do keep the accent on the ultima in the vocative (cf. ὁδέ, the vocative singular of ὁδός, ὁδοῦ, ἡ, "road, way").

(5) The changing accents on νῆσος and δῶρον are governed by the rules for circumflex accent. In the nominative singular of both nouns, the penult is accented and contains a long vowel while the ultima contains a short vowel; the circumflex accent is thus required. Whenever the ending contains a long vowel or a diphthong, the accent cannot remain a circumflex on the penult, but must change to an acute (e.g., νήσου, νήσῳ, δώροις). Remember that the diphthong -οι when final counts as short for purposes of accentuation; hence the circumflex accent on the nominative/vocative plural νῆσοι.

Drills I.11–25 and II, pages 34–35, may now be done.

16. THE ARTICLE

1. DECLENSION

Greek has an article which is roughly equivalent to the English article "the." The Greek article has different endings for the different genders, numbers, and cases. (In the paradigm which follows note the abbreviations M, F, and N for masculine, feminine, and neuter.)

	M	F	N
Nom. S	ὁ	ἡ	τό
Gen.	τοῦ	τῆς	τοῦ
Dat.	τῷ	τῇ	τῷ
Acc.	τόν	τήν	τό
Nom. P	οἱ	αἱ	τά
Gen.	τῶν	τῶν	τῶν
Dat.	τοῖς	ταῖς	τοῖς
Acc.	τούς	τάς	τά

Observations: (1) The similarity of the endings of the article to those of the nouns of the first and second declensions should be obvious. Note, however, the absence of the final -ς in the masculine singular nominative and the absence of final -ν in the neuter singular nominative and accusative.

(2) The masculine and feminine nominative, both singular and plural, have neither the initial τ- which appears in the rest of the forms nor an accent. Such words without accents, which are pronounced closely with the following word, are called proclitics.

(3) Note the change in accent from an acute to a circumflex in the genitive and dative, both singular and plural.

2. AGREEMENT OF ARTICLE AND NOUN

The article agrees with the noun it modifies in gender, number, and case. This agreement is grammatical; any external identity of ending is merely coincidental. Thus in the phrase τοὺς ἀνθρώπους the article and the noun have the same gender (masculine), number (plural), and case (accusative) and have endings that look identical. Yet in the phrase τὰς νήσους the article and the noun also agree in gender (feminine), number (plural), and case (accusative), although the endings do not look identical.

Drill III, page 35, may now be done.

3. ATTRIBUTIVE POSITION

Any words which limit or depend upon a noun (e.g., genitives, prepositional phrases, and adjectives) and which are preceded by an article which agrees in gender, number, and case with that noun are said to be in the attributive position. There are three varieties of attributive position.

(1) Words in the attributive position can appear between the article and the noun with which it agrees:

     (a) οἱ τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ λόγοι   the words of the brother

     (b) οἱ ἐν τῇ χώρᾳ ἀδελφοί   the brothers in the country

(2) Sometimes the article is repeated after the noun and the words in the attributive position follow the repeated article:

     (c) οἱ λόγοι οἱ τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ   the words of the brother

     (d) οἱ ἀδελφοὶ οἱ ἐν τῇ χώρᾳ   the brothers in the country

When the article is repeated and the words in the attributive position follow it, greater emphasis is placed on the noun, and the words in the attributive position seem to come as an afterthought. To translate the last example given above as "the brothers, [I mean] the ones in the country," would be to exaggerate the effect, but it gives some idea of the difference between examples (b) and (d).

(3) Sometimes even, the article does not appear before the noun, but only after it:

     (e) λόγοι οἱ τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ   words, the ones of the brother

     (f) ἀδελφοὶ οἱ ἐν τῇ χώρᾳ   brothers, the ones in the country

In the last two examples the words in the attributive position are even more of an afterthought.

The genitive showing possession usually appears in the attributive position but may appear outside of it.

4. USE OF THE ARTICLE

(1) The article is used in Greek to point out particular individuals:

     ὁ ἀδελφός   the brother

     τοῖς ἀνθρώποις   for the men (particular men)

(2) The article is also used with generic classes:

     τοῖς ἀνθρώποις   for men (all men)

Context will usually make clear whether the article is particular or generic.

(3) The article is used with abstract nouns:

     ἡ ἀρετή   virtue

                   (The article with abstract nouns is sometimes omitted in Greek as it always is in English.)

(4) The article can be used with names of persons famous or previously mentioned:

ὁ Ὅμηρος   Homer

(5) Where the context makes it clear, the article can be used where English uses the possessive pronoun:

ὁ Ὅμηρος παιδεύει τὸν ἀδελφόν.
Homer educates his brother.

ὁ Ὅμηρος δῶρα τῷ ἀδελφῷ πέμπει.
Homer sends gifts to his brother.

(6) The article is often not used in Greek with words that refer to something unique and well known:

ἐν ἀγορᾷ   in the market place   (There was only one main market place in Athens.)

Note: in the two sentences given above in (5), there are two verb forms which will be used to make sentences in the Drills and Exercises of this Unit: παιδεύει, "educates," and πέμπει, "sends." These verb forms will be fully explained in Unit 2.

17. WORD ORDER

The basic grammatical relations of subject, verb, and direct object are shown in Greek by the inflection of nouns and verbs. Word order is free to express emphasis, contrast, balance, and variety. Much of this can be seen only in the context of whole paragraphs. Consider, however, the following variations on the idea "Homer educates his brother."

(a) ὁ Ὅμηρος τὸν ἀδελφὸν παιδεύει.
(b) παιδεύει ὁ Ὅμηρος τὸν ἀδελφόν.
(c) τὸν ἀδελφὸν ὁ Ὅμηρος παιδεύει.

The first example can be considered neutral word order. The subject more often than not does precede the verb, as does the direct object. The second example puts greater emphasis on the verb; it would be a good answer to the question, "What does Homer do?" "Homer educates his brother." The third example puts emphasis on the direct object; it would be a good answer to the question, "Whom does Homer educate?" "Homer educates his brother." "It is his brother Homer educates."

Drill IV, pages 35–36, may now be done.

VOCABULARY NOTES

The word ἀγορά, ἀγορᾶς, ἡ designated a good deal more than just a "market place"; it was a combination of shopping center, civic center, and cultural center.

In ἀδελφός, ἀδελφοῦ, ὁ, "brother," note the shift in accent in the vocative singular: ἄδελφε.

ἄνθρωπος, ἀνθρώπου, ὁ generally means "man" as opposed to a god or an animal; hence the second meaning given, "human being."

Not all δῶρα (nom./acc./voc. plural of δῶρον, δώρου, τό, "gift") were, of course, bribes; but in a political or legal context, this is a frequent meaning of the word.

The prepositions εἰς, ἐκ, and ἐν are proclitics, as are the forms ὁ, ἡ, οἱ and αἱ of the definite article. These three prepositions fit the diagram on page 20 which illustrates the relations among the cases when they indicate movement or lack of movement:

εἰς   ἐν   ἐκ

into ————————→   in ————————→   out of

to ————————→   ————→   from
Before words beginning with a consonant, ἐκ is used; ἐξ is used before words beginning with a vowel or diphthong: ἐκ τῆς οἰκίας but ἐξ ἀγορᾶς.

When used with νῆσος, νήσου, ἡ, "island," ἐν means "on": ἐν τῇ νήσῳ, "on the island."

In addition to indicating motion toward a place, εἰς can indicate purpose, "for": "They put on their armor εἰς μάχην (for battle)."

The word θεός, θεοῦ, ὁ or ἡ can be either masculine or feminine, "god" or "goddess." Assume that the word is masculine unless feminine gender is indicated by a word that agrees with it, e.g., τῆς θεοῦ, "of the goddess."

When καί connects two words, phrases, clauses, or sentences, it is a conjunction and means "and": Ὅμηρος καὶ ὁ ἀδελφός, "Homer and his brother." When καί is used with only one item, it is an adverb and means "even" or "also": καὶ Ὅμηρος, "even/also Homer." In καί . . . καί, the first καί is translated as "both" and the second by "and": καὶ Ὅμηρος καὶ ὁ ἀδελφός, "both Homer and his brother."

Of the many possible English translations of λόγος, λόγου, ὁ, only a few are given here. The word is a verbal noun related to the verb for "say" and can mean "anything one says" from an individual word (actually a fairly rare meaning of the word) to a whole speech or story. Among other additional meanings are "account" (both in the sense of "narrative" and "accounting") and "reason" (both as "explanation or justification" and as "the faculty with which one decides something").

Note the feminine gender of νῆσος, νήσου, ἡ, "island," and ὁδός, ὁδοῦ, ἡ, "road"; most second-declension nouns are masculine.

The forms of the article ὁ, ἡ, οἱ and αἱ are proclitics; for the use of the article, see Section 16.4, pages 29–30.

The verb παιδεύει is a denominative, i.e., it is formed from a noun stem by the addition of a suffix. The noun in question is the noun for "child," and παιδεύει means doing what one does to a child, "educates, teaches."

τέχνη, τέχνης, ἡ ranges from the "skill, craft" of a plumber to the "art" of a Michelangelo; it is essentially the "knowing how to do something."

χώρᾱ, χώρᾱς, ἡ can mean anything from "space" or "spot" to "land, country." As "country," the word has the sense of "country" as nation or "country" as opposed to city.

ψῡχή, ψῡχῆς, ἡ means "soul" as vital principle (= life) or as personality.

The interjection ὦ is the normally polite way of attracting the attention of someone addressed in the vocative case; it should not be translated. When it is absent in Greek prose, "o" should be supplied in English.

COGNATES AND DERIVATIVES

English has many words which are related to Greek words. Those words which developed in both languages from a common ancestor (e.g., "father," πατήρ) are called cognates. Those words that English borrowed from Greek either directly, or through Latin, or by using Greek roots to make a new English word are called derivatives. Knowing cognates and derivatives can aid one in memorizing Greek vocabulary. Cognates will be listed in italics.

In the list of words which follows, note how the Greek letters have been adapted to English.

UNIT

18. VERBS: OVERVIEW

The Greek verb, like the Greek noun, is inflected: just as nouns add endings to a stem in order to produce different case forms, so do verbs add endings to various stems in order to produce the various possible forms. A noun has a declension and is declined; a verb has a conjugation and is conjugated.

Most verb forms have:

> (1) PERSON
> (2) NUMBER
> (3) TENSE (which can show TIME and ASPECT)
> (4) MOOD
> (5) VOICE

1. PERSON

A verb is in the first person if the subject is "I" or "we," the second person if the subject is "you," and the third person if the subject is "he," "she," "it," "they," "the man," "the men," etc.

2. NUMBER

Verbs which have person are either singular, when the subject is a single person or thing ("I," "you," "he," "she," "it," "Homer," etc.), or plural, when the subject is more than one person or thing ("we," "you," "they," "the men," etc.).

Originally Greek verbs, like Greek nouns, had another number, the dual, which indicated a pair of subjects. The dual is rare in Attic Greek; its forms are given in the Appendix.

3. TENSE

Tense ALWAYS conveys information about aspect and SOMETIMES conveys information about aspect and time.

(1) TIME

Time is present, past, or future. Cf. the English sentences "I fall," "I fell," "I shall fall."

(2) ASPECT

Aspect indicates how the occurrence of the action is viewed: whether the action simply occurs, is in progress, is repeated, or is already completed. The following English sentences will illustrate this.

> (1) We fell.
> (2) We were falling.
> (3) We used to fall.
> (4) We had fallen.

These verbal expressions are the same in person (first), number (plural), and time (past). They differ only in aspect.

The verb in sentence (1) presents the action plainly and simply and has simple aspect; the verb in sentence (2) presents the action as being in progress and has progressive aspect; the verb in sentence (3) presents the action as repeated or habitual and has repeated aspect; the verb in sentence (4) presents the action as already completed and has completed aspect.

Greek verbs express both progressive and repeated aspect by a single form. Thus Greek verbs have the following three aspects:

> simple aspect > progressive/repeated aspect > completed aspect

Verb forms having progressive/repeated aspect must be translated, according to context, either as having progressive aspect or as having repeated aspect.

In the indicative mood (the mood of factual statements and questions: see Section 18. 4[1] below) the tense of a Greek verb expresses a certain combination of time and aspect.

Greek has seven tenses in the indicative mood:

(1) The present tense describes an action in present time with progressive/repeated aspect ("I am falling"; "I fall [habitually]").

(2) The future tense describes an action in future time and can have either simple aspect ("I shall fall") or progressive/repeated aspect ("I shall be falling"; "I shall fall [habitually]").

(3) The perfect tense, whose name comes from the Latin word for "completed," describes an action in present time and always has completed aspect ("I have fallen").

(4) The pluperfect tense, whose name comes from the Latin expression for "more than completed," and which is also called the past perfect tense, describes an action in past time and always has completed aspect ("I had fallen").

> The difference in time between the perfect tense and the pluperfect tense is emphasized by the adverbs in the following examples:
> "I have now fallen" (present time).
> "I had then fallen" (past time).

(5) The future perfect tense describes an action in future time and always has completed aspect ("I shall have fallen"). This tense is rare in Greek and is not given in this text.

(6) The imperfect tense, whose name comes from the Latin word for "un-completed," describes an action in past time and always has progressive/repeated aspect ("I was falling"; "I used to fall," "I fell [habitually]").

(7) The aorist tense describes an action in past time and always has simple aspect ("I fell"). It describes an event which happens once and for all.

The chart below shows how these tenses express the possible combinations of time and aspect. The meanings of the tenses are given by the English verb "fall."

	SIMPLE ASPECT	PROGRESSIVE / REPEATED ASPECT	COMPLETED ASPECT
PRESENT TIME		PRESENT TENSE I am falling I fall (habitually)	PERFECT TENSE I have fallen
PAST TIME	AORIST TENSE I fell	IMPERFECT TENSE I was falling I used to fall I fell (habitually)	PLUPERFECT TENSE I had fallen
FUTURE TIME	FUTURE TENSE I shall fall	FUTURE TENSE I shall be falling I shall fall (habitually)	FUTURE PER-FECT TENSE I shall have fallen

Note that the future tense can express both simple aspect and progressive/repeated aspect. The context will help to determine the appropriate translation.

Note also that in English the translation of Greek verbs with simple aspect and repeated aspect can be the same: "I fell," for example, can mean that I fell on one occasion (simple aspect) or that I fell habitually (repeated aspect). Contrast the sentences "I fell at 2:15 p.m. yesterday" and "I fell every time I walked on the ice": Greek requires an aorist for the verb of the first, an imperfect for the verb of the second. By itself the English "I fell" is ambiguous, but the Greek forms are not. One must take special care when translating such English expressions into Greek.

Those tenses which, in the indicative mood, describe actions in present time or future time are called primary tenses. These are the present, future, perfect, and future perfect tenses (the top and bottom lines of the chart).

Those tenses which, in the indicative mood, describe actions in past time are called secondary tenses. These are the aorist, imperfect, and pluperfect tenses (the middle line of the chart).

In the indicative mood, the secondary tenses of the verb, those which express past time, receive the past indicative augment. This consists of the vowel $\acute{e}$- prefixed to the appropriate stem where that stem begins with a consonant. The past indicative augment is the sign of a factual statement or question in past time.

Drill I, page 58, may now be done.

4. MOOD

Mood indicates the type of statement which one is making: factual, hypothetical, wishful, commanding, and so forth. The Greek verb has four moods: indicative, subjunctive, optative, and imperative.

(1) THE INDICATIVE MOOD

The indicative mood is the mood of factual statements and factual questions. The verb forms encountered so far are in the indicative mood.

(2) THE SUBJUNCTIVE MOOD

Unlike verbs in the indicative mood, verbs in the subjunctive mood cannot be translated according to any fixed formula. Their meaning varies considerably with the type of clause or sentence in which they appear.

The following English expressions will give an idea of the range of meanings which Greek verbs in the subjunctive mood can have.

> If we see . . .
> . . . in order that we may see . . .
> Let us see !

The subjunctive mood will be introduced in Section 31.

(3) THE OPTATIVE MOOD

Like verbs in the subjunctive mood, verbs in the optative mood cannot be translated according to any fixed formula.

The following English expressions will give an idea of the range of meanings which Greek verbs in the optative mood can have.

> If we should see . . .
> We might see . . .
> May we always see the truth !

The optative mood will be introduced in Section 31.

(4) THE IMPERATIVE MOOD

Verbs in the imperative mood give a command.

> Look ! See !

The imperative mood will be introduced in Section 89.

5. VOICE

Voice defines the way in which the subject of the verb is involved in the action of the verb. The subject can be performing the action (active voice), receiving the action from some outside agency (passive voice), or (in Greek) performing the action with a special personal involvement (middle voice).

(1) THE ACTIVE VOICE

When a verb is in the active voice the subject performs the action indicated.

> The man walks down the street.

When no direct object of the action is specified, a verb in the active voice is intransitive.

> Homer educates.

When a direct object is specified, a verb in the active voice is transitive.

> Homer educates his brother.

(2) THE PASSIVE VOICE

When a verb is in the passive voice the subject receives the action indicated.

> Homer is educated by his brother.

The passive voice will be introduced in Section 43.

(3) THE MIDDLE VOICE

Greek also has a middle voice. Like the active voice, the middle voice indicates that the subject performs the action. But the subject has a special interest in the action; the action somehow returns to the subject.

The nuance added by the middle voice varies from verb to verb and cannot be translated by any fixed formula. Greek would employ the middle voice, for example, to indicate that Homer, instead of merely performing the act of educating his brother (active voice), was doing so for an ulterior motive of his own, or that Homer, instead of personally educating his brother, was having someone else educate him.

The middle voice will be introduced in Section 57.

19. PRINCIPAL PARTS

The minimum number of forms which one must know in order to generate all possible forms of a verb are called the principal parts of that verb. In English there are three principal parts: e.g., sing, sang, sung; do, did, done; bake, baked, baked.

The Greek verb has six principal parts. ALL must be learned whenever a new verb is encountered. Although the principal parts of a given verb often resemble each other, no principal part can be derived from any other principal part.

From these six forms, according to rules which will be presented below and in later sections, various tense stems are derived. To these tense stems various sets of endings are added in order to produce all the possible forms of a verb.

Here are the principal parts of one Greek verb:

I.	Form:	παιδεύω
	Translation:	I am educating, I educate
	Identification:	first person singular,
		present indicative active
II.	Form:	παιδεύσω
	Translation:	I shall educate, I shall be educating
	Identification:	first person singular,
		future indicative active
III.	Form:	ἐπαίδευσα
	Translation:	I educated
	Identification:	first person singular,
		aorist indicative active
IV.	Form:	πεπαίδευκα
	Translation:	I have educated
	Identification:	first person singular,
		perfect indicative active

V.	Form:	πεπαίδευμαι
	Translation:	I have been educated
	Identification:	first person singular,
		perfect indicative passive

VI.	Form:	ἐπαιδεύθην
	Translation:	I was educated
	Identification:	first person singular,
		aorist indicative passive

All Greek verbs are named by Principal Part I. Thus the forms given above are the principal parts of the verb παιδεύω.

All verb forms are to be identified as in the list above: person, number, tense, mood, voice.

The rules for deriving tense stems from principal parts are the same for most verbs, as are the sets of endings which must be added to these tense stems.

Thus the verb παιδεύω will serve as a paradigm or example of the conjugation of many Greek verbs.

20. PRESENT INDICATIVE ACTIVE

To form the present indicative active, obtain the present tense stem by dropping the ending -ω from Principal Part I. To this stem add the following endings, which indicate person and number:

		SINGULAR (S)	PLURAL (P)
FIRST PERSON	(1)	-ω	-ομεν
SECOND PERSON	(2)	-εις	-ετε
THIRD PERSON	(3)	-ει	-ουσι or -ουσιν

Note: the letter ν, called nu-movable, may be added to certain endings of nouns and verbs when the following word begins with a vowel, or at the end of a sentence. Henceforth in paradigms this letter, which may be added to the third person plural ending above, will be indicated in parentheses thus: -ουσι(ν).

Thus the present tense stem of παιδεύω is παιδευ-, and the forms of the present indicative active are as follows:

S

1	παιδεύω	I am educating I educate
2	παιδεύεις	you are educating you educate
3	παιδεύει	he/she/it is educating he/she/it educates

1	παιδεύομεν	we are educating we educate
2	παιδεύετε	you are educating you educate
3	παιδεύουσι(ν)	they are educating they educate

While most nouns have a persistent accent, which stays over the same vowel unless the rules of the possibilities for accent force it to change its position or its nature, most verb forms have a recessive accent, which falls as far away from the end of the word as the rules of accentuation allow.

The accent on the verb forms above is recessive: παιδεύει, for example, has a long ultima and accents the penult; παιδεύομεν has a short ultima and accents the antepenult.

Note: Greek, unlike English, has separate forms for the second person singular and plural. It does not use the plural as a polite form of the singular.

21. IMPERFECT INDICATIVE ACTIVE

To form the imperfect indicative active, prefix the past indicative augment ἐ- to the present tense stem. To the augmented present tense stem add the following endings:

	S	P
1	-ον	-ομεν
2	-ες	-ετε
3	-ε(ν)	-ον

Thus the augmented present tense stem of παιδεύω is ἐπαιδευ-, and the forms of the imperfect indicative active are as follows:

S

1	ἐπαίδευον	I was educating I used to educate I educated (habitually)
2	ἐπαίδευες	you were educating you used to educate you educated (habitually)
3	ἐπαίδευε(ν)	he/she/it was educating he/she/it used to educate he/she/it educated (habitually)

1	ἐπαιδεύομεν	we were educating we used to educate we educated (habitually)
2	ἐπαιδεύετε	you were educating you used to educate you educated (habitually)
3	ἐπαίδευον	they were educating they used to educate they educated (habitually)

Observations: (1) The imperfect tense, which is built upon the present tense stem, is distinguished from the present tense both by the past indicative augment and by its different set of endings. In the first and second persons plural, however, the endings are the same in both tenses.

(2) The first person singular and third person plural of the imperfect indicative active are identical in form. Context will make the meaning clear.

(3) The third person singular ending has a nu-movable. Note that the nu of the first person singular and third person plural endings is NOT a nu-movable.

(4) Many of the endings seen so far consist of two parts: the vowel ε or o, called a thematic vowel (o before μ and ν, ε before other consonants), and a person marker (e.g., -μεν for the first person plural, -τε for the second person plural). WHEN MEMORIZING THE SETS OF ENDINGS, MEMORIZE THE THEMATIC VOWEL AND THE PERSON MARKER TOGETHER AS A UNIT.

22. FUTURE INDICATIVE ACTIVE

To form the future indicative active, obtain the future tense stem by dropping the ending -ω from Principal Part II. To this stem add the same endings as those employed in forming the present indicative active.

Thus, the future tense stem of παιδεύω is παιδευσ-, and the forms of the future indicative active are as follows:

	S
1	παιδεύσω	I shall educate
		I shall be educating
2	παιδεύσεις	you will educate
		you will be educating
3	παιδεύσει	he/she/it will educate he/she/it will be educating
	P
1	παιδεύσομεν	we shall educate we shall be educating 2	παιδεύσετε	you will educate
		you will be educating
3	παιδεύσουσι(ν)	they will educate they will be educating

Observations: (1) Only the tense stem distinguishes the future indicative active from the present indicative active: cf. παιδεύομεν (first person plural, present indicative active) and παιδεύσομεν (first person plural, future indicative active).

(2) The future tense can have either simple aspect or progressive/ repeated aspect. Thus, for example, παιδεύσομεν can mean either "we shall educate (once)" or "we shall be educating" or "we shall educate (often)."

23. AORIST INDICATIVE ACTIVE

To form the aorist indicative active, drop the ending -α from Principal Part III. There remains the aorist tense stem together with the prefixed past indicative augment. To this augmented aorist tense stem add the following endings:

1	-α	-αμεν
2	-ας	-ατε
3	-ε(ν)	-αν

Thus the augmented aorist tense stem of παιδεύω is ἐπαιδευσ-, and the forms of the aorist indicative active are as follows:

S

1	ἐπαίδευσα	I educated
2	ἐπαίδευσας	you educated
3	ἐπαίδευσε(ν)	he/she/it educated

1	ἐπαιδεύσαμεν	we educated
2	ἐπαιδεύσατε	you educated
3	ἐπαίδευσαν	they educated

Observations: (1) The aorist tense has simple aspect.

(2) Compare the endings of the aorist indicative active with those of the present and imperfect indicative active. Note that, except for the third person singular, all of the aorist indicative active endings begin with the tense vowel α instead of the thematic vowel ε/o. All of the sets of endings seen so far use the person markers -ς for the second person singular, -μεν for the first person plural, and -τε for the second person plural.

Drill II, pages 58–59, may now be done.

24. AGREEMENT OF SUBJECT AND VERB

Unlike most English verb forms, each of the Greek verb forms presented above can, without the addition of any noun or pronoun, express a complete subject and predicate: contrast the one Greek word παιδεύομεν with the two English words "we educate."

When a noun or pronoun in the nominative case accompanies the verb in order to specify more clearly or emphatically the subject, that noun or pronoun becomes the only subject and overrides the less definite information conveyed by the verb form itself.

He/She/It is educating.
He/She/It educates.

ὁ ἄνθρωπος παιδεύει.
The man is educating.
The man educates.

A SINGULAR NOUN OR PRONOUN REQUIRES A SINGULAR VERB, AND A PLURAL NOUN OR PRONOUN REQUIRES A PLURAL VERB. This is called the agreement of subject and verb.

BUT NEUTER PLURAL NOUNS TAKE SINGULAR VERBS.

οἱ ἄνθρωποι τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς παιδεύουσιν.
The men are educating their brothers.
The men educate their brothers.

τὰ τῶν θεῶν ἔργα τοὺς ἀνθρώπους παιδεύει.
The deeds of the gods are educating men.
The deeds of the gods educate men.

25. QUESTIONS

In Greek, questions are sometimes indicated only by a question mark, and sometimes also by the introductory word ἆρα, which is not separately translated.

In the English translation, the auxiliary verb "does" ("did," etc.) must often be employed.

ὁ ἄνθρωπος παιδεύει;
Is the man educating?
Does the man educate?

ἆρα ὁ ἄνθρωπος παιδεύει;
Is the man educating?
Does the man educate?

26. INFINITIVES AND THEIR USE

Verb forms having person and number are finite: they "limit" the meaning of the verb to a definite person and number. All verb forms introduced so far are finite.

The Greek verb also has non-finite forms which do not specify person or number.

One such form is the infinitive, which usually can be translated by the English infinitive (e.g., "to educate"). The infinitive lacks person, number, and mood, and has only tense and voice. Its function is to name a verbal action.

1. PRESENT INFINITIVE ACTIVE

To form the present infinitive active, add to the present tense stem the ending -ειν.

Thus the present infinitive active of παιδεύω is > παιδεύειν > to be educating > to educate (habitually)

This infinitive is in the active voice (cf. the infinitive passive "to be educated") and it is in the present tense. But in the infinitive the present tense does NOT indicate time; it indicates aspect only; its aspect is always progressive/repeated.

2. AORIST INFINITIVE ACTIVE

To form the aorist infinitive active, obtain the unaugmented aorist tense stem by dropping from Principal Part III both the ending -α and the past indicative augment ἐ-. To this stem add the ending -αι.

THE AORIST INFINITIVE ACTIVE IS ALWAYS ACCENTED ON THE PENULT. The accent on this verbal form is NOT recessive. Note that the final diphthong -αι, as usual, counts as short for purposes of accentuation.

Thus, the unaugmented aorist tense stem of παιδεύω is παιδευσ-, and the aorist infinitive active is > παιδεῦσαι > to educate

In the aorist infinitive active, as in the present infinitive active, tense does NOT indicate time; it indicates aspect only.

The aorist infinitive active has simple aspect: "to educate (once and for all)."

The present infinitive active, by contrast, has progressive/repeated aspect: "to be educating," "to educate (habitually)."

Note that the English infinitive "to educate" can, depending on context, be equivalent either to a Greek present infinitive active or to a Greek aorist infinitive active.

3. USE OF THE INFINITIVE

Greek employs the infinitive just as English does with certain verbs of ordering or commanding. One such Greek verb is κελεύω, "order, command."

The Greek infinitive, like the English infinitive, can where appropriate take a direct or indirect object.

> τὸν Ὅμηρον κελεύετε τὸν ἀδελφὸν παιδεύειν.
> You command Homer to be educating his brother.
> You command Homer to educate his brother (habitually).
> τὸν Ὅμηρον κελεύετε τὸν ἀδελφὸν παιδεῦσαι.
> You command Homer to educate his brother (once and for all).

Other uses of the infinitive will be introduced later.

Drill III, page 59, may now be done.

27. SYNOPSIS

To give a synopsis of a verb, write all six of its principal parts, all of the finite forms of the verb in one person and number, e.g., third person plural, and all the non-finite forms of the verb. Below is given a synopsis of παιδεύω in the first person plural. As new verb forms are learned, the synopsis will be expanded. A synopsis is given in each of the self-correcting examinations, the first set of which follows Unit 3.

VOCABULARY NOTES

The preposition ἀπό + gen., "from, away from," since it has an accent, is not a proclitic as are the prepositions εἰς, ἐκ, and ἐν. It differs from the preposition ἐκ in that its primary meaning indicates motion which begins at the boundary of something and moves away, rather than motion which begins within something and moves outside.

The meanings of these two prepositions can, however, overlap.

The particle ἆρα stands first in its clause and shows, along with the question mark (;), that a question is being asked; this particle is not separately translated. One can also ask a question without using ἆρα, in which case the question mark alone shows the question. Unlike English, Greek does not change the word order to mark a question (e.g., She is singing./Is she singing?).

The conjunction γάρ, "for," is postpositive (literally, "put after"). It never stands first in its clause but comes after one word or after a whole phrase. It links the entire clause to what preceded. Do not confuse the meaning of γάρ with the meaning "for" of the dative case.

I like Homer. For Homer is teaching men.

"Ομηρος γὰρ παιδεύει τοὺς ἀνθρώπους.
ὁ γὰρ "Ομηρος παιδεύει τοὺς ἀνθρώπους.
ὁ "Ομηρος γὰρ παιδεύει τοὺς ἀνθρώπους.

Note that γάρ can come between an article and a noun.

Unlike English, Greek uses such connectives in almost every sentence.

The postpositive conjunction δέ, "but," takes the same positions as the postpositive conjunction γάρ. In a series of clauses or sentences, sometimes each is connected with the one before by δέ, and this conjunction then has a meaning closer to "and" than "but." For the use of δέ together with the postpositive conjunction μέν, see below.

The indeclinable numeral ἕξ, "six," must not be confused with the preposition ἐκ, ἐξ which is a proclitic and has a smooth breathing. The numeral ἕξ is not inflected:

οἱ ἕξ ἄνθρωποι   the six men
τῶν ἕξ ἀνθρώπων   of the six men

Adverbs such as εὖ, "well," are not inflected:

> Ὅμηρος τὸν ἀδελφὸν εὖ παιδεύει.
> Homer educates his brother well.

When the conjunction ἤ, "or," is repeated, the first ἤ means "either" and the second ἤ means "or."

> Ὅμηρος ἢ ὁ ἀδελφός   Homer or his brother
> ἢ Ὅμηρος ἢ ὁ ἀδελφός   either Homer or his brother

Here, for comparison, are the Principal Parts of the four verbs presented in this Unit. Each is discussed in its place below.

I	II	III	IV	V	VI
κελεύω	κελεύσω	ἐκέλευσα	κεκέλευκα	κεκέλευσμαι	ἐκελεύσθην
λύω	λύσω	ἔλῡσα	λέλυκα	λέλυμαι	ἐλύθην
παιδεύω	παιδεύσω	ἐπαίδευσα	πεπαίδευκα	πεπαίδευμαι	ἐπαιδεύθην
πέμπω	πέμψω	ἔπεμψα	πέπομφα	πέπεμμαι	ἐπέμφθην

Principal Parts II and III often, but not always, have a stem ending in -σ-. Principal Parts IV and V often show reduplication: the initial consonant is doubled, and -ε- is inserted between the two consonants: compare κελεύω with κεκέλευκα. Principal Part VI often has a stem ending in -θ-. Principal Parts III and VI prefix the past indicative augment. REMEMBER THAT ALL PRINCIPAL PARTS OF ALL VERBS MUST BE LEARNED SEPARATELY!

The verb κελεύω, κελεύσω, ἐκέλευσα, κεκέλευκα, κεκέλευσμαι, ἐκελεύσθην, "order, command," takes a direct object, in the accusative case, of the person commanded and an infinitive of the action commanded. Cf. Section 26.

The verb λύω, λύσω, ἔλῡσα, λέλυκα, λέλυμαι, ἐλύθην has the basic meaning "unbind, dissolve" and is cognate with English "loose"; cf. the derivatives "analysis," "dialysis," which involve the mental or physical breaking apart of something. In some contexts λύω means "destroy (by taking apart)": e.g., to destroy a bridge, to destroy a democracy. Note the change from ῡ to υ in Principal Parts IV, V, and VI.

The postpositive conjunction μέν, "on the one hand," usually indicates the first of a pair of contrasting items, the second of which is picked up in the following clause by δέ, which here means "on the other hand."

> ὁ μὲν Ὅμηρος παιδεύει, ὁ δὲ ἀδελφὸς δῶρα πέμπει.
> Homer, on the one hand, educates; his brother,
>   on the other hand, sends gifts.

English would tend to say simply "Homer educates, but his brother sends gifts" or even "Homer educates; his brother sends gifts." But Greek strongly prefers that each clause have its own connective in order to show clearly the structure of the entire statement.

For the Greeks the relationship between guest and host was sacred and carried substantial obligations. Both parties to this relationship were called ξένος. Thus the various meanings of this word.

The adverb οὐ, οὐκ, οὐχ, "not," is a proclitic and expresses negation. It normally precedes the word which it negates. The form οὐ appears before words beginning with a consonant; the form οὐκ, before words beginning with a vowel or diphthong with a smooth breathing; and the form οὐχ, before words beginning with a rough breathing (cf. Section 8).

> οὐ παιδεύεις.   οὐκ ἀδελφός   οὐχ Ὅμηρος
> You do not educate.   not a brother   not Homer

When it ends a sentence, this adverb has the form οὔ, taking an acute accent:

> παιδεύεις, ἢ οὔ;
> Do you educate, or not?

In the verb παιδεύω, παιδεύσω, ἐπαίδευσα, πεπαίδευκα, πεπαίδευμαι, ἐπαιδεύθην, "educate, teach," note how Principal Parts I–IV are similar to those of κελεύω, and note the differences in Principal Parts V and VI:

> κεκέλευσμαι   ἐκελεύσθην
> πεπαίδευμαι   ἐπαιδεύθην

All Principal Parts of all verbs must be learned separately!

The preposition παρά refers to relationships involving "the side of . . . ." Its basic meanings with the genitive, dative, and accusative cases bring out the force of those cases. This preposition is used most often of people.

> παρὰ τοῦ Ὁμήρου   from (the side of) Homer > παρὰ τῷ Ὁμήρῳ   by (the side of) Homer; at Homer's house
> παρὰ τὸν Ὅμηρον   to (the side of) Homer

The genitive shows motion away from; the dative shows place where; the accusative shows motion toward (cf. Section 13.4). In addition, παρά with the accusative can show place where or can mean "beyond" or "contrary to" (cf. the English phrase "beyond the law").

In the verb πέμπω, πέμψω, ἔπεμψα, πέπομφα, πέπεμμαι, ἐπέμφθην, "send," note in Principal Part IV the change in vowel from ε to ο. This is the same type of vowel change that produced, e.g., English "sing, sang, sung." Such changes tend to form patterns which will become apparent as more verbs are encountered.

Note also that in Principal Parts IV and VI φ replaces π: an aspirated consonant replaces a non-aspirated consonant (cf. Section 8).

In Principal Part V note the absence of a labial before the -μαι of πέπεμμαι. The form was originally *πέπεμπμαι, which was simplified to πέπεμμαι. (An * in front of a form means that it is not attested but has been reconstructed.)

The preposition πρό + genitive indicates that something is ahead of something else either spatially or in time:

πρὸ τῆς οἰκίᾱς   in front of (before) the house

πρὸ τοῦ πολέμου   before the war

The noun φιλίᾱ, φιλίᾱς, ἡ, "friendship," is formed from the noun φίλος, φίλου, ὁ, "friend," and denotes the state of being a φίλος. Many such abstract nouns have a nominative singular in -ιᾱ.

When one vocabulary word is thus derived from another, it will be listed after the word from which it is derived, and the entry will be indented, as in the vocabulary above.

28. PERFECT INDICATIVE ACTIVE

To form the perfect indicative active, obtain the perfect active tense stem by dropping the ending -α from Principal Part IV. To this stem, add the following endings:

	S	P
1	-α	-αμεν
2	-ας	-ατε
3	-ε(ν)	-ᾱσι(ν)

Thus, the perfect active tense stem of παιδεύω is πεπαιδευκ-, and the forms of the perfect indicative active are as follows:

S

1	πεπαίδευκα	I have educated
2	πεπαίδευκας	you have educated
3	πεπαίδευκε(ν)	he/she/it has educated

1	πεπαιδεύκαμεν	we have educated
2	πεπαιδεύκατε	you have educated
3	πεπαιδεύκᾱσι(ν)	they have educated

Observations: (1) The perfect indicative active indicates an action complete from the point of view of present time, e.g., πεπαίδευκα, "I have (now) educated." The time of the tense is present; the aspect, completed. Cf. Section 18.3.

(2) The endings of the perfect indicative active are identical with those of the aorist indicative active EXCEPT in the third person plural. Compare the perfect πεπαιδεύκᾱσι(ν) with the aorist ἐπαίδευσαν.

(3) Many perfect tense stems are formed with a reduplication of the initial consonant of the present tense stem with the letter
-ε- inserted between the two consonants, e.g., πεπαίδευκα (παιδεύω), λέλυκα (λύω). There are patterns for the formation of the perfect tense stem, but they are not predictable;
hence the need for memorizing the perfect indicative as one of the principal parts.

29. PLUPERFECT INDICATIVE ACTIVE

To form the pluperfect indicative active, prefix the past indicative augment ἐ- to the perfect active tense stem. To the augmented perfect active tense stem add the following endings:

	S	P
1	-η	-εμεν
2	-ης	-ετε
3	-ει(ν)	-εσαν

Thus, the augmented perfect active tense stem of παιδεύω is ἐπεπαιδευκ-, and the forms of the pluperfect indicative active are as follows:

S
1	ἐπεπαιδεύκη	I had educated
2	ἐπεπαιδεύκης	you had educated
3	ἐπεπαιδεύκει(ν)	he/she/it had educated

1	ἐπεπαιδεύκεμεν	we had educated
2	ἐπεπαιδεύκετε	you had educated
3	ἐπεπαιδεύκεσαν	they had educated

Observations: (1) The pluperfect indicative active indicates an action complete from the point of view of the past: e.g., ἐπεπαιδεύκη, "I had (by then) educated." The time of the tense is past; the aspect, completed. Both the perfect and the pluperfect indicative active have completed aspect; they differ only in time. Like the other past tenses of the indicative, the pluperfect indicative active prefixes the past indicative augment.

(2) With the exception of the -ει of the third person singular, the tense vowel of the pluperfect indicative active shows an alternation between -η- in the singular and -ε- in the plural.

(3) Note that the third person singular, pluperfect indicative active can take a nu-movable.

30. PERFECT INFINITIVE ACTIVE

To form the perfect infinitive active, add to the perfect active tense stem the ending -έναι.

Thus, the perfect infinitive active of παιδεύω is πεπαιδευκέναι

to have educated

The perfect infinitive active is always accented on the penult.

Like the other infinitives learned so far, the tense of the perfect infinitive shows aspect only, not time. Compare:

παιδεύειν	to be educating/to educate (progressive/repeated aspect)
παιδεῦσαι	to educate (simple aspect)
πεπαιδευκέναι	to have educated (completed aspect)

31. SUBJUNCTIVE AND OPTATIVE MOODS
PRESENT SUBJUNCTIVE ACTIVE

The subjunctive and the optative, in contrast to the indicative, show that the speaker views the action as non-factual, i.e., non-indicative. The translation of subjunctives or optatives varies considerably, depending upon the type of clause they appear in. Therefore, no translation of a subjunctive or an optative appears in the paradigms. The first type of clause in which the subjunctive and optative appear is the purpose clause. See Section 36.

The tense of a subjunctive or an optative, like that of an infinitive, does not indicate factual time but only aspect: the present tense shows progressive/ repeated aspect; the aorist tense, simple aspect; and the perfect tense, completed aspect. Of these three, the perfect tense is rarely used, and is given only in the Appendix.

To form the present subjunctive active, add the following endings to the present tense stem (the formula for finding the present tense stem is given in Section 20; for a chart of all the tense stems and the tenses built on them, see Section 60, pages 172-73):

1	-ω	-ωμεν
2	-ῃς	-ητε
3	-ῃ	-ωσι(ν)

Thus, the forms of the present subjunctive active of παιδεύω are as follows:

	S	P
1	παιδεύω	παιδεύωμεν
2	παιδεύῃς	παιδεύητε
3	παιδεύῃ	παιδεύωσι(ν)

Observations: (1) Since the translation of a subjunctive varies according to the kind of clause in which it is used, no one translation of a subjunctive is given in the paradigm.

(2) The endings of the subjunctive active are the same as those of the present indicative active except that, where possible, the thematic vowel of the ending has been lengthened. Compare the subjunctive παιδεύωμεν with the indicative παιδεύομεν. In the second and third person singular endings, when the -ε- of the -ει- is lengthened to -η-, the -ι- becomes an iota subscript. Note that when the -ε- of the second person plural ending -ετε is lengthened to -η-, there is no iota subscript.

(3) The first person singular of the present subjunctive active has the same form as the first person singular of the present indicative active. Context usually allows one to distinguish between the two.

(4) The tense of the present subjunctive indicates progressive/repeated aspect; it does not show present time.

32. AORIST SUBJUNCTIVE ACTIVE

To form the aorist subjunctive active, add to the UNAUGMENTED aorist tense stem the same endings as in the present subjunctive active.

Thus, the forms of the aorist subjunctive active of παιδεύω are as follows:

	S	P
1	παιδεύσω	παιδεύσωμεν
2	παιδεύσῃς	παιδεύσητε
3	παιδεύσῃ	παιδεύσωσι(ν)

Observations: (1) The aorist subjunctive active uses the same endings as the present subjunctive active. The two tenses are distinguished by the different tense stems.

(2) The past indicative augment is not used in the aorist subjunctive.

(3) The first person singular of the aorist subjunctive active often has the same form as the first person singular of the future indicative active, as in παιδεύσω. Context usually allows one to distinguish the two. Remember that there is NO FUTURE SUBJUNCTIVE.

(4) Likè the aorist infinitive, the aorist subjunctive indicates only simple aspect; it does not indicate past time.

33. PRESENT OPTATIVE ACTIVE

To form the present optative active, add the following endings to the present tense stem:

	S	P
1	-οιμι	-οιμεν
2	-οις	-οιτε
3	-οι	-οιεν

Thus, the forms of the present optative active of παιδεύω are as follows:

	S	P
1	παιδεύοιμι	παιδεύοιμεν
2	παιδεύοις	παιδεύοιτε
3	παιδεύοι	παιδεύοιεν

Observations: (1) Since the translation of an optative varies considerably according to the kind of clause in which it is used, no one translation of the optative is given in the paradigm.

(2) Note that all the endings of the present optative active begin with the diphthong -οι- (thematic vowel -ο- and suffix -ι-). Compare the following first person plural forms :

present indicative active	παιδεύομεν
present subjunctive active	παιδεύωμεν
present optative active	παιδεύοιμεν

(3) Unlike the final -οι of the nominative plural of the second-declension masculine and feminine nouns, THE FINAL DIPHTHONG -οι IN THE THIRD PERSON SINGULAR OF THE PRESENT OPTATIVE ACTIVE COUNTS AS LONG FOR PURPOSES OF ACCENTUATION. Compare νῆσοι (where, since the penult is accented and contains a long vowel while the ultima contains a diphthong that counts as short, the penult has a circumflex accent) with παιδεύοι (where the diphthong in the ultima is counted as long and prevents the accent from going back beyond the penult, which receives the acute).

(4) Like the present infinitive and the present subjunctive, the present optative indicates only progressive/repeated aspect, not present time.

34. AORIST OPTATIVE ACTIVE

To form the aorist optative active, add the following endings to the UN-AUGMENTED aorist tense stem:

	S	P
1	-αιμι	-αιμεν
2	-αις/-ειας	-αιτε
3	-αι/-ειε(ν)	-αιεν/-ειαν

Thus, the forms of the aorist optative active of παιδεύω are as follows:

	S	P
1	παιδεύσαιμι	παιδεύσαιμεν
2	παιδεύσαις/ παιδεύσειας	παιδεύσαιτε
3	παιδεύσαι/ παιδεύσειε(ν)	παιδεύσαιεν/ παιδεύσειαν

Observations: (1) The past indicative augment is not used in the aorist optative.

(2) Note that, with the exception of the alternative forms, all the endings of the aorist optative active begin with the diphthong -αι- (the aorist tense vowel -α- and the optative suffix -ι-). Compare the following first person plural forms:

aorist indicative active	ἐπαιδεύσαμεν
aorist subjunctive active	παιδεύσωμεν
aorist optative active	παιδεύσαιμεν
present optative active	παιδεύοιμεν

(3) Like the final -οι of the third person singular of the present optative active, THE FINAL DIPHTHONG -αι OF THE THIRD PERSON SINGULAR OF THE AORIST OPTATIVE ACTIVE COUNTS AS LONG FOR PURPOSES OF ACCENTUATION. Everywhere else the diphthong -αι when final counts as short for purposes of accentuation. Distinguish the optative παιδεύσαι (in which the diphthong of the ending is long and prevents the accent from going back beyond the penult and from being a circumflex) from the aorist infinitive active παιδεῦσαι (in which the accent is fixed on the penult and the diphthong counts as short for purposes of accentuation).

(4) In the aorist optative active, the second person singular, the third person singular, and the third person plural all have alternative forms with no distinction of meaning. Since both are used, both must be learned.

(5) Like the aorist infinitive and the aorist subjunctive, the aorist optative indicates only simple aspect, not past time.

Drill I, page 74, may now be done.

For a synopsis using all moods and tenses presented so far, see pages 78 and 82.

35. SEQUENCE OF MOODS

As seen in Section 18.3, the tenses of the indicative are divided into two categories, primary and secondary. The PRIMARY tenses are those which refer to PRESENT and FUTURE time: the present, future, perfect, and future perfect tenses. The SECONDARY tenses of the indicative are those which refer to PAST time: the imperfect, aorist, and pluperfect tenses. The secondary tenses of the indicative all have the past indicative augment.

Sequence of moods means that in complex sentences certain kinds of dependent clauses will have a verb in either the subjunctive or the optative mood, depending on whether the main verb of the sentence is either a primary or a secondary tense of the indicative. A primary tense of the indicative governs a subjunctive in the dependent clause; this is called primary sequence. A secondary tense of the indicative governs an optative in the dependent clause; this is called secondary sequence.

Both the present subjunctive and the aorist subjunctive are governed by primary tenses of the indicative. As in the infinitive, TENSE IN THE SUBJUNCTIVE INDICATES ASPECT, NOT TIME: the present subjunctive shows progressive/repeated aspect; the aorist subjunctive shows simple aspect.

Both the present optative and the aorist optative are governed by secondary tenses of the indicative. TENSE IN THE OPTATIVE ALSO INDICATES ASPECT, NOT TIME: the present optative shows progressive/repeated aspect; the aorist optative shows simple aspect.

The following chart summarizes the sequence of moods:

MAIN VERB	DEPENDENT VERB
PRIMARY SEQUENCE
Present Indicative ⎫ Future Indicative ⎬ Perfect Indicative ⎭	Subjunctive Mood (Tense shows aspect.)
SECONDARY SEQUENCE

36. PURPOSE CLAUSES

The idea of purpose can be expressed in English in many ways, e.g., by an infinitive: "I am coming to see my friend"; by a clause: "I am coming in order that I may see my friend." To express purpose, Greek does not normally use an infinitive but rather a clause introduced by the conjunctions ἵνα, ὡς, or ὅπως, all of which mean "in order that." A negative purpose clause is introduced by ἵνα μή, ὡς μή, or ὅπως μή, which mean "in order that . . . not, lest."

A purpose clause has a verb in the subjunctive or the optative according to the rules for the sequence of moods: a primary main verb calls for the subjunctive; a secondary, for the optative. The tense of the subjunctive or the optative shows aspect.

(1) $\pi\acute{\epsilon}\mu\pi o\mu\epsilon\nu\ \delta\tilde{\omega}\rho\alpha$ $\begin{Bmatrix} \H{\iota}\nu\alpha \\ \H{\omega}\varsigma \\ \H{o}\pi\omega\varsigma \end{Bmatrix}$ $\lambda\acute{\upsilon}\eta\tau\epsilon\ \tau o\grave{\upsilon}\varsigma\ \grave{\alpha}\delta\epsilon\lambda\varphi o\acute{\upsilon}\varsigma.$

We $\begin{Bmatrix} \text{are sending} \\ \text{send} \end{Bmatrix}$ gifts in order that you $\begin{Bmatrix} \text{may be releasing} \\ \text{may release} \end{Bmatrix}$ the brothers.

Observation: The main verb is in the present tense, which is a primary tense. The verb in the purpose clause must therefore be in the subjunctive mood (primary sequence). The tense of the subjunctive is present, which indicates either progressive aspect ("that you may be releasing") or repeated aspect ("that you may [habitually] release").

(2) πέμπομεν δῶρα $\begin{Bmatrix} \text{ἵνα} \\ \text{ὡς} \\ \text{ὅπως} \end{Bmatrix}$ λύσητε τοὺς ἀδελφούς.

We $\begin{Bmatrix} \text{are sending} \\ \text{send} \end{Bmatrix}$ gifts in order that you may release the brothers.

Observation: The aorist tense of the subjunctive (still primary sequence after a main verb in the present indicative) indicates simple aspect, "that you may release (once and for all)."

(3) ἐπέμπομεν δῶρα $\begin{Bmatrix} \text{ἵνα} \\ \text{ὡς} \\ \text{ὅπως} \end{Bmatrix}$ λύοιτε τοὺς ἀδελφούς.

We $\begin{Bmatrix} \text{were sending} \\ \text{used to send} \end{Bmatrix}$ gifts in order that you $\begin{Bmatrix} \text{might be releasing} \\ \text{might release} \end{Bmatrix}$ the brothers.

Observations: (1) The main verb is in the imperfect tense, which is a secondary tense. The verb in the purpose clause in secondary sequence is an optative. The present tense of the optative indicates progressive aspect ("that you might be releasing") or repeated aspect ("that you might [habitually] release").

(2) IN TRANSLATING PURPOSE CLAUSES INTO ENGLISH, "MAY" SHOULD ALWAYS BE USED WHEN TRANSLATING PRIMARY SEQUENCE AND "MIGHT" WHEN TRANSLATING SECONDARY SEQUENCE.

(4) ἐπέμπομεν δῶρα $\begin{Bmatrix} \text{ἵνα} \\ \text{ὡς} \\ \text{ὅπως} \end{Bmatrix}$ λύσαιτε τοὺς ἀδελφούς.

We $\begin{Bmatrix} \text{were sending} \\ \text{used to send} \end{Bmatrix}$ gifts in order that you might release the brothers.

Observation: The aorist tense of the optative (still secondary sequence after an imperfect main verb) indicates simple aspect: "that you might release the brothers (once and for all)."

> We sent Homer to the island in order that he might not educate his brother.

To give the syntax of a verb one must identify both the mood and the tense and account for both mood and tense. For example, the syntax of λύοιτε in sentence (3) is present optative: optative in a purpose clause in secondary sequence after the imperfect main verb ἐπέμπομεν; present tense to show progressive/repeated aspect.

To give the syntax of a noun, one must identify the case and give the reason for it. For example, the syntax of Ὅμηρον in sentence (5) is accusative: direct object of the verb ἐπέμψαμεν.

Drill II, pages 74–75, may now be done.

VOCABULARY NOTES

The conjunction ἀλλά, "but," stands at the beginning of its clause and introduces a stronger contrast than the conjunction δέ, "but."

The noun ἀρετή, ἀρετῆς, ἡ, "excellence, virtue," originally referred to "excellence" in general, whether of warriors in battle, animals such as horses, or things such as land. Later its meaning was sometimes narrowed to "moral excellence" or "virtue."

The noun βουλή, βουλῆς, ἡ means either "will" (the faculty of the soul) or "council" (in the Athenian democracy a deliberative body of 500 citizens).

The verb γράφω, γράψω, ἔγραψα, γέγραφα, γέγραμμαι, ἐγράφην, "write, draw," originally meant "scratch" or "graze" (as with a pointed object). Then the verb came to refer to the making of marks of various sorts. Note that Principal Part VI, ἐγράφην, lacks the -θ- seen in the verbs presented thus far.

The particle δή can be translated as "in fact" or "of course"; it indicates that what is said is really true.

In the Athenian democracy, all citizens (adult males) had a right to take part in the ἐκκλησία, ἐκκλησίας, ἡ, "assembly," literally a "calling out" of the people.

The conjunctions ἐπεί and ἐπειδή mean "after, when, since," and both introduce temporal and causal clauses. ἐπειδή consists of the conjunction ἐπεί + the particle δή; but there is no great distinction in meaning between the two conjunctions, although ἐπειδή is used more frequently in temporal clauses than in causal clauses. Both conjunctions govern a past tense of the indicative when referring to a definite event in the past:

ἐπειδὴ τὸν ἀδελφὸν ἔλῦσαν, δῶρα ἔπεμψα.
After/since they freed my brother, I sent gifts.

The noun θυσίᾱ, θυσίᾱς, ἡ is a verbal noun related to θύω, θύσω, ἔθῡσα, τέθυκα, τέθυμαι, ἐτύθην, "sacrifice." Note the long vowel in the first three principal parts and the short vowel in the last three (as in λύω); the vowel of the stem of the noun is also short.

Note that the reduplication in Principal Parts IV and V of θύω shows τ- and not θ-. The forms had originally been *τέθυκα and *τέθυμαι. When Greek had two syllables each beginning with an aspirate (see Section 8), the first of the aspirates usually lost its aspiration; this is called the dissimilation of aspirates. Principal Part VI was originally *ἐθύθην, which became ἐτύθην.

The conjunctions ἵνα, ὡς, and ὅπως all introduce purpose clauses with no difference in meaning.

The adverb μή, "not," is NOT interchangeable with οὐ, οὐκ, οὐχ, "not." μή must be used to negate purpose clauses; οὐ, οὐκ, οὐχ must be used to negate factual statements and questions with verbs in the indicative mood. Note that, unlike οὐ, μή is not a proclitic.

The preposition περί basically indicates the idea of "around"; cf. perimeter. The dative is used of wearing clothes, weapons, etc. "around" the body: In "They wear golden necklaces around their necks" the preposition περί + the dative would be used. The accusative is used with verbs of motion: In "They send ships around the island" the preposition περί + the accusative would be used. περί with both the genitive and the accusative means "concerning." The genitive is used with words of speaking or thinking: "I speak about . . ." would be περί + genitive. "We fight about . . ." would be περί + accusative. This distinction, however, is not always maintained.

In Principal Part IV of φυλάττω, φυλάξω, ἐφύλαξα, πεφύλαχα, πεφύλαγμαι, ἐφυλάχθην, "guard," the stem ends in an aspirated consonant, -χ-; cf. πέπομφα from πέμπω. Such perfects are called aspirated perfects. Note also the dissimilation of aspirates in πεφύλαχα and πεφύλαγμαι.

ANSWER KEY FOR SELF-CORRECTING EXAMINATION 1A

I. 1. χωρῶν: the accent on all first-declension nouns in the genitive plural is a circumflex on the ultima.
   2. δῶρα: the word is a noun with a persistent accent on the first syllable. Thus, the penult is accented and contains a long vowel, and the ultima has a short vowel. The accent must be a circumflex.
   3. κελεῦσαι (infinitive): the accent on the aorist infinitive active is always on the penult. Since the penult contains a diphthong, and final -αι counts as short for purposes of accentuation, the accent must be a circumflex.
   4. φυλάττετε: verb form, recessive accent, short ultima.
   5. θεοῖς: second-declension nouns with an acute on the ultima in the nominative take a circumflex on the ultima in the dative.

II. 1. τὴν νῆσον

37. FIRST-DECLENSION NOUNS: CONCLUDED

1. FEMININE NOUNS WITH NOMINATIVE SINGULAR IN SHORT -α

In addition to first-declension nouns whose nominative singular ends in
-η or -ᾱ, there are others, also feminine, whose nominative singular ends in short -α. Their declension is different only in having short -α in the nominative/vocative and accusative singular. In the genitive and dative singular and in all of the cases of the plural, the endings are identical with those of the first-declension nouns already learned. Their endings are:

	S		P
Nominative/Vocative	-α	-α	-αι
Genitive	-ης	-ᾱς	-ῶν
Dative	-ῃ	-ᾳ	-αις
Accusative	-αν	-αν	-ᾱς

The following nouns will serve as examples:

> θάλαττα, θαλάττης, ἡ sea
> μοῦσα, μούσης, ἡ muse > γέφῡρα, γεφύρᾱς, ἡ bridge > μοῖρα, μοίρᾱς, ἡ fate

Nom./Voc. S	θάλαττα	μοῦσα	γέφῡρα	μοῖρα
Gen.	θαλάττης	μούσης	γεφύρᾱς	μοίρᾱς
Dat.	θαλάττῃ	μούσῃ	γεφύρᾳ	μοίρᾳ
Acc.	θάλατταν	μοῦσαν	γέφῡραν	μοῖραν

Nom./Voc. P	θάλατται	μοῦσαι	γέφυραι	μοῖραι
Gen.	θαλαττῶν	μουσῶν	γεφυρῶν	μοιρῶν
Dat.	θαλάτταις	μούσαις	γεφύραις	μοίραις
Acc.	θαλάττᾱς	μούσᾱς	γεφύρᾱς	μοίρᾱς

Observations: (1) In nouns whose stem ends in ε, ι, or ρ, the endings of the genitive and dative singular have ᾱ instead of η.

(2) The accent, as in all nouns, is persistent. Note, however, the changes in accent necessitated by the rules for the possibilities of accent as the length of the ultima changes. As in all first-declension nouns, the genitive plural receives a circumflex on the ultima.

2. MASCULINE NOUNS WITH NOMINATIVE SINGULAR IN -ης OR -ᾱς

Some first-declension nouns are masculine and have a nominative singular ending in -ης or, when the stem of the noun ends in ε, ι, or ρ, a nominative singular ending in -ᾱς. The endings of these nouns differ from those of feminine first-declension nouns only in the nominative, genitive, and (sometimes) vocative singular. In the dative and accusative singular, and in all forms of the plural, these masculine nouns have the same endings as feminine first-declension nouns. Their endings are:

	S		P
Nom.	-ης	-ᾱς	-αι
Gen.	-ου	-ου	-ῶν
Dat.	-ῃ	-ᾳ	-αις
Acc.	-ην	-ᾱν	-ᾱς
Voc.	-α, -η	-ᾱ	-αι

The following nouns will serve as examples:

πολίτης, πολίτου, ὁ citizen ποιητής, ποιητοῦ, ὁ poet νεᾱνίᾱς, νεᾱνίου, ὁ young man

Nom. S	πολίτης	ποιητής	νεᾱνίᾱς
Gen.	πολίτου	ποιητοῦ	νεᾱνίου
Dat.	πολίτῃ	ποιητῇ	νεᾱνίᾳ
Acc.	πολίτην	ποιητήν	νεᾱνίᾱν
Voc.	πολῖτα	ποιητά	νεᾱνίᾱ

Nom./Voc. P	πολῖται	ποιηταί	νεᾱνίαι
Gen.	πολῑτῶν	ποιητῶν	νεᾱνιῶν
Dat.	πολίταις	ποιηταῖς	νεᾱνίαις
Acc.	πολίτᾱς	ποιητάς	νεᾱνίᾱς

Observations:

(1) The -ς of the nominative singular ending was borrowed from the nominative singular ending of masculine second-declension nouns (e.g., ἄνθρωπος).

(2) The genitive singular ending is the same as that of masculine second-declension nouns (cf. ἀνθρώπου, πολίτου).

(3) Accent is persistent, but as in ALL first-declension nouns, the genitive plural receives a circumflex on the ultima.

(4) As in all other nouns of the first and second declensions, masculine first-declension nouns accented on the ultima receive a circumflex rather than an acute accent in the genitive and dative, singular and plural (e.g., ποιητής, ποιητοῦ).

(5) In nouns whose stem ends in ε, ι, or ρ, the endings of the nominative, dative, and accusative singular have ᾱ instead of η. In the vocative singular of these nouns long ᾱ appears instead of short α (νεᾱνίᾱ). Note that the accusative plural of these nouns is identical with the nominative singular; context will determine meaning.

(6) Some nouns with nominatives in -ης employ the vocative singular ending -η (instead of -α). These nouns will be noted as they occur.

Drill I, page 105, may now be done.

38. ADJECTIVES OF THE FIRST AND SECOND DECLENSIONS

Just as all forms of the article and the noun have gender, number, and case, so do all forms of the adjective. Like the article, the adjective must agree in gender, number, and case with the noun which it modifies. This grammatical agreement does not require that the endings of adjective and noun always be identical in form: compare the examples which follow the paradigms below.

The adjectives presented in this Section have endings either of the first and second declensions or of the second declension alone. They fall into two groups: three-ending adjectives with separate sets of endings for each of the three genders, and two-ending adjectives with one set of endings for both masculine and feminine and another set of endings for the neuter.

Adjectives will be listed as vocabulary items by giving all possible forms of the nominative singular, as in the examples below.

1. THREE-ENDING ADJECTIVES OF THE FIRST AND SECOND DECLENSIONS

ἀγαθός, ἀγαθή, ἀγαθόν, good

	M	F	N
Nom. S	ἀγαθός	ἀγαθή	ἀγαθόν
Gen.	ἀγαθοῦ	ἀγαθῆς	ἀγαθοῦ
Dat.	ἀγαθῷ	ἀγαθῇ	ἀγαθῷ
Acc.	ἀγαθόν	ἀγαθήν	ἀγαθόν
Voc.	ἀγαθέ	ἀγαθή	ἀγαθόν
Nom./Voc. P	ἀγαθοί	ἀγαθαί	ἀγαθά
Gen.	ἀγαθῶν	ἀγαθῶν	ἀγαθῶν
Dat.	ἀγαθοῖς	ἀγαθαῖς	ἀγαθοῖς
Acc.	ἀγαθούς	ἀγαθάς	ἀγαθά

Observations: (1) Except for the accent of the vocative singular, the masculine endings are the same as those of ἀδελφός (Section 15); the feminine endings are the same as those of ψῡχή (Section 14); the neuter endings are the same as those of ἔργον (Section 15), although the accent of ἀγαθόν falls on the ultima.

(2) Like that of nouns, THE ACCENT OF ADJECTIVES IS PERSISTENT AND IS GIVEN BY THE NEUTER NOMINATIVE SINGULAR. ADJECTIVES OF THE FIRST AND SECOND DECLENSIONS, WHEN ACCENTED ON THE ULTIMA, TAKE A CIRCUMFLEX IN THE GENITIVE AND DATIVE, SINGULAR AND PLURAL.

ἄξιος, ἀξίᾱ, ἄξιον, worthy

	M	F	N
Nom. S	ἄξιος	ἀξίᾱ	ἄξιον
Gen.	ἀξίου	ἀξίᾱς	ἀξίου
Dat.	ἀξίῳ	ἀξίᾳ	ἀξίῳ
Acc.	ἄξιον	ἀξίᾱν	ἄξιον
Voc.	ἄξιε	ἀξίᾱ	ἄξιον

Nom./Voc. P	ἄξιοι	ἄξιαι	ἄξια
Gen.	ἀξίων	ἀξίων	ἀξίων
Dat.	ἀξίοις	ἀξίαις	ἀξίοις
Acc.	ἀξίους	ἀξίᾱς	ἄξια

Observations: (1) When the stem of a first- and second-declension adjective ends in ε, ι, or ρ, the feminine singular endings have ᾱ instead of η.

(2) Final -οι and -αι in the masculine and feminine nominative/vocative plural (as everywhere except in the third person singular optative active endings) count as short for purposes of accentuation: thus ἄξιοι, ἄξιαι.

(3) THE ACCENT IN THE FEMININE GENITIVE PLURAL, UNLIKE THAT OF FIRST-DECLENSION NOUNS, DOES NOT SHIFT TO THE ULTIMA. Instead, it follows the regular rules of accent.

2. TWO-ENDING ADJECTIVES OF THE SECOND DECLENSION

Some adjectives have only two sets of endings, one for both masculine and feminine, the other for the neuter.

ἄδικος, ἄδικον, unjust

	M/F	N
Nom. S	ἄδικος	ἄδικον
Gen.	ἀδίκου	ἀδίκου
Dat.	ἀδίκῳ	ἀδίκῳ
Acc.	ἄδικον	ἄδικον
Voc.	ἄδικε	ἄδικον
Nom./Voc. P	ἄδικοι	ἄδικα
Gen.	ἀδίκων	ἀδίκων
Dat.	ἀδίκοις	ἀδίκοις
Acc.	ἀδίκους	ἄδικα

Observation: Accent is persistent.

39. AGREEMENT OF ADJECTIVE AND NOUN

Just as the definite article agrees in gender, number, and case with the noun which it modifies, but does not necessarily have an identical ending, so too adjectives agree in gender, number and case with the nouns which they modify regardless of any external difference in the form of the endings.

Each of the following phrases shows agreement.

τοῖς ἀνθρώποις to the men	(masculine dative plural)
ταῖς νήσοις to the islands	(feminine dative plural)
ἀγαθὴ ψῡχή a good soul	(feminine nominative singular)
ἀξίᾱ ψῡχή a worthy soul	(feminine nominative singular)
ἄδικος ψῡχή an unjust soul	(feminine nominative singular)

40. POSITION OF THE ADJECTIVE

1. ATTRIBUTIVE POSITION

An adjective which modifies a noun and is preceded by an article agreeing with the noun is in the attributive position. The three varieties of attributive position are presented in Section 16.3.

An adjective in the attributive position, together with the noun which it modifies, forms a phrase but NOT a complete sentence.

ὁ ἀγαθὸς ἄνθρωπος	the good man
ὁ ἄνθρωπος ὁ ἀγαθός	the good man (the man, the good one) ἄνθρωπος ὁ ἀγαθός	the good man (a man, the good one)

The phrases above differ not in meaning but in emphasis only; the translations in parentheses exaggerate the emphasis of the Greek.

2. PREDICATE POSITION

An adjective which agrees with a noun accompanied by the article, but which itself is not preceded by the article, is in the predicate position.

The phrase consisting of noun and article becomes the subject, and the adjective the predicate adjective, of a complete sentence.

In order to translate such a sentence into English the linking verb "is" or "are" must be supplied, but such sentences, called nominal sentences, are complete as they stand in Greek. The article, noun, and adjective, standing in the nominative case, provide all the necessary information.

> The man is good.
>
> ἀγαθὸς ὁ ἄνθρωπος.
> The man is good.
> The man is good.
>
> οἱ ἄνθρωποι ἀγαθοί.
> The men are good.   (specific use of the article)
> Men are good.   (generic use of the article)

Carefully distinguish these nominal sentences, where the adjective is not preceded by the article, from the phrases where the adjective is preceded by the article.

A nominal sentence can also consist of two nouns, one used as a subject, the other as a predicate noun. The subject usually has the article, but the predicate noun does not.

> The book is a gift.
>
> δῶρον τὸ βιβλίον.
> The book is a gift.
> The book is a gift.

Drills II and III, pages 105–106, may now be done.

41. CONDITIONAL SENTENCES

A conditional sentence consists of two statements. One makes an assumption ("If A . . . "); the other states a conclusion which follows from that assumption ("... then B"). The assumption is called the protasis; the conclusion, the apodosis. The negative of the protasis is μή, that of the apodosis οὐ. The protasis can be stated either before or after the apodosis.

> If it rains (protasis), they will stay home (apodosis).
> They will stay home (apodosis) if it rains (protasis).

Six types of conditional sentence are presented below. For each, a formula for the protasis, a formula for the apodosis, and a translation formula will be given. In the translation formula the English verb "do" will stand for any English verb.

NO VERB IN A CONDITIONAL SENTENCE CAN BE TRANSLATED UNTIL THE TYPE OF CONDITIONAL SENTENCE IS IDENTIFIED.

These six conditional sentences are summarized at the end of this Section.

1. FUTURE MORE VIVID CONDITIONAL SENTENCE

Protasis: ἐάν ("if") + subjunctive
Apodosis: future indicative Translation formula: does/will do

$$\dot{\varepsilon}\dot{\alpha}\nu\ \ddot{\alpha}\gamma\gamma\varepsilon\lambda o\nu\ \left\{ \begin{array}{l} \pi\acute{\varepsilon}\mu\pi\eta \\ \pi\acute{\varepsilon}\mu\psi\eta \end{array} \right\},\ \tau\grave{\eta}\nu\ \mu\acute{\alpha}\chi\eta\nu\ \pi\alpha\acute{\upsilon}\sigma o\upsilon\sigma\iota\nu.$$

If he sends a messenger, they will stop the battle.

The protasis of the future more vivid conditional sentence makes an assumption about the future; the apodosis draws a conclusion based on that assumption.

In the protasis the choice between present subjunctive and aorist subjunctive depends on the aspect which one wishes to express: progressive/repeated aspect (present subjunctive) or simple aspect (aorist subjunctive).

2. FUTURE LESS VIVID CONDITIONAL SENTENCE

Protasis: εἰ ("if") + optative
Apodosis: optative + ἄν
Translation formula: should do/would do

$$\varepsilon\grave{\iota}\ \ddot{\alpha}\gamma\gamma\varepsilon\lambda o\nu\ \left\{ \begin{array}{l} \pi\acute{\varepsilon}\mu\pi o\iota \\ \pi\acute{\varepsilon}\mu\psi\alpha\iota/ \\ \pi\acute{\varepsilon}\mu\psi\varepsilon\iota\varepsilon\nu \end{array} \right\},\ \tau\grave{\eta}\nu\ \mu\acute{\alpha}\chi\eta\nu\ \left\{ \begin{array}{l} \pi\alpha\acute{\upsilon} o\iota\varepsilon\nu \\ \pi\alpha\acute{\upsilon}\sigma\alpha\iota\varepsilon\nu/ \\ \pi\alpha\acute{\upsilon}\sigma\varepsilon\iota\alpha\nu \end{array} \right\}\ \ddot{\alpha}\nu.$$

If he should send a messenger, they would stop the battle.

The protasis of a future less vivid conditional sentence, like that of a future more vivid conditional sentence, makes an assumption about the future, but the assumption is viewed as less likely to come true; the apodosis draws a conclusion based on this less likely assumption.

In both protasis and apodosis the choice between present optative and aorist optative depends on the aspect which one wishes to express.

The particle ἄν is necessary to complete the meaning of the apodosis, but it is NOT separately translated. Its position is flexible, but it cannot begin a clause or sentence. The apodosis of the sentence above could be written:

$$\ldots \tau\grave{\eta}\nu \ \mu\acute{\alpha}\chi\eta\nu \ \check{\alpha}\nu \ \left\{ \begin{array}{l} \pi\alpha\acute{\upsilon}o\iota\varepsilon\nu \\ \pi\alpha\acute{\upsilon}\sigma\alpha\iota\varepsilon\nu/ \\ \pi\alpha\acute{\upsilon}\sigma\varepsilon\iota\alpha\nu \end{array} \right\}.$$

There is no difference in meaning.

The introductory particles ἐάν and εἰ both mean "if," but they are NOT interchangeable: each belongs ONLY to certain types of conditional sentence.

3. PRESENT GENERAL CONDITIONAL SENTENCE

Protasis: ἐάν + subjunctive
Apodosis: present indicative Translation formula: does/does

$$\grave{\varepsilon}\grave{\alpha}\nu \ \check{\alpha}\gamma\gamma\varepsilon\lambda o\nu \ \left\{ \begin{array}{l} \pi\acute{\varepsilon}\mu\pi\eta \\ \pi\acute{\varepsilon}\mu\psi\eta \end{array} \right\}, \ \tau\grave{\eta}\nu \ \mu\acute{\alpha}\chi\eta\nu \ \pi\alpha\acute{\upsilon}o\upsilon\sigma\iota\nu.$$

If he sends a messenger, they stop the battle.
If he (ever) sends a messenger, they (always) stop the battle.

The protasis of a present general conditional sentence makes an assumption in present time; the apodosis states a conclusion which follows as a general rule. The adverbs "ever" and "always" in the second translation above emphasize this.

The protasis of a present general conditional sentence is the same as the protasis of a future more vivid conditional sentence, but its meaning is substantially different. ONE CANNOT TRANSLATE THE VERBS IN EITHER PART OF ANY CONDITIONAL SENTENCE WITHOUT FIRST IDENTIFYING BOTH PROTASIS AND APODOSIS.

In the protasis, the choice between present subjunctive and aorist subjunctive depends on the aspect which one wishes to express.

4. PAST GENERAL CONDITIONAL SENTENCE

Protasis: εi + optative
Apodosis: imperfect indicative Translation formula: did/did

$$\varepsilon i \ \mathring{\alpha}\gamma\gamma\varepsilon\lambda o\nu \left\{ \begin{array}{l} \pi\acute{\varepsilon}\mu\pi o\iota \\ \pi\acute{\varepsilon}\mu\psi a\iota/ \\ \pi\acute{\varepsilon}\mu\psi\varepsilon\iota\varepsilon\nu \end{array} \right\}, \ \tau\grave{\eta}\nu \ \mu\acute{\alpha}\chi\eta\nu \ \mathring{\varepsilon}\pi a\nu o\nu.$$

> If he sent a messenger, they stopped the battle.
> If he (ever) sent a messenger, they (always) stopped the battle.

The protasis of a past general conditional sentence makes an assumption in past time; the apodosis states a conclusion which follows as a general rule in past time. The adverbs "ever" and "always" in the second translation above emphasize this.

The protasis of a past general conditional sentence is the same as the protasis of a future less vivid conditional sentence, but its meaning is substantially different.

Identify both protasis and apodosis of all conditional sentences before translating.

In the protasis, the choice between present optative and aorist optative depends on the aspect which one wishes to express.

5. PRESENT CONTRAFACTUAL CONDITIONAL SENTENCE

Protasis: εi + imperfect indicative Apodosis: imperfect indicative + $\mathring{\alpha}\nu$
Translation formula: were doing/would be doing

> $\varepsilon i \ \mathring{\alpha}\gamma\gamma\varepsilon\lambda o\nu \ \mathring{\varepsilon}\pi\varepsilon\mu\pi\varepsilon\nu, \ \tau\grave{\eta}\nu \ \mu\acute{\alpha}\chi\eta\nu \ \mathring{\varepsilon}\pi a\nu o\nu \ \mathring{\alpha}\nu.$

> If he were sending a messenger, they would be stopping the battle.
> If he were sending a messenger (but he is not), they would be stopping the >   battle (but they are not).

The present contrafactual conditional sentence assumes in its protasis something which the speaker knows is untrue at the present time. (Compare the English protasis "If I had a million dollars now . . . .") The apodosis draws a conclusion based on this unreal assumption.

In this type of conditional sentence the indicative mood describes an unreal action or state of being. The particle $\mathring{\alpha}\nu$ in the apodosis, not separately translated, distinguishes the apodosis of a present contrafactual conditional sentence from that of a past general conditional sentence. Identify both protasis and apodosis of all conditional sentences before translating.

6. PAST CONTRAFACTUAL CONDITIONAL SENTENCE

Protasis: εἰ + aorist indicative Apodosis: aorist indicative + ἄν Translation formula: had done/would have done

> εἰ ἄγγελον ἔπεμψεν, τὴν μάχην ἔπαυσαν ἄν.

> If he had sent a messenger, they would have stopped the battle.
> If he had sent a messenger (but he did not), they would have stopped the battle (but they did not).

The past contrafactual conditional sentence assumes in its protasis something which the speaker knows was untrue in the past. (Compare the English protasis "If I had had a million dollars yesterday. . . .") The apodosis draws a conclusion based on this unreal assumption.

Note the difference between the imperfect indicative of the present contrafactual conditional sentence and the aorist indicative of the past contrafactual conditional sentence.

7. SUMMARY OF CONDITIONAL SENTENCES

NAME	PROTASIS	APODOSIS
FUTURE MORE VIVID	ἐάν + subjunctive does	future indicative will do
FUTURE LESS VIVID	εἰ + optative should do	optative + ἄν would do
PRESENT GENERAL	ἐάν + subjunctive does	present indicative does
PAST GENERAL	εἰ + optative did	imperfect indicative did
PRESENT CONTRA-FACTUAL	εἰ + imperf. indic. were doing	imperfect indicative + ἄν would be doing
PAST CONTRA-FACTUAL	εἰ + aorist indic. had done	aorist indicative + ἄν would have done

8. FURTHER NOTE ON CONDITIONAL SENTENCES

Attic Greek has other types of conditional sentences which need not be learned now; these are explained in the Appendix.

Sometimes the protasis of one type of conditional sentence is combined with the apodosis of another type. Such mixed conditional sentences will be introduced in the Exercises of later Units. Examples are given in the Appendix.

Drills IV and V, page 106, may now be done.

42. ELISION

When a word ends with a short vowel and the following word begins with a vowel or a diphthong, the vowel at the end of the first word is sometimes dropped or elided. This is called elision. An apostrophe (') marks the missing vowel.

Here are some examples of elision. Elision is never mandatory in writing Greek.

πέμπετε ἀγγέλους.	(unelided)
πέμπετ' ἀγγέλους.	(elided)
ἔπεμψα ἀγγέλους.	(unelided)
ἔπεμψ' ἀγγέλους.	(elided)
οἱ δὲ ἄνθρωποι	(unelided)
οἱ δ' ἄνθρωποι	(elided)
ἐπαιδεύσατε Ὅμηρον;	(unelided)
ἐπαιδεύσαθ' Ὅμηρον;	(elided)

In the last example above, note the change from the unaspirated consonant τ to the aspirated consonant θ because of the rough breathing (= h) which follows immediately in elision. Cf. Section 8.

The addition of a nu-movable, where possible, avoids elision:

ἔπεμψεν ἀγγέλους.

In the English-to-Greek sentences all words are to be written out in full.

VOCABULARY NOTES

The particle ἄν is employed in the apodoses of future less vivid, present contra-factual, and past contrafactual conditional sentences. It is NOT translated separately but is essential in identifying these conditional sentences: it cannot be omitted. It is placed most frequently after a verb, or after the negative adverb οὐ, οὐκ, οὐχ, but its position is flexible. It cannot, however, stand first in its clause.

The adjective ἄξιος, ἀξία, ἄξιον, "worthy, worth," is often accompanied by a noun in the genitive case to indicate that of which someone or something is worthy. This usage is called the genitive of value.

> ἄνθρωπος ἄθλου ἄξιος
> a man worthy of a prize

The adjective ἄξιος can also be accompanied by an infinitive to indicate an activity that someone or something is worthy of performing or receiving. This is called an epexegetical infinitive or "explaining" infinitive.

> ἄνθρωπος παιδεύειν ἄξιος
>
> a man worthy to educate (i.e., to educate others)
>
> = a man who deserves to educate

Also, the adjective ἄξιος can be accompanied by a noun in the dative case to indicate the person(s) from whose point of view someone or something is worthy (dative of reference).

> ἄνθρωπος τοῖς πολίταις ἄθλου ἄξιος
>
> a man to the citizens worthy of a prize
>
> = a man, in the citizens' eyes, worthy of a prize

The adjective ἀνάξιος, ἀνάξιον, "unworthy," takes the same constructions as the adjective ἄξιος. It is a compound adjective consisting of the adjective ἄξιος + the prefix ἀν-, which expresses negation. This negative prefix has two forms: ἀν- when followed by a vowel or diphthong, and ἀ- when followed by a consonant. The alpha of this prefix is called alpha privative. Both forms derive from a prefix consisting of the consonant ν alone; they are cognate with the English negative prefixes "in-" and "un-."

All compound adjectives such as $\dot{\alpha}\nu\dot{\alpha}\xi\iota o\varsigma$, $\dot{\alpha}\nu\dot{\alpha}\xi\iota o\nu$ have only two sets of endings (masculine/feminine and neuter) rather than three.

The noun $\dot{\alpha}\varrho\chi\acute{\eta}$, $\dot{\alpha}\varrho\chi\tilde{\eta}\varsigma$, $\acute{\eta}$, "beginning; rule, empire," conveys the notion of being first, in the sense either of a beginning or of rule and authority over others.

The verb $\delta\iota\delta\acute{\alpha}\sigma\varkappa\omega$, $\delta\iota\delta\acute{\alpha}\xi\omega$, $\dot{\varepsilon}\delta\acute{\iota}\delta\alpha\xi\alpha$, $\delta\varepsilon\delta\acute{\iota}\delta\alpha\chi\alpha$, $\delta\varepsilon\delta\acute{\iota}\delta\alpha\gamma\mu\alpha\iota$, $\dot{\varepsilon}\delta\iota\delta\acute{\alpha}\chi\theta\eta\nu$, "teach," has a narrower meaning than $\pi\alpha\iota\delta\varepsilon\acute{\nu}\omega$, "educate, teach," and takes the same constructions.

The noun $\delta\acute{\iota}\varkappa\eta$, $\delta\acute{\iota}\varkappa\eta\varsigma$, $\acute{\eta}$, "justice; lawsuit," has a wide range of meanings. It can refer to traditional custom or practice, to judgments based on traditional usage, to lawsuits or trials or penalties exacted, or to the principle of justice.

The adjective $\ddot{\alpha}\delta\iota\varkappa o\varsigma$, $\ddot{\alpha}\delta\iota\varkappa o\nu$, "unjust," consists of the stem of the noun $\delta\acute{\iota}\varkappa\eta$ + alpha privative. As a compound adjective, it has only two sets of endings.

The verb $\dot{\varepsilon}\theta\acute{\varepsilon}\lambda\omega$, $\dot{\varepsilon}\theta\varepsilon\lambda\acute{\eta}\sigma\omega$, $\acute{\eta}\theta\acute{\varepsilon}\lambda\eta\sigma\alpha$, $\acute{\eta}\theta\acute{\varepsilon}\lambda\eta\varkappa\alpha$, ——, ——, "be willing, wish," lacks Principal Parts V and VI. The absence of one or more Principal Parts will be indicated by dashes, as above. Note that the $\dot{\varepsilon}$- of Principal Parts I and II belongs to the stem and is NOT the past indicative augment. Note also that Principal Part III begins with $\acute{\eta}$- rather than with the past indicative augment $\dot{\varepsilon}$-. The unaugmented aorist tense stem of this verb is $\dot{\varepsilon}\theta\varepsilon\lambda\eta\sigma$-. IN VERBS WHERE THE STEM BEGINS WITH A VOWEL, THE PAST INDICATIVE AUGMENT IS SHOWN NOT BY THE PREFIX $\dot{\varepsilon}$- BUT BY A LENGTHENING OF THE INITIAL VOWEL OF THE STEM.

The various initial vowels and diphthongs are usually augmented as in the chart below. Exceptions will be pointed out in the Vocabulary Notes. Note that short α is lengthened to η, NOT to $\bar{\alpha}$.

UNAUGMENTED	AUGMENTED
α	η
ε	η
ι	$\bar{\iota}$
o	ω
υ	$\bar{\upsilon}$
$\alpha\iota$	η
$\alpha\upsilon$	$\eta\upsilon$
$\varepsilon\iota$	η
$\varepsilon\upsilon$	$\eta\upsilon$
$o\iota$	ω

Initial ου is not augmented. Also, the diphthongs listed above are sometimes left unaugmented. Initial long vowels remain the same, except that ᾱ changes to η.

The rules above are to be learned as new vowels are encountered.

Thus, the imperfect indicative active of ἐθέλω is conjugated ἤθελον, ἤθελες, etc. Note also that in Principal Part IV of ἐθέλω initial ἠ- is part of the tense stem; in the pluperfect it remains unchanged.

The verb ἐθέλω takes an infinitive to indicate the action which one wishes to perform. This infinitive, like the infinitive with κελεύω, is called an object infinitive because it serves as the direct object of the main verb. The infinitive, in turn, can take a direct and/or indirect object of its own.

> ἐθέλω τὸν ἀδελφὸν παιδεῦσαι.
> I wish to educate my brother.

The negative οὐκ ἐθέλω can often be translated "refuse."

The particles εἰ and ἐάν both mean "if"; each introduces the protasis of certain types of conditional sentence (cf. Section 41). The particle εἰ is proclitic; the particle ἐάν consists of εἰ + ἄν. They are NOT interchangeable.

The accent of the particle καίτοι, "and further, and yet," is an exception to the rules for the possibilities of accent.

The adjective καλός, καλή, καλόν, "beautiful, noble, good," combines the idea of physical beauty with that of moral goodness. The adjective ἀγαθός, ἀγαθή, ἀγαθόν, "good," combines the ideas of moral goodness and serviceability.

The preposition μετά can take either the genitive or the accusative case. With the genitive it expresses accompaniment and means "with" as in the English sentence "He went with me to the store." Distinguish this use from the instrumental meaning "with" of the dative case (e.g., "He persuaded me with words"). When it takes the accusative case, μετά means "after" either in space or in time.

μετὰ τῶν φίλων	with the friends
μετὰ τὴν μάχην	after the battle
μετὰ τὸν Ὅμηρον	after Homer

The noun μοῖρα, μοίρας, ἡ, "fate," has the basic meaning "portion" or "allotment." What is allotted to man constitutes his destiny.

The noun μοῦσα, μούσης, ἡ, "muse," denotes the goddesses invoked by poets such as Homer.

The noun νεᾱνίᾱς, νεᾱνίου, ὁ, "young man," contains the root νε-, which is cognate with English new.

The noun ὁπλίτης, ὁπλίτου, ὁ, "hoplite, heavy-armed foot-soldier," is formed from the stem of the noun ὅπλον, ὅπλου, τό, "tool; (pl.) weapons" + the suffix -ίτης. Many nouns denoting those who perform a certain function have this suffix. The noun ὅπλον, in a specialized usage, designated the large shield which hoplites carried. Cf. the noun πολίτης, πολίτου, ὁ, which denotes a "citizen" of a city and is formed from the noun for "city." Cf. also the nouns ποιητής, ποιητοῦ, ὁ, "poet," and στρατιώτης, στρατιώτου, ὁ, "soldier," which have a similar suffix, -της. The noun ποιητής means literally "he who makes"; the noun στρατιώτης comes from the word for "army" and means literally "army man."

The adverb πάλαι, "long ago," can be used in the attributive position with nouns, as can the adverb νῦν, "now."

> οἱ πάλαι ἄνθρωποι > men long ago
> = men of old
>
> οἱ νῦν ἄνθρωποι > men now
> = men of the present day

The preposition σύν + dat., "with," indicates accompaniment or manner. To indicate that one person accompanies another, the preposition μετά + gen. is usually employed in Attic prose, but σύν appears in certain traditional phrases, and also where the notion of joint effort is important.

> σὺν θεοῖς   (accompaniment) > with (the help of the) gods
>
> σὺν ὅπλοις   (accompaniment) > with weapons
>
> σὺν δίκη   (manner)
> with justice

The prepositional phrase σὺν ὅπλοις means that people have weapons with them, but the dative ὅπλοις standing alone shows instrumentality: e.g., "The soldiers are standing at attention with (σύν) their weapons"; "the soldiers killed the enemy with their weapons" (dative case without a preposition).

The adjective φίλος, φίλη, φίλον, "dear, beloved, one's own," is identical in the masculine with the noun φίλος, φίλου, ὁ, "friend." Compare ὁ φίλος, "the friend," with ὁ φίλος ποιητής, "the beloved poet."

43. PASSIVE VOICE

All verb forms seen thus far have been in the active voice, in which the subject performs the action: John loves Mary. In the passive voice, the subject of the verb receives the action of the verb: John is loved by Mary.

Drills I and II, p. 133, may now be done.

1. PRESENT INDICATIVE PASSIVE

To form the present indicative passive, add the following endings to the present tense stem:

	S	P
1	-ομαι	-ομεθα
2	-η/-ει	-εσθε
3	-εται	-ονται

Thus, the forms of the present indicative passive of παιδεύω are as follows:

	S
1	παιδεύομαι	I am being educated I am educated (habitually)
2	παιδεύῃ/παιδεύει	you are being educated you are educated (habitually)
3	παιδεύεται	he/she/it is being educated he/she/it is educated (habitually)

1	παιδευόμεθα	we are being educated we are educated (habitually)
2	παιδεύεσθε	you are being educated you are educated (habitually)
3	παιδεύονται	they are being educated they are educated (habitually)

Observations: (1) The endings of the present indicative passive consist of the thematic vowel -ε/ο- and the primary passive person markers -μαι, -σαι, -ται, -μεθα, -σθε, -νται. In the second person singular, the original form of the ending was *-εσαι. The intervocalic -σ- (one occurring between two vowels) dropped out, and the remaining vowel and diphthong combined to give the alternative endings -η and -ει, with no difference in meaning.

(2) The alternative ending -ει of the second person singular, present indicative passive is the same as that of the third person singular, present indicative active. Thus, without any context, there are two possible sets of translations for the form παιδεύει: "you are being educated/are educated (habitually)" and "he/she/it is educating/educates (habitually)." Context usually allows one to identify the person and voice of the form.

(3) The alternative ending -η of the second person singular, present indicative passive is the same as that of the third person singular, present subjunctive active. Context usually allows one to distinguish between the indicative παιδεύη ("you are being educated/are educated [habitually]") and the subjunctive (e.g., in a purpose clause, "in order that he/she/it may be educating/may educate [habitually]").

2. IMPERFECT INDICATIVE PASSIVE

To form the imperfect indicative passive, prefix the past indicative augment to the present tense stem. To the augmented present tense stem add the following endings:

	S	P
1	-ομην	-ομεθα
2	-ου	-εσθε
3	-ετο	-οντο

Thus, the forms of the imperfect indicative passive of παιδεύω are as follows:

S

1	ἐπαιδευόμην	I was being educated I used to be educated
2	ἐπαιδεύου	you were being educated you used to be educated
3	ἐπαιδεύετο	he/she/it was being educated he/she/it used to be educated

1	ἐπαιδευόμεθα	we were being educated we used to be educated
2	ἐπαιδεύεσθε	you were being educated you used to be educated
3	ἐπαιδεύοντο	they were being educated they used to be educated

Observation: The endings of the imperfect indicative passive consist of the thematic vowel -ε/ο- and the secondary passive person markers -μην, -σο, -το, -μεθα, -σθε, -ντο. In the second person singular, the original form of the ending was *-εσο. The intervocalic -σ- dropped out, and the two vowels combined to give the ending -ου.

3. PRESENT SUBJUNCTIVE PASSIVE

To form the present subjunctive passive, add the following endings to the present tense stem:

	S	P
1	-ωμαι	-ωμεθα
2	-ῃ	-ησθε
3	-ηται	-ωνται

Thus, the forms of the present subjunctive passive of παιδεύω are as follows:

	S	P
1	παιδεύωμαι	παιδευώμεθα
2	παιδεύῃ	παιδεύησθε
3	παιδεύηται	παιδεύωνται

Observations: (1) No translation of any subjunctive is ever given in the paradigms. A present subjunctive passive differs from a present subjunctive active in voice alone and will be used in the same kinds of clauses as the present subjunctive active.

(2) As do the endings of the subjunctive active, the endings of the subjunctive passive show a lengthening of the thematic vowel of the ending. Compare, e.g., the first person plurals of the present indicative active   παιδεύομεν

present subjunctive active   παιδεύωμεν
present indicative passive   παιδευόμεθα
present subjunctive passive   παιδευώμεθα.

(3) Note that the present subjunctive passive uses the primary person markers -μαι, -σαι, -ται, -μεθα, -σθε, -νται.

(4) The original form of the second person singular, present subjunctive passive was *-ησαι. The intervocalic -σ- dropped out, and the remaining vowel and diphthong combined to give the ending -η. Since this ending has two other uses, the form παιδεύη can be one of three different things:

third person singular, present subjunctive active second person singular, present indicative passive second person singular, present subjunctive passive.

Context usually allows one to determine the meaning.

4. PRESENT OPTATIVE PASSIVE

To form the present optative passive, add the following endings to the present tense stem:

	S	P
1	-οιμην	-οιμεθα
2	-οιο	-οισθε
3	-οιτο	-οιντο

Thus, the forms of the present optative passive of παιδεύω are as follows:

	S	P
1	παιδευοίμην	παιδευοίμεθα
2	παιδεύοιο	παιδεύοισθε
3	παιδεύοιτο	παιδεύοιντο

Observations: (1) No translation of any optative is ever given in the paradigms. A present optative passive differs from a present optative active in voice alone and is used in the same kinds of clauses as the present optative active.

(2) As in the endings of the present optative active, all the endings of the present optative passive begin with the initial diphthong -οι- (thematic vowel -ο- and optative suffix -ι-). Compare, e.g., the first person plural forms of the

present subjunctive active	παιδεύωμεν
present optative active	παιδεύοιμεν
present indicative passive	παιδευόμεθα
present subjunctive passive	παιδευώμεθα
present optative passive	παιδευοίμεθα

(3) Note that the present optative passive uses the secondary passive person markers -μην, -σο, -το, -μεθα, -σθε, -ντο.

(4) The ending of the second person singular, present optative passive was *-οισο. The intervocalic -σ- dropped out to give the ending -οιο.

5. PRESENT INFINITIVE PASSIVE

To form the present infinitive passive, add to the present tense stem the ending -εσθαι.

Thus, the present infinitive passive of παιδεύω is παιδεύεσθαι

to be being educated
to be educated

As in the present infinitive active, tense in the present infinitive passive shows progressive/repeated aspect, not time.

6. AORIST INDICATIVE PASSIVE

Unlike the present passive, which is formed from the same tense stem as the present active and which shows its passive voice by the use of passive endings, the aorist passive uses a different tense stem derived from Principal Part VI. The aorist passive endings use active person markers; voice is shown by the tense stem itself.

To form the aorist indicative passive, drop the ending -ην from Principal Part VI. There remain the past indicative augment ἐ- and the aorist passive tense stem. To the augmented aorist passive tense stem add the following endings:

1	-ην	-ημεν
2	-ης	-ητε
3	-η	-ησαν

Thus, the augmented aorist passive tense stem of παιδεύω is ἐπαιδευθ-, and the forms of the aorist indicative passive are as follows:

	S
1	ἐπαιδεύθην	I was educated
2	ἐπαιδεύθης	you were educated
3	ἐπαιδεύθη	he/she/it was educated

	P
1	ἐπαιδεύθημεν	we were educated
2	ἐπαιδεύθητε	you were educated
3	ἐπαιδεύθησαν	they were educated

Observation: The aorist passive endings consist of the tense vowel -η- and a set of active person markers: -ν, -ς, —, -μεν, -τε, -σαν (cf., e.g., the imperfect ἐπαίδευον, ἐπαίδευες, ἐπαίδευε–, ἐπαιδεύομεν, ἐπαιδεύετε, and the third person plural, aorist indicative active ἐπαίδευσαν [where, of course, the –σ– is part of the tense stem]). Thus, in the aorist indicative passive, voice is shown not by the person marker but by the aorist passive tense stem alone.

7. AORIST SUBJUNCTIVE PASSIVE

To form the aorist subjunctive passive, add the subjunctive active endings to the unaugmented aorist passive tense stem, which is obtained by dropping the past indicative augment and the ending -ην from Principal Part VI.

Thus, the unaugmented aorist passive tense stem of παιδεύω is παιδευθ-, and the forms of the aorist subjunctive passive of παιδεύω are as follows:

	S	P
1	παιδευθῶ	παιδευθῶμεν
2	παιδευθῇς	παιδευθῆτε
3	παιδευθῇ	παιδευθῶσι(ν)

Observations: (1) As in the aorist indicative passive, voice in the aorist subjunctive passive is shown by the tense stem alone, and not by the person markers of the endings.

(2) The accent on the aorist subjunctive passive in all its forms is a circumflex on the initial vowel of the ending. The original form was παιδευθέω, with -ε-, a short-vowel grade of the tense vowel -η- of the indicative, and the usual subjunctive active endings. The two vowels contracted to give -ῶ, etc.

8. AORIST OPTATIVE PASSIVE

To form the aorist optative passive, add the following endings to the unaugmented aorist passive tense stem:

	S	P
1	-ειην	-εῖμεν/-ειημεν
2	-ειης	-εῖτε/-ειητε
3	-ειη	-εῖεν/-ειησαν

Thus, the forms of the aorist optative passive of παιδεύω are as follows:

	S	P
1	παιδευθείην	παιδευθεῖμεν/παιδευθείημεν
2	παιδευθείης	παιδευθεῖτε/παιδευθείητε
3	παιδευθείη	παιδευθεῖεν/παιδευθείησαν

Observations: (1) The optative passive ending -ειην can be analyzed as consisting of the tense vowel -ε- (short-vowel grade of the -η- of ἐπαιδεύθην; cf. παιδευθῶ < *παιδευθέω) + -ιη- (optative suffix) + -ν (first person singular person marker; cf. the imperfect indicative active ἐπαίδευον and the aorist indicative passive ἐπαιδεύθην). In the plural, the optative suffix was either -ῑ- or -ιη-, both of which combined with the tense vowel -ε- to form the diphthong -ει-.

Note that in the third person plural the ending with the optative suffix -ῑ- uses the person marker -εν; the alternative ending with the optative suffix -ιη- uses the person marker

-σαν. There is no difference in meaning between the alternative forms.

(2) As in the aorist indicative and subjunctive passive, voice is shown by the tense stem alone, not by the person markers of the endings.

(3) NOTE THAT THE ACCENT IN THE AORIST OPTATIVE PASSIVE NEVER GOES BACK BEYOND THE -ι- OF THE ENDING. It is acute or circumflex as the rules for the possibilities of accent dictate.

9. AORIST INFINITIVE PASSIVE

To form the aorist infinitive passive, add to the unaugmented aorist passive tense stem the ending -ῆναι.

Thus, the aorist infinitive passive of παιδεύω is > παιδευθῆναι

> to be educated

Like all the other infinitives, the aorist infinitive passive shows aspect only.
Compare:

present infinitive passive	παιδεύεσθαι	to be being educated to be educated (habitually)
aorist infinitive passive	παιδευθῆναι	to be educated (once and for all)

Observation: IN AN INFINITIVE, THE SYLLABLE PRECEDING THE ENDING -ναι IS ALWAYS ACCENTED.

10. FUTURE INDICATIVE PASSIVE

The future indicative passive is formed on a stem different from that of the future indicative active. In this respect, it is similar to the aorist indicative passive, which is also formed on a stem different from that of the aorist indicative active.

To form the future indicative passive, to the unaugmented aorist passive tense stem add the suffix -ησ- to form the future passive tense stem. To the future passive tense stem add the same endings as those used in the present indicative passive.

Thus, the unaugmented aorist passive tense stem of παιδεύω is παιδευθ-, and the future passive tense stem is παιδευθησ-. The forms of the future indicative passive of παιδεύω are as follows:

S

1	παιδευθήσομαι	I shall be educated
		I shall be being educated
2	παιδευθήσει/	you will be educated παιδευθήσῃ	you will be being educated
3	παιδευθήσεται	he/she/it will be educated he/she/it will be being educated

P

1	παιδευθησόμεθα	we shall be educated we shall be being educated
2	παιδευθήσεσθε	you will be educated you will be being educated
3	παιδευθήσονται	they will be educated they will be being educated

Observations: (1) The passive voice is shown in the future indicative passive by the future passive tense stem and by the passive endings.

(2) The -σ- of the future passive tense stem is similar to the -σ- which appears so frequently in the future indicative active. Cf. παιδεύσω.

(3) Like the future indicative active, the future indicative passive can express either simple or progressive/repeated aspect.

11. PERFECT INDICATIVE PASSIVE

To form the perfect indicative passive, obtain the perfect passive tense stem by dropping the ending -μαι from Principal Part V. To the perfect passive tense stem add the following endings:

	S	P
1	-μαι	-μεθα
2	-σαι	-σθε
3	-ται	-νται

Thus, the perfect passive tense stem of παιδεύω is πεπαιδευ-, and the forms of the perfect indicative passive are as follows:

S

1	πεπαίδευμαι	I have been educated
2	πεπαίδευσαι	you have been educated
3	πεπαίδευται	he/she/it has been educated

1	πεπαιδεύμεθα	we have been educated
2	πεπαίδευσθε	you have been educated
3	πεπαίδευνται	they have been educated

Observations: (1) The endings of the perfect indicative passive are simply the person markers of the primary passive endings without the thematic vowel. Compare the first person singular, perfect indicative passive πεπαίδευμαι with the first person singular, present indicative passive παιδεύομαι.

(2) Note that the second person singular, perfect indicative passive ending retains the -σ- that had dropped out of the other second person singular forms; cf., e.g., παιδεύῃ <*παιδεύεσαι.

(3) Like the perfect indicative active, the perfect indicative passive shows completed aspect in present time.

12. PLUPERFECT INDICATIVE PASSIVE

To form the pluperfect indicative passive, prefix the past indicative augment to the perfect passive tense stem. To the augmented perfect passive tense stem add the following endings:

	S	P
1	-μην	-μεθα
2	-σο	-σθε
3	-το	-ντο

Thus, the augmented perfect passive tense stem of παιδεύω is ἐπεπαιδευ-, and the forms of the pluperfect indicative passive are as follows:

S

1	ἐπεπαιδεύμην	I had been educated
2	ἐπεπαίδευσο	you had been educated
3	ἐπεπαίδευτο	he/she/it had been educated

1	ἐπεπαιδεύμεθα	we had been educated
2	ἐπεπαίδευσθε	you had been educated
3	ἐπεπαίδευντο	they had been educated

Observations: (1) The endings of the pluperfect indicative passive are simply the person markers of the secondary passive endings without the thematic vowel. Compare the first person singular, pluperfect indicative passive ἐπεπαιδεύμην with the first person singular, imperfect indicative passive ἐπαιδευόμην.

(2) Note that the second person singular of the pluperfect indicative passive retains the -σ- that had dropped out of other second person singular forms; cf., e.g., ἐπαιδεύου > *ἐπαιδεύεσο.

(3) Like the pluperfect indicative active, the pluperfect indicative passive indicates action complete from the point of view of past time.

13. PERFECT INFINITIVE PASSIVE

To form the perfect infinitive passive, add to the perfect passive tense stem the ending -σθαι.

Thus, the perfect infinitive passive of παιδεύω is πεπαιδεῦσθαι

to have been educated

The perfect infinitive passive shows completed aspect only.

Observations: (1) The ending of the perfect infinitive passive is the same as that of the present infinitive passive except that it lacks the thematic vowel. Compare the present infinitive passive παιδεύεσθαι with the perfect infinitive passive πεπαιδεῦσθαι.

(2) THE PERFECT INFINITIVE PASSIVE DOES NOT HAVE RECESSIVE ACCENT; IT IS ALWAYS ACCENTED ON THE PENULT. Final -αι, as usual, counts as short for purposes of accentuation.

Drill III.1–15, page 133, may now be done.

14. CONSONANT STEMS

When the perfect passive tense stem ends in a vowel or a diphthong, as in λέλυμαι or πεπαίδευμαι, adding the endings of the perfect passive or the pluperfect passive presents no problem. But when the perfect passive tense stem ends in a consonant, adding the endings produced awkward clusters of consonants at the juncture between stem and ending. Greek altered many such consonant clusters in order to make them easier to pronounce, and Principal Part V often has the final consonant of the stem in an altered form. For example, in the verb γράφω, the original first person singular, perfect indicative passive had been *γέγραφμαι, but the final -φ- of the stem was changed to -μ- before the -μ- of the ending -μαι. Thus, one cannot simply drop the ending -μαι from Principal Part V and use γεγραμ- as a tense stem. Instead, one must add the endings to the original consonant of the tense stem and make any changes necessary.

Whatever the original final consonant of the stem may have been, in the verbs learned thus far the various combinations of final consonant and -μαι give only three possible results in Principal Part V:

-μμαι   (where the original consonant was a labial [π, β, φ]):
        e.g., γέγραμμαι, τέθαμμαι, πέπεμμαι

-γμαι   (where the original consonant was a palatal [κ, γ, χ]):
        e.g., δεδίδαγμαι, πεφύλαγμαι, τέταγμαι

-σμαι   (where the original consonant usually was a dental [τ, δ, θ] or σ): e.g., κεκέλευσμαι

Changes must be made in the final consonants of the stems of these verbs in accordance with the patterns given below. The perfect passive of verbs not following these patterns will be given in the vocabulary notes as these verbs are introduced.

1. PERFECT INDICATIVE PASSIVE OF CONSONANT STEMS

-μμαι

S	1	γέγραμμαι	(*γέγραφμαι)	πέπεμμαι	(*πέπεμπμαι)
	2	γέγραψαι	(*γέγραφσαι)	πέπεμψαι	(*πέπεμπσαι)
	3	γέγραπται	(*γέγραφται)	πέπεμπται	(πέπεμπται)

P	1	γεγράμμεθα (*γεγράφμεθα)	πεπέμμεθα (*πεπέμπμεθα)
	2	γέγραφθε (*γέγραφσθε)	πέπεμφθε (*πέπεμπσθε)
	3	 (*γεγράφνται)	 (*πεπέμπνται)

Observations: (1) Most verbs with a Principal Part V ending in -μμαι will be conjugated like γέγραμμαι; those that are not will be pointed out in the vocabulary notes. Note that any labial (π, β, φ) gives ψ in the second person singular, π in the third person singular, and μ in the first person plural. In the second person plural, the σ of -σθε is dropped and the final labial of the stem becomes the aspirate φ. In the third person plural, the original form *γεγράφνται was replaced by a compound form which is given in the Appendix.

(2) In πέπεμμαι the stem is πεπεμπ-, to which -μαι was added. The resulting form *πέπεμπμαι was simplified to πέπεμμαι; the same simplification also appears in the first person plural πεπέμμεθα. Elsewhere, both the nasal and the labial of the tense stem πεπεμπ- appear, with the labial the same as that in γέγραμμαι: πέπεμψαι, πέπεμπται, πέπεμφθε.

S	1	πεφύλαγμαι	(*πεφύλακμαι)	κεκέλευσμαι
	2	πεφύλαξαι	(*πεφύλακσαι)	κεκέλευσαι

P	1	πεφυλάγμεθα	(*πεφυλάκμεθα)	κεκελεύσμεθα
	2	πεφύλαχθε	(*πεφύλακσθε)	κεκέλευσθε
	3		(*πεφυλάκνται)	***

Observations: (1) In verbs with a Principal Part V ending in -γμαι, the palatal (κ, γ, χ) appears as a γ before the μ of the first person singular and plural πεφύλαγμαι and πεφυλάγμεθα, as a ξ in the second person singular πεφύλαξαι, and as a κ in the third person singular. In the second person plural, the σ of the ending drops, and the final consonant of the stem becomes the aspirate χ: *πεφύλακσθε > πεφύλαχθε. The third person plural form is a compound which is given in the Appendix.

(2) Most verbs with a Principal Part V ending in -σμαι are conjugated like κεκέλευσμαι; those that are not are pointed out in the vocabulary notes. The ending is simply added to the stem with no changes except in the second person singular and plural, where the combination -σσ- is simplified to a single -σ-: *κεκέλευσσαι > κεκέλευσαι

*κεκέλευσσθε > κεκέλευσθε.

2. PLUPERFECT INDICATIVE PASSIVE OF CONSONANT STEMS

Exactly the same changes occur in the pluperfect indicative passive of consonant stems as in the perfect indicative passive.

-μμαι

S	1	ἐγεγράμμην	ἐπεπέμμην
	2	ἐγέγραψο	ἐπέπεμψο

S	1	ἐπεφυλάγμην	ἐκεκελεύσμην

P	1	ἐπεφυλάγμεθα	ἐκεκελεύσμεθα
	2	ἐπεφύλαχθε	ἐκεκέλευσθε
	3	***	***

3. PERFECT INFINITIVE PASSIVE OF CONSONANT STEMS

γεγράφθαι   πεπέμφθαι   πεφυλάχθαι   κεκελεῦσθαι

Observation: In the perfect infinitive passive, the combination of the consonants of the stem and the ending -σθαι produces the same result as in the second person plural of the perfect indicative passive:
the σ of the ending is dropped and a final labial or palatal of the stem is aspirated. Note also that the accent is fixed on the penult, and that the -αι of the endings counts, as usual, as short for purposes of accentuation.

Drill III.16–30, pages 133-34, may now be done.

44. GENITIVE OF PERSONAL AGENT

DATIVE OF PERSONAL AGENT WITH THE PERFECT AND PLUPERFECT PASSIVE

DATIVE OF MEANS

With most passive verbs, the personal agent, i.e., the person by whom the action of the verb is performed, is expressed by the preposition ὑπό + the genitive. This is called the genitive of personal agent.

ὁ λόγος ὑπὸ τοῦ Ὁμήρου γράφεται.
The speech is being written by Homer.

ὁ πόλεμος ὑπὸ τῶν στρατιωτῶν ἐπαύθη.
The war was stopped by the soldiers.

With the perfect and the pluperfect tenses, the personal agent is expressed by the dative case without any preposition.   This is called the dative of personal agent.

ὁ λόγος Ὁμήρῳ γέγραπται.
The speech has been written by Homer.

ὁ πόλεμος τοῖς στρατιώταις ἐπέπαυτο.
The war had been stopped by the soldiers.

A thing with which something is done is put in the dative (the dative of means or instrument) without a preposition.

ὑπὸ τοῦ Ὁμήρου ἐπαύθησαν οἱ στρατιῶται λόγῳ.
The soldiers were stopped by Homer by (means of) a speech.

Drill IV, page 134, may now be done.

45. SUBSTANTIVE USE OF THE ADJECTIVE

Since both the article and the adjective, as well as the noun, have gender, number, and case, phrases such as ὁ ἀγαθὸς ἄνθρωπος, "the good man," were considered redundant. Where the noun had a general meaning of "man," "woman," or "thing," Greek often left the noun out and let the adjective stand as a noun. Compare the English sentence, "The good die young," where the adjective "good" takes on the meaning "good people." This is called the substantive use of the adjective, and adjectives so used are called substantives. Substantives can stand in any gender, number, or case, and can perform all the functions of nouns in any sentence.

ἡ ἀγαθή	the good woman
τὸ ἀγαθόν	the good thing, the good οἱ ἀγαθοί	the good men
ἀγαθοί	good men
ἀγαθά	good things, i.e., goods
δῶρα ταῖς ἀγαθαῖς ἐπέμψαμεν.	We sent gifts to the good women.

46. SUBSTANTIVE USE OF THE ARTICLE

Since the definite article has gender, number, and case, it can, accompanied by an adverb, prepositional phrase, or other modifier, be used as a substantive: its gender and number indicate the person(s) or thing(s) named, and its case shows its relationship to the rest of the sentence.

οἱ ἐν τῇ νήσῳ
the men on the island

τὰς νῦν
the women now
women now (generic use of the article) women of the present time

τὰ τοῦ πολέμου
the things of war
   (= the affairs of war)

When two articles used as substantives are contrasted by μέν and δέ, they can be translated by "the one . . . , the other," "some . . . , others."

ὁ μὲν διδάσκει, ὁ δὲ διδάσκεται.
The one teaches, the other is taught.

τοὺς μὲν πέμπομεν, τοὺς δὲ φυλάττομεν.
Some we send, but others we guard.
We send some men (one group), but we guard others (another group).

With a substantive use of an adjective or the article the negative οὐ is used for specific substantives, μή for generic substantives; cf. Section 16.4, page 29.

οἱ οὐκ ἐν τῇ νήσῳ
those specific men not on the island

οἱ μὴ ἐν τῇ νήσῳ
those not on the island
whoever are not on the island

47. THE ARTICULAR INFINITIVE

The infinitive is a verbal noun. Like other verb forms, the infinitive has tense and voice. Like the noun, the infinitive can appear in various cases which indicate its function in the sentence.

When used with the verb κελεύω, "command," the infinitive is an object infinitive, i.e., stands as the direct object of the verb, along with the person commanded (cf. page 102).

We order the brother to send gifts.

In this example, the person commanded, τὸν ἀδελφόν, is in the accusative case and is a direct object of κελεύομεν. The infinitive πέμψαι is also a direct object of κελεύομεν and can be considered to stand in the accusative case. But infinitives are indeclinable verbal nouns, so that context, not case endings, shows the relation of this infinitive to the rest of the sentence.

Attic Greek also developed a way of employing the infinitive more freely in various cases by having it accompanied by a neuter singular form of the definite article to indicate the infinitive's case. Such an infinitive accompanied by the article is called the articular infinitive.

The articular infinitive is often best translated by the English gerund ("writing") rather than by the English infinitive ("to write"). Do not confuse the English gerund, a verbal noun ("Writing a book is good"), with the English participle, a verbal adjective ("the man writing with a red pen").

The tense of the articular infinitive, like that of the subjunctive, the optative, and other infinitives, indicates aspect, not time: progressive/repeated aspect in the present tense, simple aspect in the aorist tense, and completed aspect in the perfect tense. The articular infinitive can occur in any voice.

Nom. S	τὸ γράφειν	to be writing, to write (habitually), writing
Gen.	τοῦ γράφειν	of writing (progressive/repeated aspect)
Dat.	τῷ γράφειν	by writing (progressive/repeated aspect)
Acc.	τὸ γράφειν	writing (progressive/repeated aspect)
Nom. S	τὸ γράψαι	to write (once and for all), writing
Gen.	τοῦ γράψαι	of writing (once and for all)
Dat.	τῷ γράψαι	by writing (once and for all)
Acc.	τὸ γράψαι	writing (once and for all)
Nom. S	τὸ γεγραφέναι	to have written, having written
Gen.	τοῦ γεγραφέναι	of having written
Dat.	τῷ γεγραφέναι	by having written
Acc.	τὸ γεγραφέναι	having written

An articular infinitive is used like any other noun.

καλὸν τὸ γράφειν.
To write is good.
Writing is good.

πρὸ τοῦ γράψαι
before writing

τῷ γράφειν
by means of writing

διὰ τὸ γεγραφέναι on account of having written

The negative of the articular infinitive is μή.

κακὸν τὸ μὴ γράφειν
Not to write is bad.
Not writing is bad.

Compare: οὐ κακὸν τὸ γράφειν.
To write is not bad.
Writing is not bad.

In the second example, the οὐ negates the predicate adjective κακόν.

VOCABULARY NOTES

The noun ἀργύριον, ἀργυρίου, τό, "small coin; money," consists of the stem of the word ἄργυρος, ἀργύρου, ὁ, "silver," and the diminutive suffix -ιον. A diminutive suffix indicates a small quantity or size of the noun to which it is added, or affection or contempt. The suffix also appears in the noun βιβλίον, βιβλίου, τό, "book," which is a diminutive of the word for papyrus.

In ἄρχω, ἄρξω, ἦρξα, ἦρχα, ἦργμαι, ἤρχθην, "rule, command," the basic root is ἀρχ-. The aspiration is lost in the future, the aorist, and the perfect passive (ἄρξω < *ἄρχσω, ἦρξα < *ἦρχσα, ἦργμαι < *ἦρχμαι). The past indicative augment of a word beginning with a vowel is shown by lengthening the initial vowel: thus ἦρχον, ἦρχες, ἦρχε(ν), etc. in the imperfect indicative. Remember to remove the past indicative augment when forming the aorist subjunctive, optative, and infinitive, e.g., ἄρξωμεν, the first person plural, aorist subjunctive active; ἀρχθῶμεν, the first person plural, aorist subjunctive passive. In the perfect active and passive, the ἠ- is part of the tense stem: thus ἠρχέναι, the perfect infinitive active; cf. ἠθεληκέναι, the perfect infinitive active of ἐθέλω. The pluperfect indicative active is ἤρχη, ἤρχης, ἤρχει(ν), etc. Note that ἄρχω does not take a direct object in the accusative, but instead governs a genitive. The related verbal noun ἀρχή, ἀρχῆς, ἡ, "beginning; rule, empire," was given in Unit 4.

In βλάπτω, βλάψω, ἔβλαψα, βέβλαφα, βέβλαμμαι, ἐβλάβην or ἐβλάφθην, "hurt, harm," the basic root is βλαβ-. The present is formed with the suffix -ιω = [yo]: *βλάβιω> βλάπτω. In the future and in the aorist, the final vowel of the root βλαβ- combines with -σ- to give -ψ-. Note the aspirated perfect active (cf. πέπομφα, πεφύλαχα, τέταχα). The perfect passive comes from *βέβλαβμαι. In the aorist passive there are alternative forms with no difference in meaning: ἐβλάφθην, which is formed with the suffix -θ-, and ἐβλάβην with no suffix; both must be learned. The future passive is formed from ἐβλάβην: thus βλαβήσομαι. Note the similarities and differences between βλάπτω and θάπτω < *θάφιω.

Note the circumflex accent on γῆ, γῆς, ἡ, "earth, land." The accent remains a circumflex throughout the declension, e.g., τὴν γῆν. The word means "earth" as opposed to sky or sea, as well as the "earth" the farmer works. It can also be synonymous with χώρᾱ, χώρᾱς, ἡ as meaning "country" as opposed to city. Γῆ is also the mother of the gods in Greek mythology.

διδάσκαλος, διδασκάλου, ὁ, "teacher," is an agent noun formed from the present stem of the verb διδάσκω, "teach."

The primary meaning of δόξα, δόξης, ἡ is "expectation, belief, opinion." The opinion that people have of a person is that person's "reputation," and a positive reputation is that person's "glory." Often, but not always, δόξα as "belief" is contrasted with "knowledge."

In ἀθάνατος, ἀθάνατον note the alpha privative and the fact that the compound adjective has only two endings; cf. ἄδικος, ἄδικον.

With the adjective ἱερός, ἱερά, ἱερόν, "holy, sacred to (+ gen.)," Greek idiom uses the genitive case to express the deity to whom someone or something is sacred. ἱερόν, ἱεροῦ, τό, "shrine," is a neuter singular substantive use of the adjective.

The adjective ἱκανός, ἱκανή, ἱκανόν means "sufficient" when used of things, "capable" when used of people. Like ἄξιος, ἀξία, ἄξιον, "worthy," of Unit 4, ἱκανός, ἱκανή, ἱκανόν can be followed by an epexegetical ("explaining") infinitive: ὁ ἱκανὸς τοὺς πολίτᾱς πεῖσαι, "the man capable to persuade the citizens, the man capable of persuading the citizens."

Note that ἵππος, ἵππου, ὁ or ἡ is either masculine, "stallion," or feminine, "mare." The gender will be indicated by an article or adjective; cf. ὁ θεός, "god"; ἡ θεός, "goddess."

The root of πείθω, πείσω, ἔπεισα, πέπεικα, πέπεισμαι, ἐπείσθην, "persuade," is πειθ-. The final -θ- of the root disappears in the future, the aorist, and the perfect active. In the perfect passive and the aorist passive, it has been replaced by -σ-: πέπεισμαι, ἐπείσθην. A -σ- also appears in Principal Parts V and VI of κελεύω: κεκέλευσμαι, ἐκελεύσθην. Like κελεύω, πείθω can also be followed by an object infinitive: πείθω someone (in the accusative) to do (in the infinitive) something.

πολέμιος, πολεμίᾱ, πολέμιον, "hostile," is derived from the noun πόλεμος, πολέμου, ὁ, "war." The person toward whom one feels hostile is put in the dative case: οἱ ἀδελφοὶ οἱ τοῖς ἐν τῇ νήσῳ πολέμιοι, "the brothers hostile to the men on the island." As a substantive, the word means "enemy," not as a personal enemy but as someone against whom one fights in war.

The root of πράττω, πρᾱξω, ἔπρᾱξα, πέπρᾱχα (trans.) or πέπρᾱγα (intrans.), πέπρᾱγμαι, ἐπρᾱχθην, "do; fare," is πρᾱκ-, with a long alpha. Principal Part I is formed with the suffix ιω: *πρᾱκιω > πράττω. The principal parts have a pattern similar to that of φυλάττω and τάττω. πράττω can be either transitive or intransitive: κακὸν ἔργον πράττω, "I am doing an evil deed"; εὖ πράττω, "I do/fare well." The aspirated perfect is only transitive: κακὸν ἔργον πέπρᾱχα, "I have done an evil deed"; πέπρᾱγα is only intransitive: εὖ πέπρᾱγα, "I have done/fared well."

Note that in Greek the expression "to do something to someone" can take a double accusative: κακὸν πρᾱ́ττω τοὺς στρατιώτᾱς, "I do evil to the soldiers." Cf. παιδεύω τοὺς στρατιώτᾱς τὴν τέχνην, "I teach the soldiers the art."

Adjectives of time and place, such as πρῶτος, πρώτη, πρῶτον, "first," in the predicate position are the equivalent of English adverbs.

> οἱ νεᾱνίαι τὴν εἰρήνην πρῶτοι ἔλῡσαν.
> The young men destroyed the peace first.

When used of spatial relations, the preposition ὑπό follows the pattern of παρά with the dative, "to be under," and with the accusative, "to go under." With the genitive, ὑπό can mean motion "away from under" or even in certain phrases "being under," e.g., τὰ ὑπὸ γῆς, "the things under the earth." With the genitive of personal agent, ὑπό means "by."

The adjective φοβερός, φοβερά, φοβερόν, "fearful," is derived from the noun φόβος, φόβου, ὁ, "fear." The adjective can be used of the person or thing feeling the fear or causing the fear.

48. THIRD-DECLENSION NOUNS: CONSONANT STEMS

Third-declension nouns can be masculine, feminine, or neuter. They employ the endings listed below. As with first- and second-declension nouns, the stem to which the endings are added is obtained by dropping the ending of the genitive singular.

	M or F	N
Nom. S	——	——
Gen.	-ος	-ος
Dat.	-ι	-ι
Acc.	-α, -ν	——
Voc.	——	——
Nom./Voc. P	-ες	-α
Gen.	-ων	-ων
Dat.	-σι(ν)	-σι(ν)
Acc.	-ας	-α

The declensions of five representative third-declension nouns with consonant stems (stems ending in a consonant) are presented below. The rules for declining these and other third-declension nouns are given after the paradigms.

φύλαξ, φύλακος, ὁ, "guard"	(stem: φυλακ-)
αἴξ, αἰγός, ὁ or ἡ, "goat"	(stem: αἰγ-)
ἐλπίς, ἐλπίδος, ἡ, "hope"	(stem: ἐλπιδ-)
χάρις, χάριτος, ἡ, "grace"	(stem: χαριτ-)
σῶμα, σώματος, τό, "body"	(stem: σωματ-)

Nom. S	φύλαξ	αἴξ	ἐλπίς	χάρις	σῶμα
Gen.	φύλακος	αἰγός	ἐλπίδος	χάριτος	σώματος
Dat.	φύλακι	αἰγί	ἐλπίδι	χάριτι	σώματι
Acc.	φύλακα	αἶγα	ἐλπίδα	χάριν	σῶμα
Voc.	φύλαξ	αἴξ	ἐλπί	χάρι	σῶμα
Nom./Voc. P	φύλακες	αἶγες	ἐλπίδες	χάριτες	σώματα
Gen.	φυλάκων	αἰγῶν	ἐλπίδων	χαρίτων	σωμάτων
Dat.	φύλαξι(ν)	αἰξί(ν)	ἐλπίσι(ν)	χάρισι(ν)	σώμασι(ν)
Acc.	φύλακας	αἶγας	ἐλπίδας	χάριτας	σώματα

Rule for the accentuation of consonant-stem third-declension nouns:

Accent is persistent. But THIRD-DECLENSION NOUNS WITH MONOSYLLABIC STEMS ACCENT THE ULTIMA IN THE GENITIVE AND DATIVE, SINGULAR AND PLURAL; THE GENITIVE PLURAL TAKES A CIRCUMFLEX.
Thus φύλακ-ος, but αἰγ-ός.

Observations on case forms:

Nominative singular: This form will simply be learned from the standard vocabulary listing of each noun.

Accusative singular: In the accusative singular, almost all masculine and feminine nouns with consonant stems employ the ending -α.

But nouns whose stems end in -ιτ, -ιδ, or -ιθ, and which do not accent this iota, drop the final consonant from the stem and employ the ending -ν. Thus ἐλπίδα, but χάριν.

Remember that in neuter nouns of all declensions the accusative singular is identical in form with the nominative singular.

Vocative singular: In the box below are the rules for forming the vocative singular of ALL third-declension nouns, including those presented later. These rules should be learned as new third-declension nouns are encountered.

In masculine and feminine nouns the vocative singular is identical in form with the nominative singular

    (1) when the nominative singular ends in -ξ or -ψ (e.g., αἴξ)

    (2) when the nominative singular ends in -ν or -ρ and accents the ultima (e.g., λιμήν).

Otherwise, the vocative singular consists of the stem alone, with any final dental dropped (e.g., χάρι).

In all neuter nouns the vocative singular is identical in form with the nominative singular.

The vocative singular of nouns which do not follow these rules will be given in the vocabulary.

Nominative/Vocative plural:	Remember that in all nouns of all declensions the nominative and vocative plural are identical in form.
	All neuter nouns employ the ending -α in the nominative/vocative and accusative plural.
Dative plural:	In the following box are rules for combining the dative plural ending -σι with third-declension stems ending in consonants, including stems to be presented later. These rules should be learned as new third-declension nouns are encountered.

The combination of the final consonant of the stem with the dative plural ending -σι causes the following phonetic or spelling changes:

\begin{aligned}
\pi, \beta, \varphi \;&+\; \text{-}\sigma\iota \;=\; \text{-}\psi\iota \\
\varkappa, \gamma, \chi \;&+\; \text{-}\sigma\iota \;=\; \text{-}\xi\iota \\
\tau, \delta, \theta \;&+\; \text{-}\sigma\iota \;=\; \text{-}\sigma\iota \\
\nu \;&+\; \text{-}\sigma\iota \;=\; \text{-}\sigma\iota \\ \sigma \;&+\; \text{-}\sigma\iota \;=\; \text{-}\sigma\iota \\
\text{-}\alpha\nu\tau\text{-} \;&+\; \text{-}\sigma\iota \;=\; \text{-}\bar{\alpha}\sigma\iota \\
\text{-}\varepsilon\nu\tau\text{-} \;&+\; \text{-}\sigma\iota \;=\; \text{-}\varepsilon\iota\sigma\iota \\
\text{-}o\nu\tau\text{-} \;&+\; \text{-}\sigma\iota \;=\; \text{-}o\upsilon\sigma\iota \\
\lambda \;&+\; \text{-}\sigma\iota \;=\; \text{-}\lambda\sigma\iota \text{ with no change} \\
\varrho \;&+\; \text{-}\sigma\iota \;=\; \text{-}\varrho\sigma\iota \text{ with no change} \end{aligned}

Note that when -αντ-, -εντ-, or -οντ- are combined with the ending, ντ is lost and a long vowel or diphthong appears by a process called compensatory lengthening. A diphthong which results from compensatory lengthening is called a spurious diphthong.

> Accusative plural: Contrast the ending -ας of the third declension with > the ending -ᾱς of the first declension.

Drills I and II, page 156, may now be done.

49. THE RELATIVE PRONOUN

A noun or pronoun can be modified by an adjective (ὁ ἀγαθὸς ἄνθρωπος, the good man), by another noun in the genitive case (τὸ Ὁμήρου βιβλίον, Homer's book), by a prepositional phrase (οἱ ἐν τῇ χώρᾳ πολῖται, the citizens in the land), or by an adverb (οἱ νῦν πολῖται, present-day citizens).

A noun or pronoun can also be modified by a dependent clause called a relative clause, introduced by the relative pronoun. Here are some examples in English.

> The poet who wrote the book is good.
> The poet whose book (= of whom the book) we sent to the island >   is good.
> The poet to whom we sent the book is good.
> The poet whom we educated is good.

None of these relative clauses is a complete sentence. Each is a dependent clause within a complex sentence which also contains a main or independent clause. The relative clauses simply modify the noun "poet" and specify a particular poet.

In Greek as in English the relative pronoun performs two functions:

(1) It refers back to the noun in the independent clause which is its antecedent ("poet" in the examples above).

(2) It has its own grammatical function within the relative clause. In the first example "who" is the subject of the verb "wrote"; in the second,
    "whose" modifies "book" and shows possession; in the third, the phrase "to whom" is the indirect object of the verb "sent"; in the fourth, "whom" is the direct object of the verb "educated."

In Greek the relative pronoun, like all nouns, pronouns, and adjectives, has gender, number, and case.

THE RELATIVE PRONOUN REFERS TO AN ANTECEDENT IN THE INDEPENDENT CLAUSE AND ALWAYS HAS THE SAME GENDER AND THE SAME NUMBER AS THAT ANTECEDENT.

BUT THE CASE OF THE RELATIVE PRONOUN DEPENDS ENTIRELY ON ITS GRAMMATICAL FUNCTION WITHIN THE DEPENDENT CLAUSE.

Thus in the examples above all four relative pronouns would in Greek be masculine and singular because all refer back to the masculine singular antecedent, "poet." But the relative pronoun would appear in a different case in each example: nominative in the first, genitive in the second, dative in the third, and accusative in the fourth.

Drill III, pages 156 57, may now be done.

The relative pronoun belongs to the first and second declensions. It is declined as follows:

	M	F	N
Nom. S	ὅς	ἥ	ὅ
Gen.	οὗ	ἧς	οὗ
Dat.	ᾧ	ᾗ	ᾧ
Acc.	ὅν	ἥν	ὅ
Nom. P	οἵ	αἵ	ἅ
Gen.	ὧν	ὧν	ὧν
Dat.	οἷς	αἷς	οἷς
Acc.	οὕς	ἅς	ἅ

Observations: (1) Compare the declension of the article (Section 16); the relative pronoun differs from the article in that all its forms have a rough breathing and take an accent. Also, its masculine nominative singular ends in -ς.

(2) The relative pronoun has no vocative case.

The examples above can now be rendered in Greek:

ἀγαθὸς ὁ ποιητὴς ὃς τὸ βιβλίον ἔγραψεν.
The poet who wrote the book is good.

ἀγαθὸς ὁ ποιητὴς οὗ τὸ βιβλίον εἰς τὴν νῆσον ἐπέμψαμεν.
The poet whose book we sent to the island is good.

ἀγαθὸς ὁ ποιητὴς ᾧ τὸ βιβλίον ἐπέμψαμεν.
The poet to whom we sent the book is good.

ἀγαθὸς ὁ ποιητὴς ὃν ἐπαιδεύσαμεν.
The poet whom we educated is good.

When translating relative clauses within complete sentences one must carefully distinguish the independent clause, with its subject, verb, and (possible) objects, from the dependent relative clause, with its own separate subject, verb, and (possible) objects. Remember that the relative pronoun takes from its antecedent gender and number only; its case is determined by its function within the relative clause.

παιδεύσομεν τοὺς ποιητὰς οἳ βιβλία γράψουσιν.
We shall educate the poets who will write books.

    Antecedent of relative pronoun:
        ποιητάς: masculine plural

    Function in dependent clause:
        subject of γράψουσιν: nominative

    Form of relative pronoun:
        masculine plural nominative

ἀγαθὴ ἡ ψῡχὴ ἣν παιδεύεις, ὦ Ὅμηρε.
Good is the soul which you educate, Homer.

    Antecedent of relative pronoun:
        ψῡχή: feminine singular

    Function in dependent clause:
        direct object of παιδεύεις: accusative

    Form of relative pronoun:
        feminine singular accusative

τὰ ὅπλα ἐπέμψατε οἷς ἔβλαψαν τὰ ζῷα.
You sent the weapons with which they harmed the animals.

    Antecedent of relative pronoun:
        ὅπλα: neuter plural

    Function in dependent clause:
        instrumental dative

    Form of relative pronoun:
        neuter plural dative

Drill IV, page 157, may now be done.

50. THE INDEPENDENT SUBJUNCTIVE

In addition to its use in purpose clauses after a primary tense of the indicative, and in the protases of future more vivid and present general conditional sentences, the subjunctive mood is employed in three types of independent clause.

1. HORTATORY SUBJUNCTIVE

The first person of the present or aorist subjunctive can express emphatically the will of the speaker. The plural is more common. This usage is called the hortatory subjunctive. Its negative is μή. Tense shows aspect only.

Translation formula: let us (let me)

> παύωμεν τὴν μάχην.
> Let us be stopping the battle.
> Let us stop the battle.
>
> παύσωμεν τὴν μάχην.
> Let us stop the battle.
>
> μὴ παύωμεν τὴν μάχην.
> Let us not be stopping the battle.
> Let us not stop the battle.

Contrast the indicative:

> οὐ παύομεν τὴν μάχην.
> We are not stopping the battle.

2. DELIBERATIVE SUBJUNCTIVE

The first person of the present or aorist subjunctive can express, in a question, the speaker's uncertainty about what he or she is to do. This usage is called the deliberative subjunctive. Its negative is μή. Tense shows aspect only.

Translation formula: am I to/are we to

> παύωμεν τὴν μάχην;
> Are we to be stopping the battle?
> Are we to stop the battle?
>
> παύσωμεν τὴν μάχην;
> Are we to stop the battle?

> ἄγγελον μὴ πέμπω;
> Am I not to be sending a messenger?

Contrast the indicative:

> ἄγγελον οὐ πέμπω;
> Am I not sending a messenger?

3. PROHIBITIVE SUBJUNCTIVE

With the negative μή the second person of the aorist subjunctive (but NOT the present subjunctive) expresses a prohibition. This usage is called the prohibitive subjunctive. Tense shows aspect only. Positive commands are expressed in the imperative mood, which is presented in Section 89.

Translation formula: do not > μὴ παύσητε τὴν μάχην.

> Do not stop the battle.
>
> μὴ πέμψῃς τὸν ἄγγελον.
> Do not send the messenger.

Any independent subjunctive can be used instead of a future indicative in the apodosis of a future more vivid conditional sentence.

> ἐὰν εὖ πράξωμεν, μὴ πέμψῃς τὸν ἄγγελον.
> If we fare well, do not send the messenger.
>
> ἐὰν εὖ πράξωμεν, πέμψωμεν τὸν ἄγγελον.
> If we fare well, let us send the messenger.

Drill V, page 157, may now be done.

51. PARTITIVE GENITIVE (GENITIVE OF THE DIVIDED WHOLE)

The genitive case can be employed to indicate the larger group or entity to which particular persons or things belong. This is called the partitive genitive or genitive of the divided whole.

> ἓξ τῶν ὁπλῑτῶν ἐπέμφθησαν.
> Six of the hoplites were sent.
>
> τοὺς ἀδίκους τῶν πολῑτῶν εἰς τὰς νήσους πέμψετε.
> You will send the unjust ones of the citizens to the islands.

τῶν γεφῡρῶν πέντε ἐλύθησαν.
Of the bridges five were destroyed.

Although both the partitive genitive and the genitive which shows possession can be translated by the English preposition "of," their meanings are distinct, as the following examples show.

οἱ ἄδικοι τῶν ὁπλῑτῶν (partitive genitive)
the unjust ones of the hoplites

ἡ τῶν ὁπλῑτῶν οἰκίᾱ (genitive showing possession)
the house of the hoplites

The partitive genitive stands either before or after the noun or pronoun which it modifies. Unlike the genitive which shows possession, the partitive genitive cannot stand in the attributive position.

52. GENITIVE OF TIME WITHIN WHICH

The genitive case without a preposition can also indicate the span of time within which an event occurred, occurs, or will occur. This is called the genitive of time within which.

τῆς ἡμέρᾱς τοὺς νεᾱνίᾱς ἐδιδάξαμεν.
During the day we taught the young men.

τῆς πρώτης ἡμέρᾱς ὁπλίτᾱς ἐν τῇ ἀγορᾷ τάξομεν.
During the first day we shall station hoplites in the market place.

ἐξ ἡμερῶν διδάξει τοὺς νεᾱνίᾱς ὁ ″Ομηρος.
Within six days Homer will teach the young men.

53. DATIVE OF TIME AT WHICH

The dative case is employed, without a preposition, to indicate the point in time at which an event occurred, occurs, or will occur. This is called the dative of time at which or when.

τῇ πρώτῃ ἡμέρᾳ ὁπλίτᾱς ἐν τῇ ἀγορᾷ τάξομεν.
On the first day we shall station hoplites in the market place.

54. ACCUSATIVE OF EXTENT OF TIME

The accusative case is employed, without a preposition, to indicate the length in time of an event in the past, present, or future. This is called the accusative of extent of time.

> πέντε ἡμέρᾱς τοὺς νεᾱνίᾱς διδάξομεν.
> For five days we shall teach the young men.
> ἓξ ἡμέρᾱς τοὺς νεᾱνίᾱς ἐδιδάσκομεν.
> For six days we were teaching the young men.

55. EXPRESSIONS OF TIME COMPARED

The genitive of time within which answers the question, "during what span of time?" It places the event at some unspecified point during that span of time without pinpointing it further. The phrase τῆς ἡμέρᾱς could be translated "at some time during the day." The genitive of time within which is akin to the partitive genitive, which places an individual person or thing within a larger group or entity.

The dative of time at which simply answers the question "when?" It places the event in time as plainly as possible. It treats the unit of time involved (e.g., hour, day, month) as if it were a single point, and places the event there.

The accusative of extent of time answers the question "for how long a time?"

These three expressions of time can be diagrammed as follows:

$$\bigcirc \qquad \bullet \qquad \rightarrow$$

GENITIVE   DATIVE   ACCUSATIVE

The genitive places the event within the circle, the dative at a single point, and the accusative describes the length of time which the event takes from beginning to end.

56. ACCUSATIVE OF EXTENT OF SPACE

The accusative case is employed, without a preposition, to indicate distance traveled. This usage is called the accusative of extent of space.

τὸν ἄγγελον πέντε σταδίους πέμψετε.
You will send the messenger for five stades.
You will send the messenger five stades.

ὁ ἄγγελος ἓξ σταδίους πεμφθήσεται.
The messenger will be sent for six stades.
The messenger will be sent six stades.

The accusative of extent of space functions as an adverb; it is independent of any other case forms in a sentence.

The accusative of extent of space, like the accusative of extent of time, can be diagrammed with an arrow (cf. the preceding Section).

Drill VI, page 158, may now be done.

VOCABULARY NOTES

The noun αἴξ, αἰγός, ὁ or ἡ, "goat," can be either masculine or feminine. The article indicates gender. Cf. ἵππος, θεός.

The particles γε and τοι and the connective τε are monosyllabic enclitics, words which are closely attached in pronunciation to the preceding word and which can affect the accent of the preceding word. A monosyllabic enclitic, which usually has no accent itself, causes the following changes in the accent of the preceding word:

(1) IF THE PRECEDING WORD HAS AN ACUTE ON THE ULTIMA, THE ACCENT REMAINS AN ACUTE AND IS NOT CHANGED TO A GRAVE.

$$-a\text{-}p\text{-}\acute{u} + e$$
$$\grave{a}\gamma a\theta o\acute{\iota}\ \gamma\varepsilon$$

(2) IF THE PRECEDING WORD HAS A CIRCUMFLEX ON THE PENULT, AN ADDITIONAL ACUTE ACCENT IS PLACED ON THE ULTIMA.

$$-a\text{-}\tilde{p}\text{-}\acute{u} + e$$
$$\delta\tilde{\eta}\mu\acute{o}\varsigma\ \gamma\varepsilon$$

(3) IF THE PRECEDING WORD HAS AN ACUTE ON THE ANTEPENULT, AN ADDITIONAL ACUTE ACCENT IS PLACED ON THE ULTIMA.

$$-\acute{a}\text{-}p\text{-}\acute{u} + e$$
$$\check{a}\nu\theta\rho\omega\pi o\acute{\iota}\ \gamma\varepsilon$$

Thus whenever the accent of the preceding word is as far from the ultima as the rules for the possibilities of accent allow, an additional acute accent is added to the ultima.

(4) IF THE PRECEDING WORD IS A PROCLITIC, THE PROCLITIC RECEIVES AN ACUTE ACCENT.

εἴ γε   ἥ γε γέφῡρα

In every other instance, e.g., a circumflex on the ultima or an acute on the penult, the preceding word is not affected, and there is no accent on the enclitic.
Complete rules for enclitics, including those for disyllabic enclitics, will be given in Unit 15.

The enclitic particle γε is postpositive and has two distinct uses: it either emphasizes or limits the preceding word.   When joined with a phrase consisting of article + noun, γε usually follows the article.

> τούς γε ἵππους ἐβλάψατε.
> You harmed the horses. (emphatic)
> You harmed the horses, at any rate. (limiting) > τῷ γ' ἀδελφῷ δῶρον ἔπεμψας.

> You sent a gift to your brother. (emphatic)
> You sent a gift to your brother, at any rate.   (limiting)

In prepositional phrases, γε usually follows the preposition.

> μετά γε τὴν μάχην
> after the battle

A relative pronoun accompanied by γε often has a causal force.

> ἀγαθὸς ὁ Ὅμηρος ὅς γε ἀγαθὰ βιβλία γέγραφεν.
> Homer is good, who has written good books.
> Homer is good because he has written good books.

Context will determine the best translation of this particle, whose force is often conveyed in English by tone of voice alone.

The adjective δεινός, δεινή, δεινόν, "fearsome, marvelous, clever," is used in both a negative and a positive sense: of someone (or something) frightening, and of someone who shows remarkable rhetorical or intellectual flair.   In the latter sense δεινός can take an epexegetical infinitive to describe the area of expertise.

> δεινὸς διδάσκειν τοὺς νεᾱνίᾱς > clever at teaching the young men

The noun δουλείᾱ, δουλείᾱς, ἡ, "slavery," is an abstract noun formed from the noun δοῦλος, δούλου, ὁ, "slave." Note that the noun φιλίᾱ, from φίλος, employs a slightly different suffix. Compare also the abstract nouns ἐλευθερίᾱ, ἐλευθερίᾱς, ἡ "freedom," from the adjective ἐλεύθερος, ἐλευθέρᾱ, ἐλεύθερον,

"free," and σοφία, σοφίας, ἡ, "wisdom, skill," from the adjective σοφός, σοφή, σοφόν, "wise, skilled."

The verb δουλεύω, δουλεύσω, ἐδούλευσα, δεδούλευκα, ——, ——, "be a slave," is a denominative verb, one formed from a noun (δοῦλος). Like it are the verbs πολῑτεύω, πολῑτεύσω, ἐπολίτευσα, πεπολίτευκα, πεπολίτευμαι, ἐπολῑτεύθην, "be a citizen," from the noun πολίτης, πολίτου, ὁ, "citizen," and χορεύω, χορεύσω, ἐχόρευσα, κεχόρευκα, κεχόρευμαι, ἐχορεύθην, "dance, take part in a chorus," from the noun χορός, χοροῦ, ὁ, "chorus." Note that δουλεύω takes a dative of the person or thing to which one is a slave:

> ἐδουλεύομεν τοῖς πολίταις.
> We were slaves to the citizens.

The noun Ἕλλην, Ἕλληνος, ὁ, denotes "a Greek," a man. It is not usually used as an adjective (as in the phrase "a Greek city").

The original meaning of the preposition κατά is "down," but it is not usually employed in this sense in Attic; the more common meanings are the ones given in the vocabulary: "(+ gen.) against; under; (+ acc.) according to."

The verb κωλύω, κωλύσω, ἐκώλῡσα, κεκώλῡκα, κεκώλῡμαι, ἐκωλύθην, "hinder, prevent," has -ῡ- in all six Principal Parts. Contrast λύω, θύω. The verb κωλύω can take an accusative of the person prevented from doing something and an infinitive of the action prevented:

> ἐκωλύσαμεν τοὺς κακοὺς τῇ θεῷ θῦσαι.
> We prevented the evil men from sacrificing to the goddess.

The dative plural of νύξ, νυκτός, ἡ, "night," is *νυκτ-σί(ν) > *νυκ-σί(ν) = νυξί(ν).

The adjective παλαιός, παλαιά, παλαιόν, "old, aged, ancient," is formed from the adverb πάλαι, "long ago."

The noun πρᾶγμα, πράγματος, τό, "deed, affair, thing," means literally a "thing done." It has the same root as πράττω (πράκ-). In the plural it often means "affairs" as in the phrases "affairs of mankind" or "affairs of state."

The adjective σοφός, σοφή, σοφόν, "wise, skilled," and the noun σοφία, σοφίας, ἡ, "wisdom, skill," can indicate either practical or intellectual wisdom. Cf. τέχνη.

The noun στάδιον, σταδίου, τό, "stade," can be either masculine or neuter in the plural with no difference in meaning: οἱ στάδιοι or τὰ στάδια. This word denotes a distance of about 600 feet; this was the length of the racecourse at Olympia, and the word στάδιον can also mean "racecourse."

The enclitic conjunction τε is usually employed together with καί to link two items. The usual order is A τε καί B:

Ὅμηρός τε καὶ ὁ ἀδελφός
Homer and his brother

αἶγές τε καὶ ἵπποι
goats and horses

Sometimes τε and καί are separated by intervening words.

οἱ στρατιῶται φυλάττουσί τε τοὺς ἀδίκους καὶ πέμπουσιν ἀγγέλους.
The soldiers are guarding the unjust men and sending messengers.

In these examples τε is not given a separate translation. It is a signpost that tells the reader there is a καί coming up.

In poetry and (rarely) in prose, τε can be used alone to connect two items. It then follows the second of the two items: A B τε. Like καί . . . καί, τε . . . τε means "both . . . and." The order is A τε B τε.

αἶγες ἵπποι τε
goats and horses

αἶγές τε ἵπποι τε
both goats and horses.

The enclitic particle τοι, "let me tell you, you know," is employed when a speaker expects the hearer to assent to the truth of what is being said. By contrast, the particle δή, "in fact, of course," draws attention to an external reality.

ἀγαθή τοι ἡ δημοκρατίᾱ.
Democracy, you know, is good.

ἀγαθὴ δὴ ἡ δημοκρατίᾱ.
In fact, democracy is good.

When τοι follows οὔ, they are usually written as one word: οὔτοι.

The noun φάλαγξ, φάλαγγος, ἡ, can designate any order of battle, but came to signify a particular formation of hoplites, many lines deep, protected by overlapping shields and with long spears as offensive weapons.

The noun φύλαξ, φύλακος, ὁ, "guard," has the stem φυλακ-. Cf. the verb φυλάττω < *φυλάκιω, whose root is φυλακ-.

The preposition χάριν + gen., "for the sake of," is postpositive: it follows the word which it governs. It is derived from the accusative singular of the noun χάρις, χάριτος, ἡ, "grace, favor, gratitude." Sentences of the type πέμπω δῶρον, τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ χάριν

I send a gift, a favor of (= for) my brother, where χάριν is a noun in apposition with the direct object δῶρον, came to be understood thus:

I send a gift for the sake of my brother.

Here, as normally, χάριν is a preposition governing the genitive case.

Note the relationship between the noun χορός, the denominative verb χορεύω, and the verbal noun χορευτής, χορευτοῦ, ὁ, "dancer." The suffix -της of the latter noun often indicates the agent of an action.

57. MIDDLE VOICE

A verb in the middle voice shows that the subject of the verb does the action, but that the action somehow returns to the subject, that the subject has a special interest in the action of the verb. Verbs in the middle voice can be transitive and thus take direct objects; they can also be intransitive. Compare the following diagrams of sentences with verbs in the active, passive, and middle voice.

Active Voice: Nominative Active Verb ⟶ Accusative

Passive Voice: Nominative Passive Verb ⟵ ὑπό + gen., or dat. of personal agent

Middle Voice: (transitive) Nominative Middle Verb ⟶ Accusative

Middle Voice: (intransitive) Nominative Middle Verb
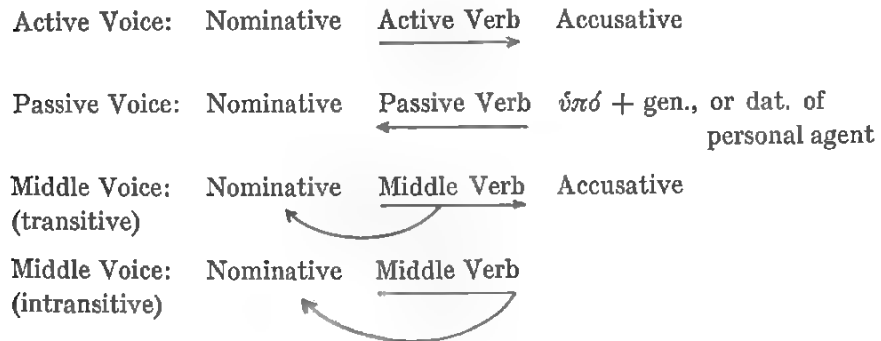

The force of the middle voice varies from verb to verb. The most common meaning the middle voice gives to a verb is "to do something for oneself." Other possible meanings of the middle voice are a part of the vocabulary of some verbs and are given in the vocabularies. Special middle meanings of words learned thus far are given in Section 58.

The middle voice and the passive voice have identical forms in all the moods in the present, imperfect, perfect, and pluperfect tenses, and in the present and perfect infinitives. The middle voice has forms different from those of the passive in the future indicative and in all the moods and in the infinitive of the aorist tense. The following chart indicates which forms are identical and which are not.

IDENTICAL	DIFFERENT
MIDDLE AND	MIDDLE AND
PASSIVE FORMS	PASSIVE FORMS
Present Indicative	Future Indicative
Imperfect Indicative	Aorist Indicative
Present Subjunctive	Aorist Subjunctive
Present Optative	Aorist Optative
Present Infinitive	Aorist Infinitive
Perfect Indicative Pluperfect Indicative
Perfect Infinitive

Forms and endings which can be middle or passive will henceforth be called middle/passive. Thus, without any context, a form like παιδεύομαι is first person singular, present indicative middle/passive. The context usually makes clear which of the two voices the verb is in. For example, the passive will often be accompanied by a genitive of personal agent; the middle voice can take a direct object, but the passive voice cannot do so.

Only the morphology of those middle forms which are different from passive forms must be presented. Those middle forms which are different from passive forms all put middle endings on the same stem as the corresponding tense of the active voice. From this point on, then, what was called the future tense stem will now be called the future active and middle tense stem (Principal Part II without the ending -ω). What was called the aorist tense stem will now be called the aorist active and middle tense stem (Principal Part III without the past indicative augment and the ending -α). A chart of principal parts and tense stems is given in Section 60.

The moods and tenses of the middle voice have exactly the same uses as the moods and tenses of the active and passive voices. For example, an aorist subjunctive middle in a purpose clause in primary sequence differs from an aorist subjunctive active or passive in such a clause in voice alone.

1. FUTURE INDICATIVE MIDDLE

To form the future indicative middle, to the future active and middle tense stem add the same endings as in the present indicative middle/passive (cf. Section 43, page 111).

Thus the forms of the future indicative middle of παιδεύω are as follows:

S

1	παιδεύσομαι	I shall educate for myself / have (someone) educated
2	παιδεύσῃ/ παιδεύσει	you will educate for yourself / have (someone) educated
3	παιδεύσεται	he/she/it will educate for himself/herself/itself; he/she/it will have (someone) educated

1	παιδευσόμεθα	we shall educate for ourselves/have (someone) educated
2	παιδεύσεσθε	you will educate for yourselves/have (someone) educated
3	παιδεύσονται	they will educate for themselves/have (someone) educated

Observations: (1) The person markers -μαι, -σαι, -ται, -μεθα, -σθε, -νται will henceforth be called the primary middle/passive person markers.

(2) The alternative form of the second person singular, future indicative middle παιδεύσῃ is often the same as the third person singular, aorist subjunctive active. Context allows one to distinguish the two forms. Likewise, παιδεύσει can be either third person singular, future indicative active or second person singular, future indicative middle.

(3) Remember that the future indicative passive uses the suffix -ησ- on the aorist passive tense stem: παιδευθήσομαι, etc.

2. AORIST INDICATIVE MIDDLE

To form the aorist indicative middle, to the augmented aorist active and middle tense stem add the following endings:

	S	P
1	-αμην	-αμεθα
2	-ω	-ασθε
3	-ατο	-αντο

Thus the forms of the aorist indicative middle of παιδεύω are as follows:

S

1   ἐπαιδευσάμην   I educated for myself/had (someone) educated
2   ἐπαιδεύσω   you educated for yourself/had (someone) educated 3   ἐπαιδεύσατο   he/she/it educated for himself/herself/itself; he/she/it had (someone) educated

1   ἐπαιδευσάμεθα   we educated for ourselves/had (someone) educated
2   ἐπαιδεύσασθε   you educated for yourselves/had (someone) educated
3   ἐπαιδεύσαντο   they educated for themselves/had (someone) educated

Observations: (1) The endings of the aorist indicative middle consist of the tense vowel -α- and what will henceforth be called the secondary middle/passive person markers: -μην, -σο,
              -το, -μεθα, -σθε, -ντο.

              (2) The original ending of the second person singular, aorist indicative middle was *-ασο. The intervocalic -σ- dropped out, and the remaining vowels contracted to give the ending -ω.

              (3) Compare the first person plural forms:
                     aorist indicative active   ἐπαύσαμεν aorist optative active   παύσαιμεν aorist indicative middle   ἐπαυσάμεθα

3. AORIST SUBJUNCTIVE MIDDLE

To form the aorist subjunctive middle, add the endings of the present subjunctive middle/passive to the unaugmented aorist active and middle tense stem.

Thus the forms of the aorist subjunctive middle of παιδεύω are as follows:

      S   P

1   παιδεύσωμαι   παιδευσώμεθα
2   παιδεύσῃ   παιδεύσησθε
3   παιδεύσηται   παιδεύσωνται

Observations: (1) The second person singular, aorist subjunctive middle παιδεύσῃ is always the same as the third person singular, aorist subjunctive active and sometimes the same as the alternative form of the second person singular, future indicative middle. Context usually allows one to distinguish among these forms.

(2) The aorist subjunctive middle differs from the present subjunctive middle/passive only in the tense stem. Note the use of the primary middle/passive person markers in both the present subjunctive middle/passive and the aorist subjunctive middle.

4. AORIST OPTATIVE MIDDLE

To form the aorist optative middle, add the following endings to the unaugmented aorist active and middle tense stem:

	S	P
1	-αιμην	-αιμεθα
2	-αιο	-αισθε
3	-αιτο	-αιντο

Thus the forms of the aorist optative middle of παιδεύω are as follows:

	S	P
1	παιδευσαίμην	παιδευσαίμεθα
2	παιδεύσαιο	παιδεύσαισθε
3	παιδεύσαιτο	παιδεύσαιντο

Observations: (1) The endings of the aorist optative middle consist of the tense vowel -α- + the optative suffix -ι- + the secondary middle/passive person markers. Note that both the present optative middle/passive and the aorist optative middle use the secondary middle/passive person markers.

(2) The original form of the second person singular, aorist optative middle was *-αισο. The intervocalic -σ- dropped out to give the ending -αιο; the diphthong and vowel do not contract.

5. AORIST INFINITIVE MIDDLE

To form the aorist infinitive middle, to the unaugmented aorist active and middle tense stem add the ending -ασθαι.

Thus the aorist infinitive middle of παιδεύω is > παιδεύσασθαι

> to educate for oneself

Observations: (1) Like the aorist infinitives active and passive, the aorist infinitive middle shows simple aspect, NOT past time.

(2) The ending of the aorist infinitive middle consists of the tense vowel -α- + the infinitive suffix -σθαι, seen already in παιδεύεσθαι and πεπαιδεῦσθαι.

(3) The aorist infinitive middle and the present infinitive middle/passive are the only infinitives seen thus far which are accented on the antepenult. All other infinitives seen thus far are accented on the penult.

58. MIDDLE VOICE OF VERBS SEEN THUS FAR

In general the middle voice indicates that the subject has a special interest in the action of the verb; it can often be translated as "to do something for oneself." In addition to this general notion, some of the verbs learned thus far have special meanings in the middle which must be learned now.

ACTIVE VOICE	MIDDLE VOICE
ἄρχω + genitive rule	ἄρχομαι + genitive begin
γράφω write	γράφομαι note down, cause to be written; indict
διδάσκω teach	διδάσκομαι cause (someone) to be taught
θύω sacrifice	θύομαι cause a sacrifice to be made, consult the gods
λύω unbind, free	λύομαι unbind (one's own or for oneself), cause someone to be freed, ransom
παιδεύω educate, teach	παιδεύομαι cause someone to be educated or taught
παύω make stop, stop (transitive)	παύομαι stop (oneself), cease (intransitive)
πείθω persuade	πείθομαι + dative persuade oneself, obey
τάττω draw up in order	τάττομαι fall into order of battle
φυλάττω guard	φυλάττομαι guard someone for one's own protection, be on guard against Henceforth, when the meaning of the middle differs significantly from the active, it will be given in the vocabulary. The middle meanings given above will all be found in the Greek -English Vocabulary.

Drills I and II, pages 183–84, may now be done.

59. SECOND AORIST ACTIVE AND MIDDLE

In the verbs studied so far Principal Part III has the ending -α (e.g., ἐπαίδευσα). Such verbs are said to have first aorists active and middle and use the tense vowel -α- in many of their forms. Any verb with a Principal Part III NOT ending in -α (or, in certain verbs, -αμην) is said to have a second aorist. There is no difference in meaning between first aorists and second aorists.

In Principal Part III, some verbs have second aorists ending in -ον (or, in certain verbs, -ομην). These verbs use the thematic vowel -ε/ο- as part of their endings.

The verb λείπω will serve as an example:

λείπω, λείψω, ἔλιπον, λέλοιπα, λέλειμμαι, ἐλείφθην, "leave, leave behind"

Only in the aorist active and middle does this verb employ endings different from those of the aorist of παιδεύω. The aorist passive of all verbs is formed in the same way from Principal Part VI.

In the indicative mood, second aorists like ἔλιπον employ the same endings as the IMPERFECT indicative of παιδεύω; in the other moods, and in the infinitive, they employ the same endings as PRESENT tense forms of παιδεύω, e.g., -οιμι, -οις, -οι, etc. in the second aorist optative active.

1. SECOND AORIST INDICATIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE

To form the second aorist indicative active and middle, drop the ending -ον from Principal Part III. There remains the past indicative augment plus the aorist active and middle tense stem. To the augmented aorist active and middle tense stem add the endings employed to form the imperfect indicative active and middle of παιδεύω.

Thus the augmented aorist active and middle tense stem of λείπω is ἐλιπ-, and the forms of the second aorist indicative active and middle are as follows:

		ACTIVE	MIDDLE
S	1	ἔλιπον	ἐλιπόμην
	2	ἔλιπες	ἐλίπου
	3	ἔλιπε(ν)	ἐλίπετο
P	1	ἐλίπομεν	ἐλιπόμεθα
	2	ἐλίπετε	ἐλίπεσθε
	3	ἔλιπον	ἐλίποντο

Observation: In verbs with second aorists active and middle, imperfect and aorist forms are distinguished by their different tense stems only. Compare ἐλίπομεν (first person plural, aorist indicative active) with ἐλείπομεν (first person plural, imperfect indicative active).

2. SECOND AORIST SUBJUNCTIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE

To form the second aorist subjunctive active and middle, add to the unaugmented aorist active and middle tense stem the endings employed to form the present subjunctive active and middle/passive of παιδεύω.

Thus the unaugmented aorist active and middle tense stem of λείπω is λιπ-, and the forms of the second aorist subjunctive active and middle are as follows:

		ACTIVE	MIDDLE
S	1	λίπω	λίπωμαι
	2	λίπῃς	λίπῃ
	3	λίπῃ	λίπηται
P	1	λίπωμεν	λιπώμεθα
	2	λίπητε	λίπησθε
	3	λίπωσι(ν)	λίπωνται

Observation: As in verbs with first aorists, only the different tense stem distinguishes present subjunctives from aorist subjunctives. Compare λίπωμεν (first person plural, aorist subjunctive active) with λείπωμεν (first person plural, present subjunctive active).

3. SECOND AORIST OPTATIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE

To form the second aorist optative active and middle, add to the unaugmented aorist active and middle tense stem the endings employed to form the present optative active and middle of παιδεύω.

Thus the forms of the second aorist optative active and middle of λείπω are as follows:

		ACTIVE	MIDDLE
S	1	λίποιμι	λιποίμην
	2	λίποις	λίποιο
	3	λίποι	λίποιτο
P	1	λίποιμεν	λιποίμεθα
	2	λίποιτε	λίποισθε
	3	λίποιεν	λίποιντο

Observation: Only the different tense stem distinguishes present optatives from second aorist optatives. Compare λίποιμεν (first person plural, aorist optative active) with λείποιμεν (first person plural, present optative active).

4. SECOND AORIST INFINITIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE

To form the second aorist infinitive active and middle, add to the unaugmented aorist active and middle tense stem the endings -εῖν and -έσθαι. Note the persistent accent, different from that of the present infinitive active and middle.

Thus the second aorist infinitives active and middle of λείπω are:

ACTIVE	MIDDLE
λιπεῖν	λιπέσθαι

Observation: Compare the second aorist infinitives λιπεῖν and λιπέσθαι with the present infinitives λείπειν and λείπεσθαι.

Drill III, pages 184–85, may now be done.

60. PRINCIPAL PARTS AND TENSE STEMS: SUMMARY

Each of the six Principal Parts has been used in conjugating the Greek verb. Here is a summary of the specific tense stems, and the verb forms seen thus far, which can be derived from each Principal Part.

PRINCIPAL PART	TENSE STEM		VERB FORMS DERIVED FROM STEM
	Form	Name
I. παιδεύω	παιδευο-	present tense stem	present indicative active, middle, passive present subjunctive active, middle, passive present optative active, middle, passive present infinitive active, middle, passive imperfect indicative active, middle, passive

61. THE INDEPENDENT OPTATIVE

Just as a verb in the subjunctive may be used independently as the main verb of a sentence, so too a verb in the optative can be used as the main verb of a sentence in two different types of clauses.

1. OPTATIVE OF WISH

An independent optative, without any introductory word or introduced by εἰ γάρ or εἴθε, expresses the speaker's wish, hope, or prayer for the future. This is called the optative of wish. The negative is μή; tense shows aspect only. Such wishes can be expressed in English by a subjunctive ("Long live the queen!"), by the auxiliary verb may ("May the best man win!"), or be introduced by if only or I wish that ("If only/I wish that it would not rain tonight!").

$$\left\{ \begin{array}{c} \overline{\qquad} \\ εἴθε \\ εἰ\ γὰρ \end{array} \right\} \ παύοιμεν\ τὴν\ μάχην.$$

May we be stopping/stop the battle.
If only we may be stopping/stop the battle.
I wish that we may be stopping/stop the battle.

$$\left\{ \begin{array}{c} \overline{\qquad}\ μή \\ εἴθε\ μή \\ εἰ\ γὰρ\ μή \end{array} \right\} \ λύσειαν\ τοὺς\ κακούς.$$

May they not free the wicked men.
If only they may not free the wicked men.
I wish that they would not free the wicked men.

2. POTENTIAL OPTATIVE

An independent optative without any introductory word but with the particle ἄν indicates that an action might possibly occur. This is called the potential optative. The position of the particle ἄν within the sentence is flexible. The negative with a potential optative is οὐ; tense shows aspect only. The idea of the potential optative can be expressed in English by may, might, could, would.

We $\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \text{may/might/could/would be stopping} \\ \text{may/might/could/would stop} \end{array} \right\}$ the battle.

The potential optative with $\mathring{\alpha}\nu$ is similar to the apodosis of a future less vivid conditional sentence.

The easiest way of distinguishing the optative of wish from the potential optative is the presence or absence of the particle $\mathring{\alpha}\nu$. The potential optative will ALWAYS have $\mathring{\alpha}\nu$; the optative of wish will NEVER have it. In the negative, the distinction will be reinforced by the negative $o\mathring{v}$ with the potential optative, $\mu\acute{\eta}$ with the optative of wish. Of course, $\varepsilon\mathring{\iota}\theta\varepsilon$ and $\varepsilon\mathring{\iota} \ \gamma\acute{\alpha}\varrho$ are used only with the optative of wish.

Drill IV, page 185, may now be done.

62. DEMONSTRATIVE ADJECTIVE/PRONOUN $\mathring{\varepsilon}\kappa\varepsilon\widetilde{\iota}\nu o\varsigma, \ \mathring{\varepsilon}\kappa\varepsilon\acute{\iota}\nu\eta, \ \mathring{\varepsilon}\kappa\varepsilon\widetilde{\iota}\nu o,$ "that"

Demonstratives point out nouns in space, time, or importance. The demonstrative adjective/pronoun $\mathring{\varepsilon}\kappa\varepsilon\widetilde{\iota}\nu o\varsigma, \ \mathring{\varepsilon}\kappa\varepsilon\acute{\iota}\nu\eta, \ \mathring{\varepsilon}\kappa\varepsilon\widetilde{\iota}\nu o$ indicates something relatively far away and is the equivalent of the English demonstrative that (plural those).

Dat.	$\mathring{\varepsilon}\kappa\varepsilon\acute{\iota}\nu o\iota\varsigma$	$\mathring{\varepsilon}\kappa\varepsilon\acute{\iota}\nu\alpha\iota\varsigma$	$\mathring{\varepsilon}\kappa\varepsilon\acute{\iota}\nu o\iota\varsigma$
Acc.	$\mathring{\varepsilon}\kappa\varepsilon\acute{\iota}\nu o\upsilon\varsigma$	$\mathring{\varepsilon}\kappa\varepsilon\acute{\iota}\nu\bar{\alpha}\varsigma$	$\mathring{\varepsilon}\kappa\varepsilon\widetilde{\iota}\nu\alpha$

Observation: $\mathring{\varepsilon}\kappa\varepsilon\widetilde{\iota}\nu o\varsigma, \ \mathring{\varepsilon}\kappa\varepsilon\acute{\iota}\nu\eta, \ \mathring{\varepsilon}\kappa\varepsilon\widetilde{\iota}\nu o$ declines like any other adjective in -$o\varsigma$, -η, -$o\nu$ except for the absence of the final -ν in the neuter singular nominative and accusative. In this absence of -ν, the neuter singular $\mathring{\varepsilon}\kappa\varepsilon\widetilde{\iota}\nu o$ is similar to the neuter singular of the article $\tau\acute{o}$ and the neuter singular of the relative pronoun $\mathring{o}$.

A NOUN MODIFIED BY ἐκεῖνος, ἐκείνη, ἐκεῖνο MUST BE ACCOMPANIED BY THE ARTICLE. The demonstrative usually precedes the article; it may (rarely) follow the noun.

ἐκεῖνος ὁ ἀδελφὸς βιβλία ἔγραψεν.
That brother wrote books.

ἐκείνης τῆς ψῡχῆς
of that soul

ἐκείνῳ τῷ ἔργῳ
τῷ ἔργῳ ἐκείνῳ (rare)
by that deed

The demonstrative can also be used as a pronoun:

ἐκείνους φυλάττομεν.
We are guarding those men.

ἐκείνᾱς παύομεν.
We are stopping those women.

63. CONDITIONAL SENTENCES WITH RELATIVE PROTASES

Instead of being introduced by the particles εἰ or ἐάν (= εἰ + ἄν), the protasis of a conditional sentence can be introduced by a form of the relative pronoun. This happens when the antecedent of the pronoun is general and the relative pronoun can then be translated as whoever, whatever, or when the action of the clause is future, past or present general, or contrafactual. A conditional relative clause or relative protasis follows the same rules and formulas as protases introduced by εἰ or ἐάν; cf. Section 41, page 97. Tense in a subjunctive or optative in such a clause shows aspect only.

Even when the relative pronoun has a demonstrative antecedent like ἐκεῖνος, the structure of the clause shows that the speaker does not have anyone specific in mind.

1. FUTURE MORE VIVID CONDITIONAL SENTENCE WITH RELATIVE PROTASIS

RELATIVE PROTASIS   APODOSIS
ὅς, ἥ, ὅ + ἄν + subjunctive   future indicative

$$\text{ὅν ἂν εἰς τὴν νῆσον}\ \begin{Bmatrix} \text{πέμπωμεν} \\ \text{πέμψωμεν} \end{Bmatrix}\ \text{ἐκεῖνος παιδευθήσεται.}$$

Whomever we $\begin{Bmatrix} \text{are sending} \\ \text{send} \end{Bmatrix}$ to the island, that man will be educated.

If we send anyone to the island, he will be educated.

αἴ ἄν εἰς τὴν νῆσον $\begin{cases} πέμπωνται \\ πεμφθῶσιν \end{cases}$ ἐκεῖναι παιδευθήσονται.

Whatever women $\begin{cases} \text{are being sent} \\ \text{are sent} \end{cases}$ to the island, those women will be educated.

If any women are sent to the island, they will be educated.

Observation: Note that, as usual, the relative pronoun takes its case from how it is used in its own clause.

2. FUTURE LESS VIVID CONDITIONAL SENTENCE WITH RELATIVE PROTASIS

RELATIVE PROTASIS   APODOSIS

ὅς, ἥ, ὅ + optative   optative + ἄν

ὅν εἰς τὴν νῆσον $\begin{cases} πέμποιμεν \\ πέμψαιμεν \end{cases}$ $\begin{cases} παιδεύοιτο \\ παιδευθείη \end{cases}$ ἄν.

Whomever we $\begin{cases} \text{should be sending} \\ \text{should send} \end{cases}$ to the island $\begin{cases} \text{would be being edu-} \\ \text{cated.} \\ \text{would be educated.} \end{cases}$

If we $\begin{cases} \text{should be sending} \\ \text{should send} \end{cases}$ anyone to the island, he $\begin{cases} \text{would be being educated.} \\ \text{would be educated.} \end{cases}$

Observation: The antecedent of the indefinite relative is often omitted in Greek (as in English) rather than being expressed by the demonstrative pronoun.

3. PRESENT GENERAL CONDITIONAL SENTENCE WITH RELATIVE PROTASIS

RELATIVE PROTASIS   APODOSIS

ὅς, ἥ, ὅ + ἄν + subjunctive   present indicative ὅν ἄν εἰς τὴν νῆσον $\begin{cases} πέμπωμεν \\ πέμψωμεν \end{cases}$ παιδεύεται.

Whomever we send to the island is educated.
If we send anyone to the island, he is educated.

4. PAST GENERAL CONDITIONAL SENTENCE WITH RELATIVE PROTASIS

RELATIVE PROTASIS   APODOSIS

ὅς, ἥ, ὅ + optative   imperfect indicative

Whomever we sent to the island was educated.
If we sent anyone to the island, he was educated.

5. PRESENT CONTRAFACTUAL CONDITIONAL SENTENCE WITH RELATIVE PROTASIS

RELATIVE PROTASIS   APODOSIS

ὅς, ἥ, ὅ + imperfect indicative   imperfect indicative + ἄν δν ἐπέμπομεν εἰς τὴν νῆσον ἐπαιδεύετο ἄν.

Whomever we were (now) sending to the island (but we are not now sending anyone) would (now) be being educated (but is not being educated).

If we were (now) sending anyone to the island, he would (now) be being educated.

6. PAST CONTRAFACTUAL CONDITIONAL SENTENCE WITH RELATIVE PROTASIS

RELATIVE PROTASIS   APODOSIS

ὅς, ἥ, ὅ + aorist indicative   aorist indicative + ἄν

δν ἐπέμψαμεν εἰς τὴν νῆσον ἐπαιδεύθη ἄν.

Whomever we had sent to the island (but we did not send anyone) would have been educated (but no one was).

If we had sent anyone to the island, he would have been educated.

Drill V, page 185, may now be done.

64. ADVERBS

Most adjectives form adverbs by adding the ending -ως to the stem found by dropping the ending of the masculine genitive singular. Adverbs which do not follow this rule are given separately in the vocabulary.

ἄξιος, ἀξία, ἄξιον, "worthy"   ἀξίως, "worthily" κακός, κακή, κακόν, "bad"   κακῶς, "badly"

Observation: Adverbs in -ως accented on the ultima always have a circumflex.

VOCABULARY NOTES

The adjective αἰσχρός, αἰσχρά, αἰσχρόν, "ugly, shameful," has both a physical and a moral meaning.

When two forms of ἄλλος, ἄλλη, ἄλλο, "another, other," are used in the same sentence, each is translated twice: ἄλλος ἄλλο γράφει, "One man writes one thing, another (writes) another." The conjunction ἀλλά, "but," is the neuter plural of this word with a shift in accent.

The noun γράμμα, γράμματος, τό is formed from the root of the verb γράφω + the suffix -μα: cf. πρᾶγμα, πράγματος, τό from the root of πράττω <*πράκιω. The basic meaning of γράμμα is "something written or drawn." "Letter of the alphabet" is a basic meaning of the word; τὰ γράμματα are the alphabet. The meaning is then extended to the content of the writing: a letter (epistle), inscription, document, records, books.

The noun γραφή, γραφῆς, ἡ is also derived from the verb γράφω. It is often synonymous with γράμμα. In this text it is used in one of its specialized meanings, "indictment"; cf. the English "writ." The verb γράφω in the middle voice can mean "indict," and can govern γραφήν as an internal or cognate accusative. The specific charge of the indictment goes into the genitive (the genitive of the charge) and the person whom one indicts is a direct object of the verb in the middle voice. The word γραφήν can be dropped and the genitive of the charge still remain:

> γραψώμεθα τοὺς ἀδίκους γραφὴν δώρων.
> γραψώμεθα τοὺς ἀδίκους δώρων.
> Let us indict the unjust men on a charge of bribery.

Note that there is no difference in meaning between the particles εἴθε and εἰ γάρ when they introduce optatives of wish. The accent on εἴθε is an exception to the rule and must be learned individually.

ἐκεῖνος, ἐκείνη, ἐκεῖνο is a demonstrative pronoun or adjective. When used as an adjective, it usually precedes the definite article: ἐκεῖνος ὁ ἀδελφός, "that brother." Like the article, the relative pronoun, and the adjective ἄλλος, ἐκεῖνος has no final nu in the neuter singular nominative and accusative.

The root which conveyed the idea of "stealing" was κλε/οπ-. ("e/o" indicates that the vowel of the root can take the form -ε- or -o-.) Verbs often have a present tense stem with the root with -ε- (called the e-grade of the root): κλέπτω < *κλέπιω. Nouns which indicate an act often have -o- (the o-grade of the root): κλοπή, κλοπῆς, ἡ, "theft." The stem of the perfect indicative active often uses the o-grade of the root: κέκλοφα; cf. πέπομφα.

Also note the final aspirated consonant of the perfect active tense stem: κέκλοφα; cf. πέπομφα, βέβλαφα, τέταχα. In the last principal part, note the absence of the suffix -θ- and the change of the vowel of the root to -α-; cf. ἐγράφην and the alternative aorist passive ἐβλάβην.

In the verb λείπω, λείψω, ἔλιπον, λέλοιπα, λέλειμμαι, ἐλείφθην, "leave, leave behind," the root shows three forms: λειπ- (Principal Part I and, with the final consonant changed, Principal Parts II, V, and VI), λοιπ- (Principal Part IV), and λιπ- (Principal Part III). These are the e-grade (λειπ-), the o-grade (λοιπ-), and the zero-grade (λιπ-), in which neither of these two vowels appears. There are no fixed rules for which vowel grade appears where, but the o-grade is fairly common in the perfect (cf. κλέπτω, πέμπω).

The particle οὖν, like δέ, is postpositive. Its most common use in classical Greek is as a connective, indicating a new point in the development of the narrative or drawing a conclusion; hence the meanings "then, therefore."

The noun ποίημα, ποιήματος, τό, "poem," uses the same suffix as the nouns πρᾶγμα and γράμμα. Like the agent noun ποιητής, it comes from the verb ποιέω, "make"; a poem is a "thing made."

A ῥήτωρ, ῥήτορος, ὁ is originally simply a "speaker." In a democracy, where one's power depended on one's ability to persuade one's fellow citizens with words, ῥήτωρ came to mean "politician." ῥήτωρ is cognate with the English word. All that is left of the sound that is represented by the English w is the rough breathing on the rho. This sound had been represented in Greek by a letter called digamma (ϝ), but both the sound and the letter had disappeared from Attic Greek of the classical period.

The noun ῥητορική, ῥητορικῆς, ἡ is formed from the stem of ῥήτωρ by adding the adjectival suffix -ικος, -ικη, -ικον, "pertaining to." The noun is feminine because as an adjective it originally modified the noun τέχνη: rhetoric is the craft of the speaker. Words with this suffix have given us many English derivatives, e.g., music, arithmetic, physics. One must learn to deduce the meaning of such words, since they will not be given in the vocabulary.

In the verb σῴζω, σώσω, ἔσωσα, σέσωκα, σέσωσμαι or σέσωμαι, ἐσώθην, "save," note the iota subscript in the first principal part. The alternative perfect middle and passive forms have no difference in meaning.

In the noun σωτήρ, σωτῆρος, ὁ, "savior," the suffix -τηρ indicates "one who does the action of the verb": σωτήρ, "one who saves, savior."

The noun τιμή, τιμῆς, ἡ means essentially "price, value." The value that a community puts on a man is his "honor." This was and remains an extremely important concept in Greek society.

65. PARTICIPLES

Participles are verbal adjectives.

Their verbal nature is shown by the fact that they:

    (1) are formed on verbal tense stems

    (2) have both tense and voice

    (3) can take the same constructions as the finite forms of the verb, e.g., direct and indirect objects.

Their adjectival nature is shown by the fact that they:

    (1) have gender, number, and case

    (2) can modify and agree with nouns and pronouns.

There are active, middle, and passive participles of the present, future, aorist, and perfect tenses; each of these tenses and voices has forms of the masculine, feminine, and neuter in all cases in both numbers.

The tense of a Greek participle for the most part shows aspect but often in context it is clear that there is a definite temporal relationship between the participle and the main verb.

1. The present participle shows progressive/repeated aspect; its action is most often simultaneous with that of the main verb, and it can usually be translated by the English present participle, e.g., "educating, educating for oneself, being educated."

2. The future participle, like the future indicative, has either simple or progressive/repeated aspect. It always indicates subsequent action, and usually expresses intent or purpose. English does not have a future participle. The future participle of Greek can be translated by the phrase "about to ..." or by "intending to ...," e.g., "about to/intending to educate, about to/intending to educate for oneself, about to/intending to be educated."

3. The aorist participle has simple aspect; the action of an aorist participle is often prior to, sometimes simultaneous with, that of the main verb.

The English equivalent of the aorist passive participle is the simple past participle "educated." Since English does not have the equivalent of an aorist participle active or middle, a Greek aorist participle active or middle must be translated by various English expressions, depending on the way in which the participle is used:

Having come (once and for all) to the city, he died.

Coming (once and for all) to the city, he died.

After coming to the city, he died.

Laughing (once and for all), he said the following.

With a laugh he said the following.

In Greek, all of the words in bold face above would have been expressed by aorist participles.

4. The perfect participle stresses the completion of the action; it is translated by the English present perfect participle, e.g., "having educated, having educated for oneself, having been educated."

Although the Greek aorist and perfect participles can often be translated by the same English participle, e.g. "having educated," the Greek aorist participle stresses the simple performance of the action, the perfect participle the completion of the action.

There are three major uses of the participle in Greek, the attributive, the circumstantial, and the supplementary. In this Unit the formation and declension of the participle and its attributive and circumstantial uses are presented. The supplementary use of the participle is presented in Unit 14.

Drill I, page 221, may now be done.

66. FORMATION AND DECLENSION OF THE ACTIVE PARTICIPLES

1. FORMATION OF THE ACTIVE PARTICIPLES

To form the active participles add the following suffixes + endings to the appropriate tense stem:

TENSE and TENSE STEM	SUFFIXES + ENDINGS
	M	F	N
PRESENT Tense Stem	-ων	-ουσα	-ον	Nom./Voc. S
	-οντος	-ουσης	-οντος	Gen.
FUTURE Active and Middle Tense Stem	-ων	-ουσα	-ον	Nom./Voc. S
	-οντος	-ουσης	-οντος	Gen.
FIRST AORIST Active and Middle Tense Stem	-ᾱς	-ᾱσα	-αν	Nom./Voc. S
	-αντος	-ᾱσης	-αντος	Gen.
SECOND AORIST Active and Middle Tense Stem	-ών	-οῦσα	-όν	Nom./Voc. S
	-όντος	-ούσης	-όντος	Gen.

| PERFECT Active Tense | -ώς | -υῖα | -ός | Nom./Voc. S |
| Stem | -ότος | -υίᾱς | -ότος | Gen. |

Thus the active participles of παιδεύω, with the second aorist active participle of λείπω, are as follows:

	M	F	N
PRESENT	παιδεύων	παιδεύουσα	παιδεῦον	Nom./Voc. S
	παιδεύοντος	παιδευούσης	παιδεύοντος	Gen.
FUTURE	παιδεύσων	παιδεύσουσα	παιδεῦσον	Nom./Voc. S
	παιδεύσοντος	παιδευσούσης	παιδεύσοντος	Gen.
FIRST	παιδεύσᾱς	παιδεύσᾱσα	παιδεῦσαν	Nom./Voc. S
AORIST	παιδεύσαντος	παιδευσάσης	παιδεύσαντος	Gen.
SECOND	λιπών	λιποῦσα	λιπόν	Nom./Voc. S
AORIST	λιπόντος	λιπούσης	λιπόντος	Gen.
PERFECT	πεπαιδευκώς	πεπαιδευκυῖα	πεπαιδευκός	Nom./Voc. S
	πεπαιδευκότος	πεπαιδευκυίᾱς	πεπαιδευκότος	Gen.

2. DECLENSION OF THE ACTIVE PARTICIPLES

The masculine and neuter are declined like third-declension nouns, and the feminine like a first-declension noun with a nominative in short -α. To decline a participle, drop the declension endings from the masculine and feminine genitive singular to get the declension stems; then add the appropriate third-declension endings to the masculine/neuter declension stem and the appropriate first-declension endings to the feminine declension stem. The masculine/neuter dative plural undergoes sound changes according to the chart given in Section 48, p. 141.

	M	F	N
Nom./Voc. S	—	-α	—
Gen.	-ος	-ης, -ᾱς	-ος
Dat.	-ι	-ῃ, -ᾳ	-ι
Acc.	-α	-αν	—
Nom./Voc. P	-ες	-αι	-α
Gen.	-ων	-ῶν	-ων
Dat.	-σι(ν)	-αις	-σι(ν)
Acc.	-ᾱς	-ᾱς	-α

3. DECLENSION OF THE PRESENT ACTIVE PARTICIPLE

	M	F	N
Nom./Voc. S	παιδεύων	παιδεύουσα	παιδεῦον
Gen.	παιδεύοντος	παιδευούσης	παιδεύοντος
Dat.	παιδεύοντι	παιδευούσῃ	παιδεύοντι
Acc.	παιδεύοντα	παιδεύουσαν	παιδεῦον
Nom./Voc. P	παιδεύοντες	παιδεύουσαι	παιδεύοντα
Gen.	παιδευόντων	παιδευουσῶν	παιδευόντων
Dat.	παιδεύουσι(ν)	παιδευούσαις	παιδεύουσι(ν)
Acc.	παιδεύοντας	παιδευούσᾱς	παιδεύοντα

Observations: (1) THE ACCENT ON PARTICIPLES IS PERSISTENT AND IS GIVEN BY THE MASCULINE SINGULAR NOMINATIVE; hence the circumflex accent on the neuter singular nominative/accusative/vocative παιδεῦον.

(2) The vocative of all first and third declension participles is the same as the nominative.

(3) Except for having no separate vocative, the masculine of the participle is declined exactly like the noun γέρων, γέροντος, ὁ. Note the spurious diphthong -ου- in the masculine and neuter dative plural παιδεύουσι(ν), a form identical with the third person plural, present indicative active form of the verb. Context will allow one to distinguish the two forms.

(4) The feminine of the participle is declined exactly like the noun μοῦσα, μούσης, ἡ. Note the circumflex accent on the ultima of the genitive plural, an exception to the rule of persistence of accent.

4. DECLENSION OF THE FUTURE ACTIVE PARTICIPLE

The future active participle differs from the present active participle only in the stem; the endings are exactly the same.

	M	F	N
Nom./Voc. S	παιδεύσων	παιδεύσουσα	παιδεῦσον
Gen.	παιδεύσοντος	παιδευσούσης	παιδεύσοντος
Dat.	παιδεύσοντι	παιδευσούσῃ	παιδεύσοντι
Acc.	παιδεύσοντα	παιδεύσουσαν	παιδεῦσον

Nom./Voc. P	παιδεύσοντες	παιδεύσουσαι	παιδεύσοντα
Gen.	παιδευσόντων	παιδευσουσῶν	παιδευσόντων
Dat.	παιδεύσουσι(ν)	παιδευσούσαις	παιδεύσουσι(ν)
Acc.	παιδεύσοντας	παιδευσούσᾱς	παιδεύσοντα

Observation: The masculine and neuter dative plural are identical with the third person plural, future indicative active. Context will allow one to distinguish the two forms.

5. DECLENSION OF THE FIRST AORIST ACTIVE PARTICIPLE

	M	F	N
Nom./Voc. S	παιδεύσᾱς	παιδεύσᾱσα	παιδεῦσαν
Gen.	παιδεύσαντος	παιδευσάσης	παιδεύσαντος
Dat.	παιδεύσαντι	παιδευσάσῃ	παιδεύσαντι
Acc.	παιδεύσαντα	παιδεύσᾱσαν	παιδεῦσαν
Nom./Voc. P	παιδεύσαντες	παιδεύσᾱσαι	παιδεύσαντα
Gen.	παιδευσάντων	παιδευσᾱσῶν	παιδευσάντων
Dat.	παιδεύσᾱσι(ν)	παιδευσάσαις	παιδεύσᾱσι(ν)
Acc.	παιδεύσαντας	παιδευσάσᾱς	παιδεύσαντα

Observation: Instead of the thematic vowel of the present and future active participles, the first aorist active participle uses the tense vowel
-α-. In the masculine and neuter dative plural, the combination
-αντσι(ν) becomes -ᾱσι(ν); see Section 48, p. 141.

6. DECLENSION OF THE SECOND AORIST ACTIVE PARTICIPLE

	M	F	N
Nom./Voc. S	λιπών	λιποῦσα	λιπόν
Gen.	λιπόντος	λιπούσης	λιπόντος
Dat.	λιπόντι	λιπούσῃ	λιπόντι
Acc.	λιπόντα	λιποῦσαν	λιπόν
Nom./Voc. P	λιπόντες	λιποῦσαι	λιπόντα
Gen.	λιπόντων	λιπουσῶν	λιπόντων
Dat.	λιποῦσι(ν)	λιπούσαις	λιποῦσι(ν)
Acc.	λιπόντας	λιπούσᾱς	λιπόντα

Observations: (1) This participle is declined exactly like the present and future active participles of παιδεύω (cf. Section 66.3–4) except for the accent. Compare λιπόντος with παιδεύοντος.

(2) As in all participles whose feminine nominative singular ends in short -α, the accent shifts to the ultima in the genitive plural: λιπουσῶν.

7. DECLENSION OF THE PERFECT ACTIVE PARTICIPLE

	M	F	N
Nom./Voc. S	πεπαιδευκώς	πεπαιδευκυῖα	πεπαιδευκός
Gen.	πεπαιδευκότος	πεπαιδευκυίᾱς	πεπαιδευκότος
Dat.	πεπαιδευκότι	πεπαιδευκυίᾳ	πεπαιδευκότι
Acc.	πεπαιδευκότα	πεπαιδευκυῖαν	πεπαιδευκός
Nom./Voc. P	πεπαιδευκότες	πεπαιδευκυῖαι	πεπαιδευκότα
Gen.	πεπαιδευκότων	πεπαιδευκυιῶν	πεπαιδευκότων
Dat.	πεπαιδευκόσι(ν)	πεπαιδευκυίαις	πεπαιδευκόσι(ν)
Acc.	πεπαιδευκότας	πεπαιδευκυίᾱς	πεπαιδευκότα

Observations: (1) Note the absence of a -ν- before the -τ- in the masculine/neuter declension stem. In the masculine/neuter dative plural, the combination -οτσι becomes -οσι; see Section 48, p. 141.

(2) The feminine is declined like γέφῡρα, γεφύρᾱς, ἡ.

(3) Note the accent on the penult in all forms except the masculine nominative/vocative singular, the neuter nominative/vocative and accusative singular, and the feminine genitive plural.

67. FORMATION AND DECLENSION OF THE MIDDLE AND PASSIVE PARTICIPLES

The participles use the same forms for the middle and passive voice wherever the indicative does so, i.e., in the present and perfect tenses. In the future and in the aorist, there are separate middle and passive forms.

All middle and passive forms except the aorist passive add to the appropriate tense stem the suffix + endings -μενος, -μενη, -μενον preceded by the thematic vowel in the present, future, and second aorist, and by the tense vowel -α- in the first aorist. They are declined just like first and second declension adjectives.

1. FORMATION OF THE MIDDLE PARTICIPLES

TENSE and TENSE STEM   SUFFIXES + ENDINGS

	M	F	N
PRESENT Tense Stem	-ομενος	-ομενη	-ομενον	Nom.	S
	-ομενου	-ομενης	-ομενου	Gen.
FUTURE Active and Middle Tense Stem	-ομενος	-ομενη	-ομενον	Nom.	S
	-ομενου	-ομενης	-ομενου	Gen.
FIRST AORIST Active and Middle Tense Stem	-αμενος	-αμενη	-αμενον	Nom.	S
	-αμενου	-αμενης	-αμενου	Gen.
SECOND AORIST Active and Middle Tense Stem	-ομενος	-ομενη	-ομενον	Nom.	S
	-ομενου	-ομενης	-ομενου	Gen.
PERFECT Middle and Passive Tense Stem	-μένος	-μένη	-μένον	Nom.	S
	-μένου	-μένης	-μένου	Gen.

Thus the middle participles of παιδεύω, with the second aorist middle participle of λείπω, are as follows:

	M	F	N
PRESENT	παιδευόμενος	παιδευομένη	παιδευόμενον	Nom.	S
	παιδευομένου	παιδευομένης	παιδευομένου	Gen.
FUTURE	παιδευσόμενος	παιδευσομένη	παιδευσόμενον	Nom.	S
	παιδευσομένου	παιδευσομένης	παιδευσομένου	Gen.
FIRST AORIST	παιδευσάμενος	παιδευσαμένη	παιδευσάμενον	Nom.	S
	παιδευσαμένου	παιδευσαμένης	παιδευσαμένου	Gen.
SECOND AORIST	λιπόμενος	λιπομένη	λιπόμενον	Nom.	S
	λιπομένου	λιπομένης	λιπομένου	Gen.
PERFECT	πεπαιδευμένος	πεπαιδευμένη	πεπαιδευμένον	Nom.	S
	πεπαιδευμένου	πεπαιδευμένης	πεπαιδευμένου	Gen.

2. FORMATION OF THE PASSIVE PARTICIPLES

TENSE and TENSE STEM	SUFFIXES + ENDINGS
	M	F	N
PRESENT Tense Stem	-ομενος	-ομενη	-ομενον	Nom. S
	-ομενου	-ομενης	-ομενου	Gen.
FUTURE Passive Tense Stem	-ομενος	-ομενη	-ομενον	Nom. S
	-ομενου	-ομενης	-ομενου	Gen.
AORIST Passive Tense Stem	-είς	-εῖσα	-έν	Nom./Voc. S
	-έντος	-είσης	-έντος	Gen.
PERFECT Middle and Passive Tense Stem	-μένος	-μένη	-μένον	Nom. S
	-μένου	-μένης	-μένου	Gen.

Note that the present passive and perfect passive participles are the same as the present middle and perfect middle participles, respectively.

Note also that ALL verbs form the aorist passive participle in the same way, using Principal Part VI.

Thus the passive participles of παιδεύω are as follows:

M	F	N
PRESENT
παιδευόμενος	παιδευομένη	παιδευόμενον	Nom. S
παιδευομένου	παιδευομένης	παιδευομένου	Gen.
FUTURE
παιδευθησόμενος	παιδευθησομένη	παιδευθησόμενον	Nom. S
παιδευθησομένου	παιδευθησομένης	παιδευθησομένου	Gen.
AORIST
παιδευθείς	παιδευθεῖσα	παιδευθέν	Nom./Voc. S
παιδευθέντος	παιδευθείσης	παιδευθέντος	Gen.
PERFECT
πεπαιδευμένος	πεπαιδευμένη	πεπαιδευμένον	Nom. S
πεπαιδευμένου	πεπαιδευμένης	πεπαιδευμένου	Gen.

Observation: Since the aorist passive of all verbs is formed in the same way from Principal Part VI, the aorist passive participle of λείπω is formed just like that of παιδεύω: λειφθείς, λειφθεῖσα, λειφθέν.

3. DECLENSION OF THE PRESENT MIDDLE/PASSIVE PARTICIPLE

The present middle/passive participle, future middle and passive participles, aorist middle participles, and perfect middle/passive participle are all declined like adjectives in -ος, -η, -ον. The declension of the present middle/passive participle is offered as a paradigm for all of the above.

	M	F	N
Nom. S	παιδευόμενος	παιδευομένη	παιδευόμενον
Gen.	παιδευομένου	παιδευομένης	παιδευομένου
Dat.	παιδευομένῳ	παιδευομένη	παιδευομένῳ
Acc.	παιδευόμενον	παιδευομένην	παιδευόμενον
Voc.	παιδευόμενε	παιδευομένη	παιδευόμενον
Nom./Voc. P	παιδευόμενοι	παιδευόμεναι	παιδευόμενα
Gen.	παιδευομένων	παιδευομένων	παιδευομένων
Dat.	παιδευομένοις	παιδευομέναις	παιδευομένοις
Acc.	παιδευομένους	παιδευομένᾱς	παιδευόμενα

Observation: Note that in the feminine plural genitive, the accent is NOT a circumflex on the ultima. In this, the participles in -μενος, -μενη, -μενον differ from the participles seen so far and resemble the adjectives.

4. DECLENSION OF THE AORIST PASSIVE PARTICIPLE

The aorist passive participle is declined like the active participles with a masculine/neuter declension stem in -ντ- and a short -α feminine.

	M	F	N
Nom./Voc. S	παιδευθείς	παιδευθεῖσα	παιδευθέν
Gen.	παιδευθέντος	παιδευθείσης	παιδευθέντος
Dat.	παιδευθέντι	παιδευθείση	παιδευθέντι
Acc.	παιδευθέντα	παιδευθεῖσαν	παιδευθέν
Nom./Voc. P	παιδευθέντες	παιδευθεῖσαι	παιδευθέντα
Gen.	παιδευθέντων	παιδευθεισῶν	παιδευθέντων
Dat.	παιδευθεῖσι(ν)	παιδευθείσαις	παιδευθεῖσι(ν)
Acc.	παιδευθέντας	παιδευθείσᾱς	παιδευθέντα

Observations: (1) Note the accent on the penult in all forms except the masculine nominative/vocative singular, the neuter nominative/vocative and accusative singular, and the feminine genitive plural.

(2) In the masculine and neuter dative plural, the combination -εντσι becomes -εισι; see Section 48, p. 141.

68. SUMMARY OF THE FORMS OF THE PARTICIPLE

PERFECT	IV having done -ώς -υῖα -ός -ότος -υίας -ότος	V having done for oneself -μένος -μένη -μένον	V having been done -μένος -μένη -μένον

69. ATTRIBUTIVE USE OF THE PARTICIPLE

The attributive participle acts like any other adjective and is found in the attributive position, i.e., between the article and the noun it modifies or immediately preceded by the article after the noun it modifies. Such participles agree, of course, in gender, number, and case with the word they modify.

Remember that the tense of a participle can show both aspect (progressive/repeated, simple, completed) and relative time (simultaneous, prior, subsequent); see Section 65.

Attributive participles can often be translated by relative clauses.

ὁ θύων ποιητὴς ἐσώθη.	The sacrificing poet was saved.
ὁ ποιητὴς ὁ θύων ἐσώθη.	The poet sacrificing was saved.
ποιητὴς ὁ θύων ἐσώθη.	The poet who was sacrificing was saved.

τοῖς θύσᾱσι ποιηταῖς
τοῖς ποιηταῖς τοῖς θύσᾱσιν	to/for the poets who sacrificed
ποιηταῖς τοῖς θύσᾱσιν

τῆς τυθείσης αἰγός	of the sacrificed she-goat
τῆς αἰγὸς τῆς τυθείσης	of the she-goat which was sacrificed
αἰγὸς τῆς τυθείσης

For each of the participles in the examples given above, an adjective could be substituted, e.g., τῆς καλῆς αἰγός, "of the beautiful she-goat." The attributive participle, like any adjective, serves to limit the noun with which it agrees.

The attributive participle takes all the constructions which the finite verb takes:

ὁ τὴν αἶγα θύσᾱς ποιητής
the poet who sacrificed the she-goat

ἡ αἲξ ἡ ὑπὸ τοῦ ποιητοῦ τυθεῖσα
the she-goat sacrificed by the poet
the she-goat which was sacrificed by the poet

As with all adjectives, the attributive participle can be used substantively:

ὁ τὴν αἶγα τῇ θεῷ θύων
the man sacrificing the goat to the goddess
the man who is sacrificing the goat to the goddess

ἡ χορεύουσα
the dancing woman
the woman who is dancing
the dancer

The article with the substantive use of the attributive participle can be either particular, i.e., referring to specific people or objects, or generic, i.e., referring to a class of people or objects; cf. Sections 16.4 (p. 29) and 46 (p. 127). In the negative, οὐ is used with particular substantives; μή, with generic substantives. Thus, οἱ θύοντες are either "the (specific) men sacrificing, the men who are sacrificing," or "men (the whole class) sacrificing, men who sacrifice"; but οἱ οὐ θύοντες are only "the specific men not sacrificing, the men who are not sacrificing (as opposed, e.g., to those over there who are sacrificing)" and οἱ μὴ θύοντες are only "those (the whole class) not sacrificing, those who do not sacrifice."

Drill II.1 24, pages 221 22, may now be done.

70. CIRCUMSTANTIAL USE OF THE PARTICIPLE

A circumstantial participle is one NOT in the attributive position which gives the circumstances under which the action of the main verb takes place. Such participles agree in gender, number, and case with a noun or pronoun in the sentence (or the subject of the sentence contained in the verb), but they are really the equivalent of an adverbial clause, i.e., they function as adverbs in telling, e.g., why or when the action of the main verb of the sentence occurs.

Compare the use of the attributive participle in sentence (1) below with that of the circumstantial participle in sentence (2).

(1) ὁ θύων ποιητὴς ὑπὸ τοῦ δήμου σῴζεται.
   The poet sacrificing is being saved by the people.
   The poet who is sacrificing is being saved by the people.

In sentence (1) the participle θύων is in the attributive position and serves to point out the poet as would the adjective καλός.

(2) θύων ὁ ποιητὴς ὑπὸ τοῦ δήμου σῴζεται.
   a. Sacrificing, the poet is saved by the people.
   b. When he sacrifices, the poet is saved by the people.
   c. Since he sacrifices, the poet is saved by the people.
   d. If he sacrifices, the poet is saved by the people.

In sentence (2) the participle is not in the attributive position and therefore is not serving to identify or point out the poet; instead, it gives the circumstances under which he is saved. The participle, in Greek as in English, may indicate only the general circumstances, or the content and context of the sentence may suggest something more specific as in translation (b), temporal relation between the action of the participle and that of the main verb; (c), causal relation between the action of the participle and that of the main verb; or (d), conditional relation between the action of the participle and that of the main verb.

Sometimes the exact nature of the circumstantial participle can be made clear by the use of an adverb or conjunction with either the main verb or the participle.

1. A temporal adverb like ἔπειτα, "then, thereupon," accompanying the main verb, can indicate that a circumstantial participle is temporal.

> λυθέντες ἔπειτα τοῖς θεοῖς ἐθύσαμεν.
> Freed, we then sacrificed to the gods.
> Upon being freed, we then sacrificed to the gods.
> After being freed, we then sacrificed to the gods.
> After we were freed, we then sacrificed to the gods.

2. The adverb ὅμως, "nevertheless," with the main verb indicates that the circumstantial participle is concessive, i.e., the equivalent of a clause introduced by the conjunction "although."

> λυθέντες ὅμως τοῖς θεοῖς οὐκ ἐθύσαμεν.
> Freed, we nevertheless did not sacrifice to the gods.
> Upon being freed, we nevertheless did not sacrifice to the gods.
> Although freed, we nevertheless did not sacrifice to the gods.
> Although we were freed, we nevertheless did not sacrifice to the gods.

3. The word καίπερ, "although," with a circumstantial participle also indicates that the participle is concessive.

> καίπερ λυθέντες τοῖς θεοῖς οὐκ ἐθύσαμεν.
> Although freed, we did not sacrifice to the gods.
> Although we were freed, we did not sacrifice to the gods.

4. The words ἅτε and οἷα with a circumstantial participle indicate that the participle is causal and that the speaker or writer is stating the cause on his own responsibility.

> Freed (and I as speaker am asserting that this is the cause), they sacrificed to the gods.
> Because they were freed (and I as speaker am asserting that this is the cause), they sacrificed to the gods.

5. The word ὡς with a participle shows that the participle expresses either cause or purpose. The cause or purpose is one given by the subject of the sentence (or someone else important in the sentence), NOT one asserted on the authority of the speaker or writer. This reason may be either real or pretended.

> ὡς λυθέντες τοῖς θεοῖς ἔθυσαν.
> Freed (as they said), they sacrificed to the gods.
> Because they were freed (as they said), they sacrificed to the gods.
> ἐπέμφθησαν ὡς θύσοντες τοῖς θεοῖς.
> They were sent to sacrifice to the gods (as they said).

NOTE that the future participle, even without an introductory word, is an alternative to the purpose clause with a verb in the subjunctive or the optative.

> ἐπέμφθησαν θύσοντες τοῖς θεοῖς.
> They were sent to sacrifice to the gods.

6. The negative with all circumstantial participles is οὐ except for conditional participles (circumstantial participles used as protases of conditional sentences), which use μή. Therefore a circumstantial participle negated by μή MUST be conditional.

> μὴ βλαπτόμενοι ἐθέλομεν δῶρα πέμπειν.
> Not being harmed, we are willing to send gifts.
> If we are not harmed, we are willing to send gifts.

In this sentence, the participle stands for a present general protasis.

Compare the conditional participle, indicated by the negative μή, with a causal participle, negated by οὐ.

> οὐ βλαπτόμενοι ἐθέλομεν δῶρα πέμπειν.
> Not being harmed, we are willing to send gifts.
> Since we are not harmed, we are willing to send gifts.

Without the negative or an adverb or conjunction to help distinguish the circumstantial participles, only context allows one to choose from among all the possibilities.

> βλαπτόμενοι οὐκ ἐθέλομεν δῶρα πέμπειν.
> Being harmed, we do not wish to send gifts.
> When we are harmed, we do not wish to send gifts.
> Since we are harmed, we do not wish to send gifts.
> If we are harmed, we do not wish to send gifts.
> Although we are harmed, we do not wish to send gifts.

71. THE ADJECTIVE πᾶς, πᾶσα, πᾶν, "all, every; whole"

The adjective πᾶς, πᾶσα, πᾶν, "all, every; whole" has forms of the first and third declensions. It is declined as follows:

	M	F	N
Nom./Voc. S	πᾶς	πᾶσα	πᾶν
Gen.	παντός	πάσης	παντός
Dat.	παντί	πάσῃ	παντί
Acc.	πάντα	πᾶσαν	πᾶν
Nom./Voc. P	πάντες	πᾶσαι	πάντα
Gen.	πάντων	πᾱσῶν	πάντων
Dat.	πᾶσι(ν)	πάσαις	πᾶσι(ν)
Acc.	πάντας	πάσᾱς	πάντα

Observation: This adjective has, except for the accent, the same declensional endings as the aorist participle active: cf. λύσᾱς, λύσᾱσα, λῦσαν. The masculine and neuter stem is παντ- with a short alpha. The feminine declension stem is πᾱσ-. Note that in the singular in the masculine and neuter, the accent shifts to the ultima in the genitive and the dative; in all forms of the plural, except for the genitive plural πᾱσῶν, it remains on the penult. In the dative plural masculine/neuter, *πάντσι(ν) gives πᾶσι(ν), with the long alpha due to compensatory lengthening.

This adjective usually appears in the predicate position and means "all":

> πάντες οἱ διδάσκαλοι
> οἱ διδάσκαλοι πάντες
> all the teachers

> πᾶσα ἡ χώρᾱ
> ἡ χώρᾱ πᾶσα
> all the land

In the singular, unaccompanied by the article, this adjective means "every":

> πᾶς ἄνθρωπος
> every man

In the attributive position, this adjective means "whole" and emphasizes the entirety of a thing or group:

> ἡ πᾶσα χώρᾱ
> the whole land

VOCABULARY NOTES

The verb ἄγω, ἄξω, ἤγαγον, ἦχα, ἦγμαι, ἤχθην, "lead," has as its basic root ἀγ-. The future was formed by the addition of -σ-: ἄξω. The aorist active and middle tense stem shows reduplication and is a second aorist: ἀγαγ- when unaugmented, ἠγαγ- when augmented. The ἠ- of Principal Parts IV and V is part of the stem and remains unchanged in the perfect and pluperfect (cf. ἦρχα, ἠθέληκα, etc.). In Principal Part VI, the ἠ- is a past indicative augment and does not appear in the unaugmented aorist passive tense stem: ἀχθ-. The word is used for leading animals or people (especially of leading away people or animals captured in war); providing leadership; conducting, e.g., ἄγω ἀγῶνα, "I hold a contest"; ἄγω θυσίαν, "I perform a sacrifice." The expression εἰρήνην ἄγειν means "to keep peace."

The adjective Ἀθηναῖος, Ἀθηναία, Ἀθηναῖον, "Athenian," is derived from Ἀθῆναι, Ἀθηνῶν, "Athens," which in turn is the plural of the name of the goddess Athena as it appears in Homer, Ἀθήνη, Ἀθήνης, ἡ.

Notice that ἅμα can be either an adverb, "at the same time," or a preposition with the dative, "at the same time as, together with."

Note that ἅτε and οἷα with causal participles both indicate that the speaker is taking responsibility for the assertion. Contrast this with ὡς with a participle of cause or purpose, which indicates that the cause or purpose is that of the subject of the sentence or of someone else important in the sentence.

The adverb ἔπειτα is used of time, "then" (= "thereupon, afterward"), or of consequences, "therefore."

The verb ἥκω, ἥξω, ——, ——, ——, ——, "have come, be present," exists in the present, the imperfect, and the future tenses only. ἥκω is present in form but perfect in meaning; the imperfect has a pluperfect meaning: ἧκον, "I had come, was present."

The word καίπερ, "although," is used only with participles, not with finite verbs. It consists of the conjunction καί + the enclitic -περ, and is accented accordingly (cf. καίτοι).

The accent of the conjunctions μήτε ... μήτε and οὔτε ... οὔτε, "neither ... nor," shows that they are formed from the negative adverb + the enclitic τε. Compounds of μή and οὐ are used in the same constructions as the corresponding simple negative:

οὔτε θύομεν οὔτε χορεύομεν.
We are neither sacrificing nor dancing.

μήτε θύωμεν μήτε χορεύωμεν.
Let us neither sacrifice nor dance.

The noun οἶνος, οἴνου, ὁ, "wine," is cognate with the Latin vīnum, whence the English "wine." Presumably the ancestors of the Greeks learned viticulture, wine drinking, and the name of the beverage from the pre-Greek inhabitants of the country. In Greek the initial digamma dropped out: * ϝοῖνος > οἶνος.

The adverb ὅμως, "nevertheless," frequently indicates that a participle is a concessive one.

Like the adjective πᾶς, πᾶσα, πᾶν, "all, every; whole," are declined the strengthened forms ἅπᾶς, ἅπᾶσα, ἅπαν, "all, quite all," and σύμπᾶς, σύμπᾶσα, σύμπαν, "all together." Except for the feminine genitive plural, ἁπᾱσῶν, συμπᾱσῶν, these forms are accented on the antepenult when the ultima is short, e.g., ἅπαντος. Otherwise, they are accented on the penult. Note the short alpha in the neuter nominative/accusative/vocative singular; contrast πᾶν. Like the simple form, the strengthened forms of this adjective appear in the predicate position and, less commonly, in the attributive position.

The noun στρατηγός, στρατηγοῦ, ὁ is a compound of στρατός, στρατοῦ, ὁ, "army," and the root ἀγ- "lead": "army-leader, general."

A χρῆμα, χρήματος, τό is a thing needed or useful. "Money" is an obvious extension of this meaning.

Note that the conjunction ὡς, which can accompany a circumstantial participle to show that the speaker does not vouch for the cause or purpose expressed, is a proclitic.

72. CONTRACTED VERBS: INTRODUCTION

Some verbs have a present tense stem which ends in a, ε, or o. Since this vowel contracts with the initial vowel or diphthong of the various endings added to this stem, according to the rules given below, these verbs are called contracted verbs.

THE CONTRACTION TAKES PLACE IN ANY FORM WHICH USES THE STEM FROM PRINCIPAL PART I. ALL OTHER TENSES ARE FORMED ACCORDING TO RULES ALREADY LEARNED, as the Principal Parts below make clear.

The contraction follows regular rules which will be given as each type of verb is presented.

Most endings employed by contracted verbs are the same as those of such verbs as παιδεύω. Different endings occur in the present optative active only, and these will be listed separately.

Uncontracted forms of these verbs will be given in parentheses for comparison.

73. CONTRACTED VERBS WITH PRESENT TENSE STEMS IN -a-

The following verb will serve as an example:

τῑμάω, τῑμήσω, ἐτίμησα, τετίμηκα, τετίμημαι, ἐτῑμήθην, "honor"

The present tense stem is formed, as usual, by dropping the ending -ω from Principal Part I: τῑμα-. The a of this stem contracts with the initial vowel or diphthong of the endings according to the rules below.

\boxed{
\begin{array}{ll}
\text{CONTRACTIONS OF } \alpha \\[4pt]
\alpha\varepsilon \;>\; \bar{a} & \alpha o \;>\; \omega \\
\alpha\varepsilon\iota \;>\; \bar{\varrho} & \alpha o\iota \;>\; \varphi \\
\alpha\eta \;>\; \bar{a} & \alpha o\upsilon \;>\; \omega \\
\alpha\eta \;>\; \bar{\varrho} & \alpha\omega \;>\; \omega \end{array}
$$

Thus the forms of the present and imperfect tenses of τῑμάω are as follows. (In learning the contracted forms, one can either memorize the contracted endings or make the contractions oneself according to the rules above from the uncontracted forms which are given in parentheses.)

1. PRESENT INDICATIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE/PASSIVE

		ACTIVE		MIDDLE/PASSIVE
S	1	τῑμῶ	(τῑμάω)	τῑμῶμαι	(τῑμάομαι)
	2	τῑμᾷς	(τῑμάεις)	τῑμᾷ	(τῑμάῃ/τῑμάει)
	3	τῑμᾷ	(τῑμάει)	τῑμᾶται	(τῑμάεται)
P	1	τῑμῶμεν	(τῑμάομεν)	τῑμώμεθα	(τῑμαόμεθα)
	2	τῑμᾶτε	(τῑμάετε)	τῑμᾶσθε	(τῑμάεσθε)
	3	τῑμῶσι(ν)	(τῑμάουσι[ν])	τῑμῶνται	(τῑμάονται)

Observations: (1) The first person singular, present indicative active is given in its uncontracted form as Principal Part I in order to show the vowel of the present tense stem. But this form, like the others, is contracted in actual usage.

(2) The third person singular, present indicative active is identical in form with the second person singular, present indicative middle/passive.

General note on the accent of contracted verbs:

IF EITHER OF THE TWO SYLLABLES BEING CONTRACTED BORE AN ACCENT IN THE ORIGINAL UNCONTRACTED FORM, THE ACCENT REMAINS ON THE NEW, CONTRACTED SYLLABLE. THE ACCENT ON A CONTRACTED ULTIMA IS A CIRCUMFLEX; THE ACCENT ON A CONTRACTED PENULT IS DETERMINED BY THE RULES FOR THE POSSIBILITIES OF ACCENT. THE ACCENT OF THE UNCONTRACTED FORMS IS RECESSIVE.

2. IMPERFECT INDICATIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE/PASSIVE

		ACTIVE		MIDDLE/PASSIVE
S	1	ἐτίμων	(ἐτίμαον)	ἐτῑμώμην	(ἐτῑμαόμην)
	2	ἐτίμᾱς	(ἐτίμαες)	ἐτῑμῶ	(ἐτῑμάου)
	3	ἐτίμᾱ	(ἐτίμαε)	ἐτῑμᾶτο	(ἐτῑμάετο)
P	1	ἐτῑμῶμεν	(ἐτῑμάομεν)	ἐτῑμώμεθα	(ἐτῑμαόμεθα)
	2	ἐτῑμᾶτε	(ἐτῑμάετε)	ἐτῑμᾶσθε	(ἐτῑμάεσθε)
	3	ἐτίμων	(ἐτίμαον)	ἐτῑμῶντο	(ἐτῑμάοντο)

Observations: (1) The imperfect indicative employs, of course, the past indicative augment.

(2) Nu-movable is NEVER added to the third person singular, imperfect indicative active of contracted verbs. Thus ἐτίμᾱ, but ἔλῡε(ν).

3. PRESENT SUBJUNCTIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE/PASSIVE

		ACTIVE		MIDDLE/PASSIVE
S	1	τῑμῶ	(τῑμάω)	τῑμῶμαι	(τῑμάωμαι)
	2	τῑμᾷς	(τῑμάῃς)	τῑμᾷ	(τῑμάῃ)
	3	τῑμᾷ	(τῑμάῃ)	τῑμᾶται	(τῑμάηται)
P	1	τῑμῶμεν	(τῑμάωμεν)	τῑμώμεθα	(τῑμαώμεθα)
	2	τῑμᾶτε	(τῑμάητε)	τῑμᾶσθε	(τῑμάησθε)
	3	τῑμῶσι(ν)	(τῑμάωσι[ν])	τῑμῶνται	(τῑμάωνται)

Observation: The present subjunctive of τῑμάω, both active and middle/passive, is identical in form with the indicative throughout. Context will help to distinguish the forms.

4. PRESENT OPTATIVE ACTIVE

In the present optative active contracted verbs can employ, before contraction, EITHER endings identical to those of παιδεύω OR a separate set of endings. The latter are listed separately.

S 1 τῑμῷμι   (τῑμάοιμι)   OR   τῑμῷην   (τῑμαοίην)   -οιην
   2 τῑμῷς   (τῑμάοις)   τῑμῷης   (τῑμαοίης)   -οιης
   3 τῑμῷ   (τῑμάοι)   τῑμῷη   (τῑμαοίη)   -οιη

P 1 τῑμῷμεν   (τῑμάοιμεν)   τῑμῷημεν   (τῑμαοίημεν) -οιημεν
   2 τῑμῷτε   (τῑμάοιτε)   τῑμῷητε   (τῑμαοίητε)   -οιητε
   3 τῑμῷεν   (τῑμάοιεν)   τῑμῷησαν   (τῑμαοίησαν) -οιησαν

Observations: (1) The alternative endings are more common in the singular; the endings identical to those of παιδεύω are more common in the plural.

(2) This is the only instance where contracted verbs employ a set of endings different from those of παιδεύω. The alternative endings are composed of the thematic vowel -o-, the optative suffix -ιη-, and the person markers -ν, -ς, —, -μεν,
-τε, -σαν. Compare the person markers of the aorist optative passive (παιδευθείην, etc.).

5. PRESENT OPTATIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE

S 1 τῑμῷμην   (τῑμαοίμην)
   2 τῑμῷο   (τῑμάοιο)
   3 τῑμῷτο   (τῑμάοιτο)

P 1 τῑμῷμεθα   (τῑμαοίμεθα)
   2 τῑμῷσθε   (τῑμάοισθε)
   3 τῑμῷντο   (τῑμάοιντο)

6. PRESENT INFINITIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE/PASSIVE

The contraction of the present infinitive active ending -ειν with the a of the stem does NOT follow the rules presented above.

τῑμᾶν

Observation: This form was originally *τῑμάεεν, just as the present infinitive active of παιδεύω was *παιδεύεεν. The diphthong of the ending
-ειν resulted from the contraction of the two epsilons. (Cf. the rules for the contraction of epsilon in Section 74.) Like a diphthong that results from compensatory lengthening, a diphthong that results from contraction is also a spurious diphthong.

When the spurious diphthong -ει- contracts with an -α-, there is no iota subscript in the result.

The present infinitive middle/passive follows the regular rules:

$$τῑμᾶσθαι \qquad (τῑμάεσθαι)$$

7. PRESENT PARTICIPLE ACTIVE

To form the present participle active of contracted verbs, add to the present tense stem the same suffixes and endings as are employed to form the present participle active of παιδεύω (Section 66.1). As in the finite forms of contracted verbs, the present tense stem contracts with the initial vowel or diphthong of the suffix.

	M	F	N
Nom./Voc. S	τῑμῶν	τῑμῶσα	τῑμῶν
	(τῑμάων)	(τῑμάουσα)	(τῑμάον)
Gen.	τῑμῶντος	τῑμώσης	τῑμῶντος
	(τῑμάοντος)	(τῑμαούσης)	(τῑμάοντος)

Observations: (1) These participles are declined exactly like the present participle active of παιδεύω except that the contraction of the present tense stem with the suffix causes the accent to fall on the final syllable of the declension stem: e.g., τῑμῶντος, but παιδεύοντος. As with the present participle active of παιδεύω, the case endings are dropped from the genitive singular forms in order to obtain the declension stem:

M	F	N
τῑμωντ-	τῑμωσ-	τῑμωντ-

The masculine and neuter are then given third-declension case endings; the feminine is declined like a first declension noun with nominative singular in short -α.

THE DECLENSION STEMS, CONTAINING THE CONTRACTIONS, ARE FIXED. The addition of the endings is simple.

(2) In the feminine genitive plural, the accent shifts, as usual, to the ultima: τῑμωσῶν.

(3) Note that the masculine and neuter dative plural is τῑμῶσι(ν) (*τῑμάοντσι[ν]).

8. PRESENT PARTICIPLE MIDDLE/PASSIVE

To form the present participle middle/passive of contracted verbs, add to the present tense stem the same suffixes and endings as are employed to form the present participle middle/passive of παιδεύω (Section 67.1). The final vowel of the stem contracts with the initial vowel of the suffix.

	M	F	N
Nom. S	τῑμώμενος	τῑμωμένη	τῑμώμενον
	(τῑμαόμενος)	(τῑμαομένη)	(τῑμαόμενον)

Observation: This participle is declined exactly like the present participle middle/passive of παιδεύω.

Remember that only those forms of τῑμάω which use Principal Part I differ from those of παιδεύω. From the other Principal Parts of this verb the other tenses are formed according to the rules already learned.

Drill 1.1–14, page 248, may now be done.

74. CONTRACTED VERBS WITH PRESENT TENSE STEMS IN -ε-

The following verb will serve as an example:

ποιέω, ποιήσω, ἐποίησα, πεποίηκα, πεποίημαι, ἐποιήθην, "do; make"

The present tense stem, ποιε-, contracts with the initial vowel or diphthong of the endings according to the chart below.

CONTRACTIONS OF ε
εε > ει	εο > ου
εει > ει	εοι > οι
εη > η	εου > ου
εη > η	εω > ω

Thus the forms of the present and imperfect tenses of ποιέω (with uncontracted forms given in parentheses for reference) are as follows:

1. PRESENT INDICATIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE/PASSIVE

		ACTIVE		MIDDLE/PASSIVE
S	1	ποιῶ	(ποιέω)	ποιοῦμαι	(ποιέομαι)
	2	ποιεῖς	(ποιέεις)	ποιεῖ/ποιῇ	(ποιέει/ποιέη)
	3	ποιεῖ	(ποιέει)	ποιεῖται	(ποιέεται)
P	1	ποιοῦμεν	(ποιέομεν)	ποιούμεθα	(ποιεόμεθα)
	2	ποιεῖτε	(ποιέετε)	ποιεῖσθε	(ποιέεσθε)
	3	ποιοῦσι(ν)	(ποιέουσι[ν])	ποιοῦνται	(ποιέονται)

Observation: One of the two alternative forms of the second person singular, present indicative middle/passive is identical with the third person singular, present indicative active.

2. IMPERFECT INDICATIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE/PASSIVE

		ACTIVE		MIDDLE/PASSIVE
S	1	ἐποίουν	(ἐποίεον)	ἐποιούμην	(ἐποιεόμην)
	2	ἐποίεις	(ἐποίεες)	ἐποιοῦ	(ἐποιέου)
	3	ἐποίει	(ἐποίεε)	ἐποιεῖτο	(ἐποιέετο)
P	1	ἐποιοῦμεν	(ἐποιέομεν)	ἐποιούμεθα	(ἐποιεόμεθα)
	2	ἐποιεῖτε	(ἐποιέετε)	ἐποιεῖσθε	(ἐποιέεσθε)
	3	ἐποίουν	(ἐποίεον)	ἐποιοῦντο	(ἐποιέοντο)

Observation: Nu-movable is NEVER added to the third person singular of the imperfect indicative active of contracted verbs. Thus ἐποίει, but ἔλῡε(ν).

3. PRESENT SUBJUNCTIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE/PASSIVE

		ACTIVE		MIDDLE/PASSIVE
S	1	ποιῶ	(ποιέω)	ποιῶμαι	(ποιέωμαι)
	2	ποιῇς	(ποιέῃς)	ποιῇ	(ποιέῃ)
	3	ποιῇ	(ποιέῃ)	ποιῆται	(ποιέηται)
P	1	ποιῶμεν	(ποιέωμεν)	ποιώμεθα	(ποιεώμεθα)
	2	ποιῆτε	(ποιέητε)	ποιῆσθε	(ποιέησθε)
	3	ποιῶσι(ν)	(ποιέωσι[ν])	ποιῶνται	(ποιέωνται)

4. PRESENT OPTATIVE ACTIVE

In the present optative active, contracted verbs with stems in -ε- can employ, before contraction, EITHER endings identical with those of παιδεύω OR the same alternative endings used by τῑμάω. These are listed separately.

S	1	ποιοῖμι	(ποιέοιμι) OR	ποιοίην	(ποιεοίην)	-οιην
	2	ποιοῖς	(ποιέοις)	ποιοίης	(ποιεοίης)	-οιης
	3	ποιοῖ	(ποιέοι)	ποιοίη	(ποιεοίη)	-οιη
P	1	ποιοῖμεν	(ποιέοιμεν) OR	ποιοίημεν	(ποιεοίημεν)	-οιημεν
	2	ποιοῖτε	(ποιέοιτε)	ποιοίητε	(ποιεοίητε)	-οιητε
	3	ποιοῖεν	(ποιέοιεν)	ποιοίησαν	(ποιεοίησαν)	-οιησαν

Observation: As with τῑμάω, the alternative endings are more common in the singular; the endings identical with those of παιδεύω are more common in the plural.

5. PRESENT OPTATIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE

S	1	ποιοίμην	(ποιεοίμην)
	2	ποιοῖο	(ποιέοιο)
	3	ποιοῖτο	(ποιέοιτο)
P	1	ποιοίμεθα	(ποιεοίμεθα)
	2	ποιοῖσθε	(ποιέοισθε)
	3	ποιοῖντο	(ποιέοιντο)

6. PRESENT INFINITIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE/PASSIVE

ACTIVE		MIDDLE/PASSIVE
ποιεῖν	(ποιέειν)	ποιεῖσθαι	(ποιέεσθαι)

7. PRESENT PARTICIPLE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE/PASSIVE

	M	F	N
ACTIVE	(ποιέων)	(ποιέουσα)	(ποιέον)
Nom./Voc. S	ποιῶν	ποιοῦσα	ποιοῦν
Gen.	ποιοῦντος	ποιούσης	ποιοῦντος
	(ποιέοντος)	(ποιεούσης)	(ποιέοντος)
MIDDLE/ PASSIVE	(ποιεόμενος)	(ποιεομένη)	(ποιεόμενον)
Nom. S	ποιούμενος	ποιουμένη	ποιούμενον

Observations: (1) As in the declension of the participles of τῑμάω, the declension stems remain unchanged throughout: ποιοντ- for the masculine and neuter, ποιουσ- for the feminine.

(2) In the feminine genitive plural, the accent shifts, as usual, to the ultima: ποιουσῶν.

(3) Note the masculine and neuter dative plural of the present participle active: ποιοῦσι(ν) (*ποιέοντσι[ν]).

Drill I.15–54, page 248, may now be done.

75. THE DEMONSTRATIVE ADJECTIVE/PRONOUN ὅδε, ἥδε, τόδε, "this"

The demonstrative adjective/pronoun ὅδε, ἥδε, τόδε means "this (here, in this place)" in contrast with the demonstrative ἐκεῖνος, ἐκείνη, ἐκεῖνο, which means "that (there, in that place)" (Section 62).

The forms of this demonstrative are as follows:

	M	F	N
Nom. S	ὅδε	ἥδε	τόδε
Gen.	τοῦδε	τῆσδε	τοῦδε
Dat.	τῷδε	τῇδε	τῷδε
Acc.	τόνδε	τήνδε	τόδε
Nom. P	οἵδε	αἵδε	τάδε
Gen.	τῶνδε	τῶνδε	τῶνδε
Dat.	τοῖσδε	ταῖσδε	τοῖσδε
Acc.	τούσδε	τάσδε	τάδε

This demonstrative consists of the article + the enclitic suffix -δε. The effect of this suffix on the accent of the article is the same as that of the enclitic τε; hence the acute accent on such forms as ἥδε, τούσδε.

A noun modified by ὅδε, ἥδε, τόδε must be accompanied by the article. The demonstrative usually precedes the article. It may (rarely) follow the noun.

οἵδε οἱ ἀδελφοὶ βιβλία ἔγραφον.
These brothers were writing books.

εἰς τήνδε τὴν νῆσον
εἰς τὴν νῆσον τήνδε (rare)
to this island

The demonstrative can also be used as a pronoun:

τήνδε παύσετε.
You will stop this woman.

τάδε πεφυλάχαμεν.
We have guarded these things.

The meanings of three demonstratives are compared in Section 77.

76. THE DEMONSTRATIVE ADJECTIVE/PRONOUN οὗτος, αὕτη, τοῦτο,
"this, that"

The demonstrative adjective/pronoun οὗτος, αὕτη, τοῦτο means, depending on context, "this" or "that." It indicates someone or something close at hand or in the speaker's thoughts, but it does not emphasize that closeness as much as the demonstrative ὅδε, ἥδε, τόδε. It is equivalent to "this" or "that" in the sentences "I met this man you know," "You know that man I was telling you about."

The forms of this demonstrative are as follows:

	M	F	N
Nom. S	οὗτος	αὕτη	τοῦτο
Gen.	τούτου	ταύτης	τούτου
Dat.	τούτῳ	ταύτῃ	τούτῳ
Acc.	τοῦτον	ταύτην	τοῦτο
Nom. P	οὗτοι	αὗται	ταῦτα
Gen.	τούτων	τούτων	τούτων
Dat.	τούτοις	ταύταις	τούτοις
Acc.	τούτους	ταύτᾱς	ταῦτα

The endings are in almost every case identical with those of the article. Where the article has a rough breathing (in the nominative singular and plural, masculine and feminine), the demonstrative has a rough breathing in place of initial τ-. The stem has -αυ- instead of -ου- in all feminine forms EXCEPT the genitive plural, and in the neuter nominative and accusative plural.

A noun modified by οὗτος, αὕτη, τοῦτο must be accompanied by the article.
The demonstrative usually precedes the article. It may (rarely) follow the noun.

ταύτᾱς τὰς γεφύρᾱς ἐφυλάττετε.
τὰς γεφύρᾱς ταύτᾱς ἐφυλάττετε. (rare)
You were guarding these/those bridges.

The demonstrative can also be used as a pronoun:

> τούτους παύσουσιν.
> They will stop these/those men.

The meanings of three demonstratives are compared in Section 77.

77. DEMONSTRATIVES COMPARED

1. ἐκεῖνος: (a) describes someone or something relatively far away from the speaker:
>> ἐκεῖνον εἰς τὴν νῆσον ἔπεμψα.
>> I sent that man (over there) to the island.

(b) can be used of someone famous or infamous:
>> ἐκεῖνος ὁ ποιητής
>> that (famous) poet

>> ἐκεῖνος ὁ γέρων
>> that (horrible) old man

(c) can mean "the former" when contrasted with οὗτος (cf. 3.c below).

2. ὅδε: (a) describes someone or something very close to the speaker:
>> τόδε τὸ βιβλίον ἔγραψα.
>> I wrote this book (right here).

(b) looks ahead to what will follow:
>> ἐγράψαμεν τάδε· . . . .
>> We wrote the following things: . . . .

3. οὗτος: (a) describes someone or something less close or less vividly present than would have been indicated by ὅδε:
>> τοῦτο τὸ βιβλίον ἔγραψα.
>> I wrote this book (to which you refer).
>> I wrote that book (to which you refer).

(b) when contrasted with ὅδε, refers to what has gone before:
>> ταῦτα μὲν Ὅμηρος ἔγραψεν, τάδε δ' ἔγραψα.
>> The preceding (things), on the one hand, Homer wrote; the following (things), on the other hand, I wrote.

(c) when contrasted with ἐκεῖνος often means
   "the latter" as opposed to "the former":

> ἀγαθοὶ καὶ οἱ νεανίαι καὶ οἱ γέροντες.
>   ἐκεῖνοι μὲν γὰρ εἰς πόλεμον πέμπονται,
>   οὗτοι δὲ βιβλία γράφουσιν.
> Both young men and old men are good.
>   For the former, on the one hand, are sent to war;
>   the latter, on the other hand, write books.

(d) can be used of someone famous or infamous:

> οὗτος ὁ ποιητής
> this (famous) poet > that (famous) poet
>
> οὗτος ὁ γέρων
> this (horrible) old man
> that (horrible) old man

(e) often serves as the antecedent of a relative pronoun:

> ὃς ἂν παιδευθῇ, οὗτος εἰς μάχην >   πεμφθήσεται.
> Whoever is educated, that man will be >   sent into battle.

Drill II, page 249, may now be done.

78. SUBJECTIVE GENITIVE

A noun or pronoun in the genitive case can indicate the subject of a verbal action or state of being denoted by a noun. This usage is called the subjective genitive. The genitive stands in the attributive position.

> ὁ Ὁμήρου φόβος > Homer's fear
> (i.e., the fear which Homer feels)
>
> αἱ τῶν Ἑλλήνων θυσίαι
> the sacrifices of the Greeks
> (i.e., the sacrifices which the Greeks perform)

79. OBJECTIVE GENITIVE

A noun or pronoun in the genitive case can also indicate the object of a verbal action denoted by a noun. This usage is called the objective genitive. The genitive stands in the attributive position.

> ὁ τῶν θεῶν φόβος > fear of the gods
> (i.e., fear directed toward the gods)
>
> ἡ τῶν αἰγῶν θυσίᾱ
> the sacrifice of the goats
> (i.e., someone sacrificed the goats)

Contrast the phrases in Section 78, where the subjective genitives Ὁμήρου and τῶν Ἑλλήνων indicate the performer of an action. The objective genitives τῶν θεῶν and τῶν αἰγῶν indicate the receiver of an action. Context usually allows one to determine whether such a genitive is subjective or objective.

80. DATIVE OF MANNER

A noun in the dative case, without a preposition, can indicate the manner in which an action takes place or a state of being holds true. This usage is called the dative of manner.

> τούτῳ τῷ τρόπῳ βιβλίον ἔγραψα.
> In this way I wrote a book.

Most datives of manner are phrases consisting of a noun and an adjective, but some nouns can be used alone in such expressions:

> οἱ στρατιῶται σῑγῇ εἰς τὴν νῆσον ἐπέμφθησαν.
> The soldiers were sent in silence to the island.

In general, however, nouns not modified by adjectives employ various prepositions with the dative of manner:

> σὺν δίκῃ ἐπέμφθησαν ἐκ τῆς χώρᾱς οἱ πολέμιοι.
> With justice the enemy were sent out of the land.

Carefully distinguish the dative of manner from the instrumental dative:

> τὴν γέφῡραν σῑγῇ ἐφύλαττον.
> They were guarding the bridge in silence. (dative of manner)
>
> τὴν γέφῡραν ὅπλοις ἐφύλαττον.
> They were guarding the bridge with weapons. (instrumental dative)

81. DATIVE OF RESPECT

A noun in the dative case, without a preposition, can also indicate the respect in which a statement is true. This usage is called the dative of respect.

> τῷ μὲν σώματι καλὸς ὁ νεᾱνίᾱς, τῇ δὲ ψῡχῇ κακός.
> In body (i.e., with respect to his body), on the one hand, the young man is beautiful; in soul, on the other hand, he is evil.

VOCABULARY NOTES

The verb ἀδικέω, ἀδικήσω, ἠδίκησα, ἠδίκηκα, ἠδίκημαι, ἠδικήθην, "do wrong, wrong," is a denominative verb formed from the adjective ἄδικος, ἄδικον, "unjust." Likewise, the verbs τῑμάω, τῑμήσω, ἐτῑμησα, τετῑμηκα, τετῑμημαι, ἐτῑμήθην, "honor," and νῑκάω, νῑκήσω, ἐνῑκησα, νενῑκηκα, νενῑκημαι, ἐνῑκήθην, "win; conquer," are denominative verbs formed from the nouns τῑμή and νίκη. The verb ἀδικέω can be used either transitively or intransitively.

The adjective ἄλογος, ἄλογον, "unreasoning, unreasonable, irrational," is formed from the noun λόγος (in the sense "reason") with alpha privative prefixed.

The adjective βάρβαρος, βάρβαρον, "non-Greek, foreign," is an onomatopoeic word which imitates the sound of unintelligible foreign speech. It lacks the negative connotations of the English derivative "barbaric." Although not compounded, this is a two-ending adjective.

The noun βίος, βίου, ὁ, "life, means of living," can refer either to a person's manner of life (e.g., a good life as opposed to a bad one) or to the means by which one supports oneself, one's livelihood.

The noun δαίμων, δαίμονος, ὁ or ἡ, "god, goddess, divine being," can refer to a god or goddess but more frequently denotes an unnamed and unspecified divine power: e.g., σὺν δαίμονι, "with (the help of) a god." This noun can also refer to the power which controls one's fortune or destiny. In certain contexts, δαίμονες can also be divine beings inferior to the gods, or the deified souls of dead men.

The adjective ἐχθρός, ἐχθρά, ἐχθρόν, "hated, hostile; (as substantive) enemy," can have either the passive meaning "hated" or the active meaning "hostile (· hating)," or both. It refers to ill-will directed personally at other human beings or at institutions (e.g., democracy). Contrast the adjective πολέμιος, πολεμία, πολέμιον, which refers to people who are at war with others. One's personal enemies are one's ἐχθροί; the enemies one meets in battle are πολέμιοι.

The adjective ἔμπειρος, ἔμπειρον, "experienced in, acquainted with," is a compound formed from the noun πεῖρα, πείρᾱς, ἡ, "trial, attempt, experience," with the preposition ἐν prefixed. This adjective takes a noun in the genitive case to indicate the area in which someone is experienced: e.g., πολέμου ἔμπειρος, "experienced in (of) war." The abstract noun ἐμπειρίᾱ, ἐμπειρίᾱς, ἡ, "experience, practice" (cf., e.g., φιλίᾱ), takes the same construction.

The verb ποιέω, ποιήσω, ἐποίησα, πεποίηκα, πεποίημαι, ἐποιήθην has the two distinct meanings "make" and "do." A poet, ποιητής, is a "maker" of poetry. In the sense "make," ποιέω can appear in either the active or the middle voice: e.g., εἰρήνην ποιεῖν, "to make peace (for others)"; εἰρήνην ποιεῖσθαι, "to make peace (for oneself)." It can take a double accusative: ποιεῖν τὸν ἀδελφὸν σοφόν, "to make the brother wise." In the sense "do" this verb can also take a double accusative (cf. πράττω): κακὰ ποιεῖν τὸν ἀδελφόν, "to do bad things to the brother." An adverb can appear instead of the adjective: κακῶς ποιεῖν τὸν ἀδελφόν, "to do bad(ly) to the brother." The verb can also be used intransitively: εὖ ποιεῖ, "He/She does well."

In the middle voice ποιέω is often used with a verbal noun to express the idea of the verb from which the noun is derived:

> θυσίαν ἐποιοῦντο.
> They were making a sacrifice.

The noun τρόπος, τρόπου, ὁ, "way, manner; character," can refer to the way or means by which something is done, the manner in which a person does it, or the character of a person (as expressed by his manner of acting). The root meaning of this noun is "turn" or "turning": cf. the English phrases "turn of mind," "turn of speech."

The preposition ὑπέρ can take either the genitive or the accusative case. With the genitive it has the two distinct meanings "over, above" (of fixed position) and "on behalf of." The second meaning developed out of the idea of covering protectively. With the accusative case ὑπέρ means "over, beyond" with reference either to motion or to measure.

UNIT

89. THE IMPERATIVE MOOD

In addition to the indicative, subjunctive, and optative moods, Greek has a fourth mood, the imperative mood, which is used to give commands. The tense of the imperative mood, like that of the subjunctive, the optative, and the infinitive, shows aspect only: the present imperative indicates progressive/ repeated aspect; the aorist, simple aspect. The rarely used perfect imperative shows completed aspect, and its forms are given only in the Appendix.

Like the other moods, the Greek imperative has person (but ONLY second and third person) and number. The second person corresponds to our English imperative: "Sit down and learn this!" The third person imperatives can be expressed in English by using the helping verb "let": "Let him/her/it/them do it!" There are no first person forms of the imperative. In the first person plural, the idea of "Let us do something!" is expressed by the hortatory subjunctive; cf. Section 50.

The imperative uses the same tense stems as all the other moods; it simply puts different endings on these stems. See Section 89.10, page 311, for a chart showing all of these endings.

1. PRESENT IMPERATIVE ACTIVE

To form the present imperative active add to the present tense stem the following endings:

	S	P
2	-ε	-ετε
3	-ετω	-οντων

305

Thus the forms of the present imperative active of παιδεύω are as follows:

	S		P
2	παίδευε	be educating/ educate	παιδεύετε	be educating/ educate
3	παιδευέτω	let him /her/it be educating/ educate	παιδευόντων	let them be educating/ educate Observations: (1) The second person plural, present imperative active is identical in form with the second person plural, present indicative active. The third person plural, present imperative active is identical in form with the masculine and neuter genitive plural of the present participle active. Context usually allows one to distinguish these forms.

(2) The accent of the imperative is recessive and can go back onto the prefix when necessary: e.g., ἀπόλῡε.

2. PRESENT IMPERATIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE

To form the present imperative middle/passive, add to the present tense stem the following middle/passive endings:

	S	P
2	-ου < *-εσο	-εσθε
3	-εσθω	-εσθων

Thus the forms of the present imperative middle/passive of παιδεύω are as follows:

S 2	παιδεύου	Mid.: be having/have (someone) educated
		Pass.: be being educated/be educated
3	παιδευέσθω	Mid.: let him/her/it be having/have (someone) educated
		Pass.: let him/her/it be being educated/be educated
P 2	παιδεύεσθε	Mid.: be having/have (someone) educated
		Pass.: be being educated/be educated
3	παιδευέσθων	Mid.: let them be having/have (someone) educated
		Pass.: let them be being educated/be educated

Observation: As in the active voice, so in the middle/passive, the second person plural imperative and indicative forms are identical.

3. PRESENT IMPERATIVE ACTIVE OF CONTRACTED VERBS

The present imperative active of contracted verbs adds the endings of the present imperative active to the present tense stem of the verbs. The vowels of the stem and the endings contract according to the rules given in Sections 73, 74, and 84. In the forms which are given below, the uncontracted forms are given in parentheses for reference. The contractions do not occur, of course, in the aorist imperative of these verbs.

	S		P
2	τίμᾱ	(τίμαε)	τῑμᾶτε	(τῑμάετε)
3	τῑμάτω	(τῑμαέτω)	τῑμώντων	(τῑμαόντων)
2	ποίει	(ποίεε)	ποιεῖτε	(ποιέετε)
3	ποιείτω	(ποιεέτω)	ποιούντων	(ποιεόντων)
2	δήλου	(δήλοε)	δηλοῦτε	(δηλόετε)
3	δηλούτω	(δηλοέτω)	δηλούντων	(δηλοόντων)

Observations: (1) Distinguish carefully between the second person singular, present imperative active forms and the third person singular, present indicative active forms of the contracted verbs:

IMPERATIVE		INDICATIVE
τίμᾱ	(τίμαε)	τῑμᾷ	(τῑμάει)
ποίει	(ποίεε)	ποιεῖ	(ποιέει)
δήλου	(δήλοε)	δηλοῖ	(δηλόει)

(2) In the second person plural all present imperative active forms are identical with those of the indicative: τῑμᾶτε, ποιεῖτε, δηλοῦτε.

(3) In the third person plural, present imperative active the forms of the imperative are identical with those of the masculine and neuter genitive plural of the present participle active: τῑμώντων, ποιούντων, δηλούντων.

4. PRESENT IMPERATIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE OF CONTRACTED VERBS

The present imperative middle/passive of contracted verbs adds the endings of the present imperative middle/passive to the present tense stem of the verbs. The final vowel of the stem and the initial vowel of the endings contract according to the rules of contraction given in Sections 73, 74, and 84. In the forms which are given below, the uncontracted forms are given in parentheses. The contractions do not occur in the aorist tense of these verbs.

	S		P
2	τῑμῶ	(τῑμάου)	τῑμᾶσθε	(τῑμάεσθε)
3	τῑμάσθω	(τῑμαέσθω)	τῑμᾱ́σθων	(τῑμαέσθων)
2	ποιοῦ	(ποιέου)	ποιεῖσθε	(ποιέεσθε)
3	ποιείσθω	(ποιεέσθω)	ποιείσθων	(ποιεέσθων)
2	δηλοῦ	(δηλόου)	δηλοῦσθε	(δηλόεσθε)
3	δηλούσθω	(δηλοέσθω)	δηλούσθων	(δηλοέσθων)

Observations: (1) The second person singular, present imperative middle/passive of τῑμάω is the same as the first person singular, present indicative and subjunctive active: τῑμῶ from τῑμάου (imperative) and from τῑμάω (indicative and subjunctive).

(2) In the second person plural, all present imperative middle/passive forms are identical with those of the indicative: τῑμᾶσθε, ποιεῖσθε, δηλοῦσθε.

(3) Distinguish carefully the forms δηλοῦ (second person singular, present imperative middle/passive) and δήλου (second person singular, present imperative active).

5. FIRST AORIST IMPERATIVE ACTIVE

To form the first aorist imperative active, add to the unaugmented aorist active and middle tense stem the following endings:

2	-ον	-ατε
3	-ατω	-αντων

Thus the forms of the first aorist imperative active of παιδεύω are as follows:

	S		P
2	παίδευσον	educate	παιδεύσατε	educate
3	παιδευσάτω	let him/her/it educate	παιδευσάντων	let them educate

Observations: (1) The third person plural aorist imperative active is identical in form with the masculine and neuter genitive plural of the aorist participle active.

(2) Note the difference in accent between the imperative ἀπόλῦσον and the neuter nom./acc./voc. singular of the future active participle ἀπολῦσον.

6. FIRST AORIST IMPERATIVE MIDDLE

To form the first aorist imperative middle, add the following endings to the unaugmented aorist active and middle tense stem:

	S	P
2	-αι	-ασθε
3	-ασθω	-ασθων

Thus the first aorist imperative middle forms of παιδεύω are as follows:

S	2	παίδευσαι	have (someone) educated
	3	παιδευσάσθω	let him/her/it have (someone) educated
P	2	παιδεύσασθε	have (someone) educated
	3	παιδευσάσθων	let them have someone educated

Observation: Note that the second person singular ending of the aorist imperative middle counts as short for purposes of accentuation. Observe carefully the different accents on three very similar forms:

παίδευσαι second person singular, aorist imperative middle παιδεύσαι third person singular, aorist optative active παιδεῦσαι aorist infinitive active

7. SECOND AORIST IMPERATIVE ACTIVE

To form the second aorist imperative active, add the endings of the present imperative active to the unaugmented second aorist active and middle tense stem. Thus the forms of the second aorist imperative active of λείπω are as follows:

2	λίπε	λίπετε
3	λιπέτω	λιπόντων

Observation: The third person plural, second aorist imperative is identical with the masculine and neuter genitive plural of the second aorist participle active.

8. SECOND AORIST IMPERATIVE MIDDLE

To form the second aorist imperative middle, add the endings of the present imperative middle/passive to the unaugmented second aorist active and middle tense stem. The resulting form is middle only; the aorist imperative passive of all verbs is formed from Principal Part VI.

Thus the forms of the second aorist imperative middle of λείπω are as follows:

	S	P
2	λιποῦ	λίπεσθε
3	λιπέσθω	λιπέσθων

Observation: The accent on the second person singular, second aorist imperative middle is NOT recessive; it is always a circumflex on the ultima.

9. AORIST IMPERATIVE PASSIVE

To form the aorist imperative passive, add to the unaugmented aorist passive tense stem the following endings:

	S		P
2	-ηθι,	-ητι	-ητε
3	-ητω		-εντων

Thus the forms of the aorist imperative passive of παιδεύω are as follows:

S	2	παιδεύθητι	be educated
	3	παιδευθήτω	let him/her/it be educated
P	2	παιδεύθητε	be educated
	3	παιδευθέντων	let them be educated

Observations: (1) The original ending of the second person singular, aorist imperative passive was $-\eta\theta\iota$. Dissimilation of aspirates causes the $-\theta-$ to change to a $-\tau-$ when the ending is added to a stem ending in an aspirate (φ, χ, θ). Since most aorist passive tense stems end in an aspirate, the ending $-\eta\tau\iota$ is more common than $-\eta\theta\iota$. Compare $\beta\lambda\acute{\alpha}\varphi\theta\eta\tau\iota$ with $\beta\lambda\acute{\alpha}\beta\eta\theta\iota$.

(2) Note the $-\varepsilon-$ of the third person plural ending in contrast to the $-\eta-$ of the other forms. The third person plural, aorist imperative passive is identical in form with the masculine and neuter genitive plural of the aorist participle passive.

10. ENDINGS OF THE IMPERATIVE

		PRESENT IMPER. ACTIVE	PRESENT IMPER. MIDDLE/ PASSIVE	FIRST AORIST IMPER. ACTIVE	FIRST AORIST IMPER. MIDDLE	AORIST IMPER. PASSIVE
S	2	-ε	-ου	-ον	-αι	-ηθι, -ητι
	3	-ετω	-εσθω	-ατω	-ασθω	-ητω
P	2	-ετε	-εσθε	-ατε	-ασθε	-ητε
	3	-οντων	-εσθων	-αντων	-ασθων	-εντων

Observation: Remember that the second aorist imperative active and middle forms use the same endings as the present imperative active and middle/passive.

90. COMMANDS AND PROHIBITIONS

Commands are expressed in the first person (plural) by the subjunctive in the second person by the imperative in the third person by the imperative.

They are often preceded by expressions like $\H{\alpha}\gamma\varepsilon$, $\H{\alpha}\gamma\varepsilon\tau\varepsilon$, $\varphi\acute{\varepsilon}\varrho\varepsilon$, $\H{\iota}\theta\iota$, and $\varepsilon\H{\iota}\ \delta'\ \H{\alpha}\gamma\varepsilon$, ALL of which have the force of "come on" when used with imperatives and the hortatory subjunctive.

ἀλλ᾿ ἄγε διδάσκωμεν τοὺς νεανίας.
But come on, let's teach the young men.

ἀλλ᾿ ἄγε δίδασκε τοὺς νεανίας.
But come on, teach the young men.

ἀλλ᾿ ἄγε δὴ σοφὸς διδασκέτω τοὺς νεανίας.
But come on, let a wise man be teaching the young men.

ἀλλ᾿ ἄγε δὴ σοφὸς διδαξάτω τοὺς νεανίας.
But come on, let a wise man teach the young men.

When a command involves two actions, one of them is usually expressed by a participle.

τὴν οἰκίαν λιπών, δήλωσον ταῦτα τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ.
Upon leaving your house, make these things clear to the assembly.
Leave your house and make these things clear to the assembly.

Prohibitions (negative commands) are all introduced by μή. The first person prohibition, like the first person command, uses the hortatory subjunctive; tense shows progressive/repeated or simple aspect. In the second and third persons, prohibitions with progressive/repeated aspect use μή with a present imperative; prohibitions with simple aspect use μή with an aorist subjunctive, the prohibitive subjunctive. In the second and third persons, the aorist imperative with μή is sometimes found.

Prohibitions are summarized in the following chart:

PERSON	PROGRESSIVE/REPEATED	SIMPLE
1 μή	+ Present Subjunctive (Hortatory)	μή + Aorist Subjunctive (Hortatory)
2 μή	+ Present Imperative	μή + Aorist Subjunctive (Prohibitive)
3 μή	+ Present Imperative	μή + Aorist Subjunctive (Prohibitive)

μὴ λύωμεν τοὺς στρατιώτας.   (Hortatory Let us not be freeing the soldiers.   Subjunctive)
Let us not free the soldiers.

μὴ λύσωμεν τοὺς στρατιώτας.   (Hortatory Let us not free the soldiers.   Subjunctive)

μὴ λύετε τοὺς στρατιώτᾱς.   (Present
Do not be freeing the soldiers.   Imperative)
Do not free the soldiers.

μὴ λύσητε τοὺς στρατιώτᾱς.   (Prohibitive
Do not free the soldiers.   Subjunctive)

Like the hortatory and prohibitive subjunctive, the imperative can stand in the apodosis of a future more vivid conditional sentence in place of the future indicative.

ἐὰν σωθῇ ἡ πόλις, θῦσον τοῖς δαίμοσιν.
If the city is saved, sacrifice to the divinities.

91. FORMS OF THE GREEK VERB

Now that the imperative has been learned, it is convenient to give a chart of the forms of the Greek verb. In the chart which follows, all moods and tenses can be found in the active, middle and passive voice. Consult the chart in Section 92 for a summary of the verb which shows which of the principal parts is used to form each of the moods and tenses in the various voices.

TENSE

PRESENT	ind.	subj.	opt.	imper.	infin.	part.
IMPERFECT	ind.
FUTURE	ind.		opt.[1]		infin.[1]	part.
AORIST	ind.	subj.	opt.	imper.	infin.	part.
PERFECT	ind.	[subj.][2]	[opt.][2]	[imper.][2]	infin.	part.
PLUPERFECT	ind.

1. The future optative and infinitive are given in Unit 16.
2. Forms in square brackets are found in the Appendix only.

92. THE GREEK VERB: A SUMMARY

PRINCIPAL PART	TENSE STEM		VERB FORMS DERIVED FROM STEM
	Form	Name
I. παιδεύω	παιδευ–	present tense stem	present indicative, subjunctive, optative, imperative, infinitive, and participle in all three voices

ἔλιπον	λιπ–	second aorist active and middle tense stem

IV.	πεπαίδευκα	πεπαιδευκ-	perfect active tense stem	perfect indicative, [subjunctive, optative, imperative,]² infinitive, and participle in the active voice pluperfect indicative in the active voice
V.	πεπαίδευμαι	πεπαιδευ-	perfect middle and passive tense stem	perfect indicative, [subjunctive, optative, imperative,]² infinitive, and participle in the middle and passive voices pluperfect indicative in the middle and passive voices

		παιδευθησ-	future passive tense stem	future indicative, optative,¹ infinitive,¹ and participle in the passive voice

Note: Contraction of vowels occurs in the present (e.g., τιμάω, ποιέω, δηλόω) and in the future active and middle (e.g., ἀγγελῶ). Except for the optative active, contracted verbs use the same endings as uncontracted verbs. The contractions are made according to the charts in Sections 73, 74, and 84.

1. The future optative and infinitive are given in Unit 16.
2. Forms in square brackets are found in the Appendix only.

93. DEPONENT VERBS: MIDDLE DEPONENTS

Verbs which lack an active voice, and which show only middle or passive forms, are called deponent verbs. They will be distinguished by their Principal Parts.

Here is an example of a middle deponent, all of whose Principal Parts are in the middle voice:

δέχομαι, δέξομαι, ἐδεξάμην, ——, δέδεγμαι, ——, "receive; welcome"

Principal Parts I and V, which are middle/passive in form, are not used passively in this verb. Principal Part IV, which gives only active forms, and Principal Part VI, which is passive only, are lacking.

It is not known why Greek expresses certain actions in the middle voice only, i.e., with deponent verbs, nor is there any formula for determining which verb will be deponent. Rather, it will be clear from the Principal Parts, all of which must always be learned, which verbs are deponent.

Since middle deponent verbs lack an active voice in contrast to which the middle can have the force of "having something done" or "doing something for oneself," A MIDDLE DEPONENT IS TRANSLATED BY AN ENGLISH ACTIVE VERB WITH NO ADDITIONAL MIDDLE FORCE.

τοὺς ξένους δεχόμεθα.
We welcome the strangers.

τοὺς ξένους ἐδεξάμεθα.
We welcomed the strangers.

94. PASSIVE DEPONENTS

Some deponent verbs have, instead of an aorist middle, an aorist passive which, like all other forms of these verbs, is translated by an English active. These verbs are called passive deponents. Here is an example:

βούλομαι, βουλήσομαι, ——, ——, βεβούλημαι, ἐβουλήθην, "want"

βιβλίον γράψαι βουλόμεθα.
We want to write a book.

βιβλίον γράψαι βουλησόμεθα.
We shall want to write a book.

βιβλίον γράψαι ἐβουλήθημεν.
We wanted to write a book.

95. PARTIAL DEPONENTS

Some verbs lack an active voice in one or more tenses but not throughout the verbal system. Such verbs are called partial deponents. Their Principal Parts will show which tenses are deponent. Here is an example:

ἀκούω, ἀκούσομαι, ἤκουσα, ἀκήκοα, ——, ἠκούσθην, "hear"

Principal Part II of this verb is in the middle voice rather than the active voice, but this difference CANNOT be expressed in translation: ἀκούομεν (first person plural, present indicative active) means "we hear"; ἀκουσόμεθα (first person plural, future indicative middle) means "we shall hear." But ἠκούσθημεν (first person plural, aorist indicative passive) has the normal passive meaning "we were heard."

96. THE ADJECTIVE/PRONOUN αὐτός, αὐτή, αὐτό

The forms of the adjective/pronoun αὐτός, αὐτή, αὐτό are as follows:

	M	F	N
Nom. S	αὐτός	αὐτή	αὐτό
Gen.	αὐτοῦ	αὐτῆς	αὐτοῦ
Dat.	αὐτῷ	αὐτῇ	αὐτῷ
Acc.	αὐτόν	αὐτήν	αὐτό
Nom. P	αὐτοί	αὐταί	αὐτά
Gen.	αὐτῶν	αὐτῶν	αὐτῶν
Dat.	αὐτοῖς	αὐταῖς	αὐτοῖς
Acc.	αὐτούς	αὐτάς	αὐτά

The endings are the same as those of ἐκεῖνος, ἐκείνη, ἐκεῖνο.

According to its use in sentences, this word has three different meanings:

1. As an adjective in the attributive position it means "same":

> ὁ αὐτὸς ποιητής
> the same poet

> τοῖς αὐτοῖς ἔργοις
> by the same deeds

2. In the predicate position, or when standing alone in the nominative case, it functions as an intensive and means "-self." It agrees in gender, number, and case with the word to which it refers, whether that word is expressed in the sentence or only implied. In English translation, the intensive must also be given a person according to context.

(a) ὁ ποιητὴς αὐτός
 αὐτὸς ὁ ποιητής
 the poet himself

(b) οἱ ποιηταὶ αὐτοί
 αὐτοὶ οἱ ποιηταί
 the poets themselves

(c) ἐπαιδεύσαμεν αὐτὸν τὸν Ὅμηρον.
 We educated Homer himself.

(d) αὐτὸς ἔγραψε τὸ βιβλίον.
 He himself wrote the book.

(e) αὐτὴ ἔγραψε τὸ βιβλίον.
 She herself wrote the book.

(f) αὐτὴ ἔγραψα τὸ βιβλίον.
 I myself wrote the book.

In sentences (d), (e), and (f) above, the intensive agrees with the unexpressed subject of the verb and is translated accordingly.

3. Standing by itself as a pronoun in the genitive, dative, and accusative cases, αὐτός serves as the personal pronoun of the third person:

ἐπαιδεύσαμεν αὐτόν.
We educated him.

αὐτὴν πεπαιδεύκαμεν.
We have educated her.

αὐτοῖς αἶγας ἐπέμψαμεν.
We sent goats to them.
We sent them goats.

In the nominative case, where a third-person verb form indicates that the subject is "he, she, it" or "they," this personal pronoun is not separately expressed:

ἔγραψαν τὸ βιβλίον.
They wrote the book.

Remember that any form of αὐτός standing by itself in the nominative is an intensive:

αὐτοὶ ἔγραψαν τὸ βιβλίον.

They themselves wrote the book.

97. TEMPORAL CLAUSES

Temporal clauses are dependent clauses introduced by temporal conjunctions (e.g., "after," "while," "until") and indicating a relationship in time between the action of the dependent clause and that of the main or independent clause.

With respect to the action of the main clause, the action of the temporal clause can be prior, simultaneous, or subsequent.

Prior action:	After he wrote the book, he taught the citizens. (The writing precedes the teaching.)
Simultaneous action:	When he was writing the book, he taught the citizens. (Writing and teaching go on simultaneously.)
Subsequent action:	He was teaching the citizens until he finished the book. (The finishing followed the teaching.)

The action of the main clause can be past (as above), present, or future.

This Section will present temporal clauses which show prior and simultaneous action in various times.

Each type of temporal clause will be presented together with the type of main or independent clause with which it is associated.

1. PAST DEFINITE TEMPORAL CLAUSE

Verb of temporal clause:	past tense of the indicative (negative οὐ)
Verb of main clause:	past tense of the indicative (negative οὐ)

Temporal conjunctions:

Prior action:	ἐπεί, ἐπειδή, "after, when" + past tense of the indicative (usually aorist)
Simultaneous action:	ὅτε, "when" + aorist or imperfect indicative

Here are examples of past definite temporal clauses with prior action and with simultaneous action:

Prior action:	ἐπεὶ τὸ βιβλίον ἔγραψεν, τοὺς πολίτᾱς ἐδίδαξεν. After he wrote the book, he taught the citizens.
	ἐπεὶ εἰς τὴν νῆσον ἐπέμφθη, τοὺς πολίτᾱς ἐδίδαξεν. When he was sent to the island, he taught the citizens. After he was sent to the island, he taught the citizens.
Simultaneous action:	ὅτε τὸ βιβλίον ἔγραφεν, τοὺς πολίτᾱς ἐδίδαξεν. When he was writing the book, he taught the citizens. ὅτε τὸ βιβλίον ἔγραψεν, τοὺς πολίτᾱς ἐδίδαξεν. When he wrote the book, he taught the citizens.

Remember that the conjunctions ἐπεί and ἐπειδή can also mean "since, because" and introduce causal clauses (cf. Vocabulary Note to Unit 3).

The remaining three types of temporal clauses here presented correspond to the protases of three types of conditional sentences; the main clauses of sentences with these temporal clauses correspond to the apodoses of conditional sentences (cf. Section 41.7).

2. PRESENT GENERAL TEMPORAL CLAUSE

Verb of temporal clause (protasis):	present or aorist subjunctive (negative μή)
Verb of main clause (apodosis):	present indicative (negative οὐ)

Temporal conjunctions:

Prior action:	ἐπειδάν (= ἐπειδή + ἄν) "after, when, whenever" + aorist subjunctive
Simultaneous action:	ὅταν (= ὅτε + ἄν) "when, whenever" + present or aorist subjunctive

Here are examples of present general temporal clauses with prior action and with simultaneous action:

Prior action:	ἐπειδὰν εἰς τὴν νῆσον πεμφθῇ, τοὺς πολίτᾱς διδάσκει. Whenever he is sent to the island, he teaches the citizens.
Simultaneous action:	ὅταν βιβλίον γράφῃ, τοὺς πολίτᾱς διδάσκει. Whenever he is writing a book, he teaches the citizens.
	ὅταν βιβλίον γράψῃ, τοὺς πολίτᾱς διδάσκει. Whenever he writes a book, he teaches the citizens.

3. PAST GENERAL TEMPORAL CLAUSE

Verb of temporal clause (protasis):   present or aorist optative (negative μή)

Verb of main clause (apodosis):   imperfect indicative (negative οὐ)

Temporal conjunctions:

Prior action:	ἐπεί, ἐπειδή, "after, when, whenever" + aorist optative
Simultaneous action:	ὅτε, "whenever" + present or aorist optative

Here are examples of past general temporal clauses with prior action and with simultaneous action:

Prior action:	ἐπεὶ εἰς τὴν νῆσον πεμφθείη, τοὺς πολίτᾱς ἐδίδασκεν. Whenever he was sent to the island, he taught the citizens. When he was sent to the island, he used to teach the citizens.
Simultaneous action:	ὅτε βιβλίον γράφοι, τοὺς πολίτᾱς ἐδίδασκεν. Whenever he was writing a book, he taught the citizens. Whenever he was writing a book, he used to teach the citizens.
	ὅτε βιβλίον γράψειεν, τοὺς πολίτᾱς ἐδίδασκεν. Whenever he wrote a book, he taught the citizens.

4. FUTURE MORE VIVID TEMPORAL CLAUSE

Verb of temporal clause (protasis): present or aorist subjunctive (negative μή)

Verb of main clause (apodosis): future indicative (negative οὐ)

Temporal conjunctions:

Prior action: ἐπειδάν, "after, when"
+ aorist subjunctive

Simultaneous action: ὅταν, "when"
+ present or aorist subjunctive

Here are examples of future more vivid temporal clauses with prior action and with simultaneous action:

Prior action: ἐπειδὰν εἰς τὴν νῆσον πεμφθῇ, τοὺς πολίτας διδάξει.
After he is sent to the island, he will teach the citizens.

Simultaneous action: ὅταν βιβλίον γράφῃ, τοὺς πολίτας διδάξει.
When he is writing a book, he will teach the citizens.

ὅταν βιβλίον γράψῃ, τοὺς πολίτας διδάξει.
When he writes a book, he will teach the citizens.

98. GENITIVE ABSOLUTE

The circumstantial participles already introduced agree with nouns or pronouns, expressed or implied, whose case is determined, separately, by their function in a sentence (cf. Section 70).

θύων ὁ ἱερεὺς ὑπὸ τοῦ δήμου τῑμᾶται.
Sacrificing, the priest is honored by the people.

λυθέντες ὅμως τοῖς θεοῖς οὐ θύομεν.
Released, nevertheless we do not sacrifice to the gods.
Although released, nevertheless we do not sacrifice to the gods.

In the first example the participle agrees with the subject of the sentence, ὁ ἱερεύς. In the second example the participle agrees with the subject of the verb θύομεν, which is not separately expressed.

To describe a circumstance involving a person or thing not otherwise connected with the rest of the sentence, a phrase consisting of a noun or pronoun (and any modifiers) plus a participle (and any objects) can be put in the genitive case.

This usage is called the genitive absolute. The term "absolute" indicates that the noun or pronoun in the genitive absolute has no direct grammatical relationship to any other word in the sentence. Objects of the participle retain their usual case.

> θύοντος τοῦ ἱερέως αἶγα, Δημοσθένης ὑπὸ τοῦ δήμου τῑμᾶται.
> The priest sacrificing a goat, Demosthenes is honored by the people.

> λυθέντων τῶν φίλων, ὅμως τοῖς θεοῖς οὐ θύομεν.
> Our friends released, we nevertheless do not sacrifice to the gods.

In these examples the noun in the genitive case, modified by a participle, is separate from the rest of the sentence: the genitive absolute states a circumstance which has no grammatical connection with the rest of the sentence. The closest English equivalent to a genitive absolute is, as in the examples above, a nominative absolute.

Like other circumstantial participles, the genitive absolute can have a temporal, concessive, or causal relation to the main verb. Adverbs or other words accompanying either the participle or the main verb can make this relationship clearer.

Genitives absolute can often be expressed by clauses in English: e.g., "while the priest was sacrificing. . . "; "although our friends were released . . . ."

> τῆς πόλεως σωθείσης, οἱ ἱερεῖς ἔθῡσαν.
> The city saved, the priests sacrificed.
> When the city was saved, the priests sacrificed. (temporal)
> Although the city was saved, the priests sacrificed. (concessive)
> Because the city was saved, the priests sacrificed. (causal)

Context will help to determine meaning.

The genitive absolute can also stand in place of the protasis of a conditional sentence. The negative is μή; that of the other genitives absolute is οὐ. The two sentences below are equivalent in meaning.

> τῆς πόλεως μὴ σωθείσης, οὐ θύσομεν.
> The city not saved, we shall not sacrifice.

> ἐὰν ἡ πόλις μὴ σωθῇ, οὐ θύσομεν.
> If the city is not saved, we shall not sacrifice.

VOCABULARY NOTES

The verb ἀκούω, ἀκούσομαι, ἤκουσα, ἀκήκοα, ——, ἠκούσθην, "hear; be spoken of," takes, in the sense "hear," an accusative of the thing heard and/or a genitive of the person heard:

ταῦτ᾽ ἀκούομεν.	We hear these things.
Σωκράτους ἀκούομεν.	We hear Sokrates.
ταῦτα Σωκράτους ἀκούομεν.	We hear these things from Sokrates.

This verb is also used, in the active voice, in the sense "be spoken of"; it describes someone's reputation and can be accompanied by a genitive of personal agent:

κακῶς ἀκούομεν.	We are spoken badly of. (We have a bad reputation.)
κακῶς ἀκούομεν ὑπὸ πάντων.	We are spoken badly of by all. All speak badly of us.

The verb βάλλω, βαλῶ, ἔβαλον, βέβληκα, βέβλημαι, ἐβλήθην means either "throw" or "hit (with a thrown object)" and takes a direct object either of the thing thrown or of the person or thing hit:

λίθους ἐβάλομεν.	We threw stones.
τοὺς πολεμίους ἐβάλομεν.	We hit the enemy.
τοὺς πολεμίους λίθοις ἐβάλομεν.	We hit the enemy with stones.

The form βάλλω comes from *βάλιω. Principal Parts II and III show more clearly the root, βαλ-; the double lambda appears only in the present tense stem. Note the contracted future: βαλῶ < βαλέω < *βαλέσω. Compare ἀγγέλλω, ἀγγελῶ.

The verb βούλομαι, βουλήσομαι, ——, ——, βεβούλημαι, ἐβουλήθην, "want," expressed originally a positive desire, while ἐθέλω, "wish, be willing," expressed a lack of objection. But the meanings of the two verbs came to overlap. Both can take an object infinitive.

Although it does not have a monosyllabic stem, γυνή, γυναικός, ἡ, "woman; wife," is accented as if it had one: the accent is on the penult in the accusative singular (γυναῖκα) and in the plural nominative/vocative (γυναῖκες) and accusative (γυναῖκας); in the genitive and dative singular and plural the accent is on the ultima, e.g., γυναικῶν. The vocative singular is γύναι (the stem γυναικ- without the final kappa).

The adverb ἐνταῦθα can have either a spatial or a temporal meaning.

Do not confuse the noun κάλλος, κάλλους, τό, "beauty," with the adjective καλός, καλή, καλόν.

Note that the dative plural of κῆρυξ, κήρῡκος, ὁ, "herald," is κήρυξι(ν) with a short upsilon.

In the verb λαμβάνω, λήψομαι, ἔλαβον, εἴληφα, εἴλημμαι, ἐλήφθην, "take," note that the root is λαβ-. The present is formed by inserting a nasal into this root (a nasal infix) and adding a suffix -αν-: λαμβάνω; both nasal infix and suffix appear only in the present tense stem. The long-vowel grade of the root, ληβ-, appears in the future, the perfect active and middle, and in the aorist passive. The second aorist uses the short-vowel grade of the root. The accent on the second person singular, aorist imperative active of this verb is fixed on the ultima: λαβέ (contrast λίπε). When this form is compounded, however, the accent is recessive: ἀπόλαβε. The plural is regular: λάβετε. The εἰ- of Principal Parts IV and V is part of the perfect tense stem; it is not augmented in the pluperfect: εἰλήφη, εἰλήφης, εἰλήφει(ν), etc. IN MOST VERBS WHEN PRINCIPAL PART IV OR V BEGINS WITH ἐ OR εἰ-, THE PLUPERFECT IS UNAUGMENTED. Note also the aspirated perfect. From the physical meaning "take, grab," developed a mental one; cf. "He did not grasp my meaning."

The verb πάσχω, πείσομαι, ἔπαθον, πέπονθα, ——, ——, "suffer, have (something) done to one," is related to the noun πάθος, πάθους, τό. Like the noun, the verb has both a neutral meaning ("experience, have [something] done to one") and a more common negative meaning ("suffer"). The root of the word appears in the following grades: e-grade πενθ-, o-grade πονθ-, and zero-grade παθ- < *πνθ-. The present is formed from the zero-grade of the root + the inchoative suffix (indicating the coming into a state) -σκω: *πνθσκω > *πάθσκω > πάσχω. The future is built on the e-grade of the root: *πένθσομαι > πείσομαι, with the spurious diphthong as a result of compensatory lengthening. Note that πείσομαι is also the future middle of πείθω. For Principal Part III, compare the second aorists ἔβαλον, ἔλαβον. The perfect uses the o-grade of the root; cf. πέπομφα, κέκλοφα, λέλοιπα. The verb πάσχω can take a genitive of personal agent: κακὰ πάσχει ὑπὸ πάντων, "He suffers evil things at the hands of all." Cf. ἀκούω.

Distinguish carefully between the interrogative adverb πῶς, "how?" and the indefinite enclitic adverb πως, "in any way, in some way."

The noun φονεύς, φονέως, ὁ, "murderer, killer," is an agent noun formed with the suffix -ευς. Cf. φόνος, φόνου, ὁ, "murder."

UNIT

99. -μι VERBS

Instead of having the ending -ω, Principal Part I of a Greek verb can have the ending -μι. Such verbs are called -μι verbs; and in the moods and tenses formed from Principal Parts I, III, and (sometimes) IV, -μι verbs differ in conjugation from the -ω verbs seen thus far. The moods and tenses of the -μι verbs have exactly the same functions as the moods and tenses of the -ω verbs; they are simply formed in a different way.

Three of the most common -μι verbs are:

(a) δίδωμι, δώσω, ἔδωκα, δέδωκα, δέδομαι, ἐδόθην, "give"

(b) τίθημι, θήσω, ἔθηκα, τέθηκα, τέθειμαι, ἐτέθην, "put"

(c) ἵστημι, στήσω, ἔστησα (transitive) or ἔστην (intransitive), ἔστηκα (intransitive), ἔσταμαι, ἐστάθην, "make stand; (intransitive and middle) stand"

The principal parts in boldface are those for which new patterns of conjugation must be learned. The present system of -μι verbs, except for participles, is presented in this Unit: the present indicative, subjunctive, optative, imperative and infinitive, and the imperfect indicative, in all three voices. The conjugation of the other emphasized forms is given in Unit 13. The principal parts not emphasized are used to form moods and tenses in exactly the same way as the corresponding principal parts of the -ω verbs.

The participles of the -μι verbs are presented in Unit 14.

100. PRESENT SYSTEM OF -μι VERBS

In the present system, -μι verbs differ from -ω verbs in the endings they use and in having both a long-vowel and a short-vowel grade of the present tense stem. Thus, to conjugate these verbs properly, one must learn what endings to put on what grade of the stem. The two grades of the present tense stem of the three verbs given above are:

VERB	LONG-VOWEL GRADE PRESENT TENSE STEM	SHORT-VOWEL GRADE PRESENT TENSE STEM
δίδωμι	διδω-	διδο-
τίθημι	τιθη-	τιθε-
ἵστημι	ἱστη-	ἱστα-

Note that -η- is the long vowel grade of both -ε- and -α-; cf. ἐθέλω/ἤθελον; ἀδικῶ/ἠδίκουν.

THE LONG-VOWEL GRADE IS USED ONLY IN THE SINGULAR OF THE PRESENT AND IMPERFECT INDICATIVE ACTIVE. THE SHORT-VOWEL GRADE IS USED IN ALL OTHER FORMS.

1. PRESENT INDICATIVE ACTIVE

Compare the indicative active endings of the -ω verbs with those of the -μι verbs.

	PRESENT INDICATIVE ACTIVE -ω VERB ENDINGS	PRESENT INDICATIVE ACTIVE -μι VERB ENDINGS
S 1	-ω	-μι
2	-εις	-ς
3	-ει	-σι(ν)
P 1	-ομεν	-μεν
2	-ετε	-τε
3	-ουσι(ν)	-ᾱσι(ν)

Observations: (1) The two sets of endings are most similar in the first and second person plural. In the -ω verbs, the person markers -μεν and -τε are only part of the ending; they are preceded by the thematic vowel. The -μι verbs use the person markers

-μεν and -τε by themselves as endings. From the presence of the thematic vowel, the endings of the -ω verbs are called thematic endings, and the -ω verbs are called thematic verbs. The -μι verb endings lack the thematic vowel and are called athematic endings. The -μι verbs themselves are also called athematic verbs.

(2) The ending -μι of the first person singular, present indicative active of athematic verbs has been seen already as a person marker in the present and aorist optative active endings -οιμι and -αιμι.

To form the present indicative active of an athematic verb, add the present active athematic endings to the long-vowel grade of the present tense stem in the singular and to the short-vowel grade of the stem in the plural.

	PRESENT INDICATIVE ACTIVE ATHEMATIC ENDINGS	STEMS διδω- διδο-	STEMS τιθη- τιθε-	STEMS ἱστη- ἱστα-
S 1	-μι	δίδωμι	τίθημι	ἵστημι
2	-ς	δίδως	τίθης	ἵστης
3	-σι(ν)	δίδωσι(ν)	τίθησι(ν)	ἵστησι(ν)
P 1	-μεν	δίδομεν	τίθεμεν	ἵσταμεν
2	-τε	δίδοτε	τίθετε	ἵστατε
3	-ᾱσι(ν)	διδόᾱσι(ν)	τιθέᾱσι(ν)	ἱστᾶσι(ν)

Observation: In the third person plural of ἵστημι, note the contraction of the -α- of the ending with the -α- of the stem and the resulting circumflex accent. There is no contraction in the third person plural forms διδόᾱσι(ν) or τιθέᾱσι(ν).

2. PRESENT INDICATIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE

Compare the present indicative middle/passive endings of the thematic verbs with those of the athematic verbs.

	PRESENT INDICATIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE THEMATIC ENDINGS	PRESENT INDICATIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE ATHEMATIC ENDINGS
S 1	-ομαι	-μαι
2	-ει/η < *-εσαι	-σαι
3	-εται	-ται

P 1	$-o\mu\varepsilon\theta\alpha$	$-\mu\varepsilon\theta\alpha$
2	$-\varepsilon\sigma\theta\varepsilon$	$-\sigma\theta\varepsilon$
3	$-o\nu\tau\alpha\iota$	$-\nu\tau\alpha\iota$

Observation: The middle/passive athematic endings are the person markers of the thematic endings without the thematic vowel. They are the same endings as those used in the perfect indicative middle/passive: $\pi\varepsilon\pi\alpha\iota\delta\varepsilon\nu\mu\alpha\iota$, $\pi\varepsilon\pi\alpha\iota\delta\varepsilon\nu\sigma\alpha\iota$, etc.

To form the present indicative middle/passive of an athematic verb, add the present middle/passive athematic endings to the short-vowel grade of the present tense stem.

PRESENT INDICATIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE ATHEMATIC ENDINGS	STEM $\delta\iota\delta o-$	STEM $\tau\iota\theta\varepsilon-$	STEM $\iota\sigma\tau\alpha-$
S 1	$-\mu\alpha\iota$	$\delta\iota\delta o\mu\alpha\iota$	$\tau\iota\theta\varepsilon\mu\alpha\iota$	$\iota\sigma\tau\alpha\mu\alpha\iota$
2	$-\sigma\alpha\iota$	$\delta\iota\delta o\sigma\alpha\iota$	$\tau\iota\theta\varepsilon\sigma\alpha\iota$	$\iota\sigma\tau\alpha\sigma\alpha\iota$
3	$-\tau\alpha\iota$	$\delta\iota\delta o\tau\alpha\iota$	$\tau\iota\theta\varepsilon\tau\alpha\iota$	$\iota\sigma\tau\alpha\tau\alpha\iota$
P 1	$-\mu\varepsilon\theta\alpha$	$\delta\iota\delta o\mu\varepsilon\theta\alpha$	$\tau\iota\theta\varepsilon\mu\varepsilon\theta\alpha$	$\iota\sigma\tau\alpha\mu\varepsilon\theta\alpha$
2	$-\sigma\theta\varepsilon$	$\delta\iota\delta o\sigma\theta\varepsilon$	$\tau\iota\theta\varepsilon\sigma\theta\varepsilon$	$\iota\sigma\tau\alpha\sigma\theta\varepsilon$
3	$-\nu\tau\alpha\iota$	$\delta\iota\delta o\nu\tau\alpha\iota$	$\tau\iota\theta\varepsilon\nu\tau\alpha\iota$	$\iota\sigma\tau\alpha\nu\tau\alpha\iota$

Observation: Note that the $-\sigma-$ of the second person singular ending, even though intervocalic, remains.

3. IMPERFECT INDICATIVE ACTIVE

Compare the imperfect indicative endings of the thematic verbs with those of the athematic verbs.

IMPERFECT INDICATIVE ACTIVE THEMATIC ENDINGS	IMPERFECT INDICATIVE ACTIVE ATHEMATIC ENDINGS
S 1	$-o\nu$	$-\nu$
2	$-\varepsilon\varsigma$	$-\varsigma$
3	$-\varepsilon(\nu)$	———
P 1	$-o\mu\varepsilon\nu$	$-\mu\varepsilon\nu$
2	$-\varepsilon\tau\varepsilon$	$-\tau\varepsilon$
3	$-o\nu$	$-\sigma\alpha\nu$

Observation: Except for the third person plural ending -σαν, the imperfect indicative active athematic endings are the person markers of the thematic endings without the thematic vowel. The -σαν is the same person marker that has been seen in such third person plural forms as ἐπαιδεύθησαν (aorist indicative passive) and ποιοίησαν (present optative active); it was borrowed from such forms as ἐπαίδευσαν, where the -σ- is, of course, part of the aorist active and middle tense stem.

To form the imperfect indicative active of an athematic verb, add the imperfect indicative active athematic endings to the augmented long-vowel grade of the present tense stem in the singular and to the augmented short-vowel grade of the present tense stem in the plural. (NOTE: For some of the athematic forms a thematic form has been substituted; such thematic forms are printed entirely in boldface in the paradigms and explained in the observations.)

IMPERFECT INDICATIVE ACTIVE ATHEMATIC ENDINGS		STEMS διδω– διδο–	STEMS τιθη– τιθε–	STEMS ἱστη– ἱστα–
S 1	-ν	ἐδίδουν	ἐτίθην	ἵστην
2	-ς	ἐδίδους	ἐτίθεις	ἵστης
3	———	ἐδίδου	ἐτίθει	ἵστη
P 1	-μεν	ἐδίδομεν	ἐτίθεμεν	ἵσταμεν
2	-τε	ἐδίδοτε	ἐτίθετε	ἵστατε
3	-σαν	ἐδίδοσαν	ἐτίθεσαν	ἵστασαν

Observations: (1) The past indicative augment on a word beginning with a vowel is shown by lengthening the initial vowel. Note carefully the difference in quantity of the initial vowel that distinguishes the imperfect from the present in the first and second person plural of ἵστημι.

ἵσταμεν, ἵστατε: The long iota shows the past indicative augment of the imperfect.

ἵσταμεν, ἵστατε: The short iota shows that the form is unaugmented and therefore present.

(2) Only the imperfect of ἵστημι completely follows the rule given above. In the imperfect of τίθημι one would have expected the forms *ἐτίθης and *ἐτίθη according to the rule. Instead, for the second and third person singular the verb is given thematic forms, with the second and third person singular, imperfect indicative active thematic endings -$\varepsilon\varsigma$ and -ε added to the augmented short-vowel grade of the present tense stem; the vowels of the stem and the ending contract to give the forms:

$$\dot{\varepsilon}\tau\acute{\iota}\theta\varepsilon\iota\varsigma < {}^*\dot{\varepsilon}\tau\acute{\iota}\theta\varepsilon\varepsilon\varsigma$$
$$\dot{\varepsilon}\tau\acute{\iota}\theta\varepsilon\iota < {}^*\dot{\varepsilon}\tau\acute{\iota}\theta\varepsilon\varepsilon$$

(3) In the imperfect of $\delta\acute{\iota}\delta\omega\mu\iota$, thematic forms also replace the original athematic ones:

$$\dot{\varepsilon}\delta\acute{\iota}\delta o\upsilon\nu < {}^*\dot{\varepsilon}\delta\acute{\iota}\delta oo\nu$$
$$\dot{\varepsilon}\delta\acute{\iota}\delta o\upsilon\varsigma < {}^*\dot{\varepsilon}\delta\acute{\iota}\delta o\varepsilon\varsigma$$
$$\dot{\varepsilon}\delta\acute{\iota}\delta o\upsilon < {}^*\dot{\varepsilon}\delta\acute{\iota}\delta o\varepsilon$$

4. IMPERFECT INDICATIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE

Compare the imperfect indicative middle/passive endings of the thematic verbs with those of the athematic verbs.

	IMPERFECT INDICATIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE THEMATIC ENDINGS	IMPERFECT INDICATIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE ATHEMATIC ENDINGS
S 1	-$o\mu\eta\nu$	-$\mu\eta\nu$
2	-$o\upsilon < {}^*$-$\varepsilon\sigma o$	-σo
3	-$\varepsilon\tau o$	-τo
P 1	-$o\mu\varepsilon\theta\alpha$	-$\mu\varepsilon\theta\alpha$
2	-$\varepsilon\sigma\theta\varepsilon$	-$\sigma\theta\varepsilon$
3	-$o\nu\tau o$	-$\nu\tau o$

Observation: The imperfect indicative middle/passive athematic endings are the person markers of the thematic endings without the thematic vowel. They are the same endings as those used in the pluperfect indicative middle/passive $\dot{\varepsilon}\pi\varepsilon\pi\alpha\iota\delta\varepsilon\acute{\upsilon}\mu\eta\nu$, $\dot{\varepsilon}\pi\varepsilon\pi\alpha\acute{\iota}\delta\varepsilon\upsilon\sigma o$, etc.

To form the imperfect indicative middle/passive of an athematic verb, add the imperfect middle/passive athematic endings to the augmented short-vowel grade of the present tense stem.

		IMPERFECT INDICATIVE MIDDLE/ PASSIVE ATHEMATIC ENDINGS	AUGMENTED STEM ἐδιδο-	AUGMENTED STEM ἐτιθε-	AUGMENTED STEM ἱστα-
S	1	-μην	ἐδιδόμην	ἐτιθέμην	ἱστάμην
	2	-σο	ἐδίδοσο	ἐτίθεσο	ἵστασο
	3	-το	ἐδίδοτο	ἐτίθετο	ἵστατο
P	1	-μεθα	ἐδιδόμεθα	ἐτιθέμεθα	ἱστάμεθα
	2	-σθε	ἐδίδοσθε	ἐτίθεσθε	ἵστασθε
	3	-ντο	ἐδίδοντο	ἐτίθεντο	ἵσταντο

Observation : As in the active, so in the middle/passive, in the first and second person plural only the length of the initial iota allows one to distinguish between the present and the imperfect of ἵστημι. Compare > ἱστάμεθα, ἵστασθε: imperfect > ἱστάμεθα, ἵστασθε: present

5. PRESENT SUBJUNCTIVE ACTIVE

To form the present subjunctive active of an athematic verb, add the usual subjunctive active endings to the short-vowel grade of the present tense stem and contract the vowel of the stem and that of the ending.

		SUBJUNCTIVE ACTIVE ENDINGS	STEM διδο-	STEM τιθε-	STEM ἱστε-
S	1	-ω	διδῶ	τιθῶ	ἱστῶ
	2	-ῃς	διδῷς	τιθῇς	ἱστῇς
	3	-ῃ	διδῷ	τιθῇ	ἱστῇ
P	1	-ωμεν	διδῶμεν	τιθῶμεν	ἱστῶμεν
	2	-ητε	διδῶτε	τιθῆτε	ἱστῆτε
	3	-ωσι(ν)	διδῶσι(ν)	τιθῶσι(ν)	ἱστῶσι(ν)

Observations: (1) The contraction of o + η gives ῳ in the second and third person singular, NOT the -οι of contracted verbs with stems in -o; contrast δηλοῖς < δηλόῃς.

(2) Note that the subjunctive of ἵστημι is formed from the stem ἱστε- NOT the expected ἱστα-. The contractions are regular.

(3) A similar contraction between the subjunctive endings and the vowel of the stem, with a circumflex accent on the resulting ultima, occurs in the aorist subjunctive passive, e.g., παιδευθῶ, παιδευθῇς < παιδευθέω, παιδευθέῃς.

6. PRESENT SUBJUNCTIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE

To form the present subjunctive middle/passive of an athematic verb, add the usual subjunctive middle/passive endings to the short-vowel grade of the present tense stem and contract the vowels of the stem and the ending.

	SUBJUNCTIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE ENDINGS	STEM δɩδο-	STEM τɩθε-	STEM ἱστε-
S 1	-ωμαι	δɩδῶμαι	τɩθῶμαι	ἱστῶμαι
2	-ῃ	δɩδῷ	τɩθῇ	ἱστῇ
3	-ηται	δɩδῶται	τɩθῆται	ἱστῆται
P 1	-ωμεθα	δɩδώμεθα	τɩθώμεθα	ἱστώμεθα
2	-ησθε	δɩδῶσθε	τɩθῆσθε	ἱστῆσθε
3	-ωνται	δɩδῶνται	τɩθῶνται	ἱστῶνται

Observations: (1) As in the subjunctive active, note that the contraction of $o +$ η gives ῳ NOT οι, and that the stem of the present subjunctive middle/passive of ἵστημι is once again ἱστε- NOT the expected ἱστα-.

(2) As with the thematic verbs, the forms of the second person singular, present subjunctive middle/passive are identical with those of the third person singular, present subjunctive active.

7. PRESENT OPTATIVE ACTIVE

Compare the present optative endings of the thematic verbs with those of the athematic verbs.

	PRESENT OPTATIVE ACTIVE THEMATIC ENDINGS	PRESENT OPTATIVE ACTIVE ATHEMATIC ENDINGS
S 1	-οιμι	-ιην
2	-οις	-ιης
3	-οι	-ιη
P 1	-οιμεν	-ιμεν/-ιημεν
2	-οιτε	-ιτε/-ιητε
3	-οιεν	-ιεν/-ιησαν

Observation: Except for the absence of the initial -ε- or -ο-, these endings are the same as those of the aorist optative passive (-ειην, -ειης, etc.) or the alternative endings of the present optative active of contracted verbs (-οιην, -οιης, etc.). These athematic endings consist of an optative suffix (the full-grade -ιη- in the singular, the zero-grade -ι- and the alternative full-grade -ιη- in the plural) and the person markers -ν, -ς, ---, -μεν, -τε, -εν (with the zero grade suffix) /-σαν (with the full-grade suffix).

To form the present optative active of an athematic verb, add the present optative active athematic endings to the short-vowel grade of the present tense stem.

	PRESENT OPTATIVE ACTIVE ATHEMATIC ENDINGS	STEM δ ιδο-	STEM τιθε-	STEM ἱστα-

2	-ιητε	διδοίητε	τιθείητε	ἱσταίητε
3	-ιησαν	διδοίησαν	τιθείησαν	ἱσταίησαν

Observation: Note that the accent in the athematic present optative active does not recede beyond the syllable containing the -ι-.

8. PRESENT OPTATIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE

Compare the present optative middle/passive endings of the thematic verbs with those of the athematic verbs.

	PRESENT OPTATIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE THEMATIC ENDINGS	PRESENT OPTATIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE ATHEMATIC ENDINGS
S 1	-οιμην	-ιμην
2	*-οιο < -οισο	*-ιο < -ισο
3	-οιτο	-ιτο
P 1	-οιμεθα	-ιμεθα
2	-οισθε	-ισθε
3	-οιντο	-ιντο

Observation: Except for the absence of the thematic vowel -o-, the athematic endings are the same as the thematic ones.

To form the present optative middle/passive of an athematic verb, add the present optative middle/passive athematic endings to the short-vowel grade of the present tense stem.

PRESENT OPTATIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE ATHEMATIC ENDINGS		STEM διδο-	STEM τιθε-	STEM ἱστα-
S 1	-ιμην	διδοίμην	τιθείμην	ἱσταίμην
2	-ιο	διδοῖο	τιθεῖο	ἱσταῖο
3	-ιτο	διδοῖτο	τιθεῖτο	ἱσταῖτο
P 1	-ιμεθα	διδοίμεθα	τιθείμεθα	ἱσταίμεθα
2	-ισθε	διδοῖσθε	τιθεῖσθε	ἱσταῖσθε
3	-ιντο	διδοῖντο	τιθεῖντο	ἱσταῖντο

Observations: (1) Once again, the accent does not recede beyond the syllable containing the -ι-.

(2) There are alternative thematic forms for the present optative middle/passive of τίθημι in the third person singular and in all of the plural. These use the short-vowel grade of the present tense stem τιθε- and contract the vowels of the stem and the ending:

S 3   τιθοῖτο   (*τιθέοιτο)

P 1   τιθοίμεθα   (*τιθεοίμεθα)
   2   τιθοῖσθε   (*τιθέοισθε)
   3   τιθοῖντο   (*τιθέοιντο)

9. PRESENT IMPERATIVE ACTIVE

Compare the present imperative active endings of the thematic verbs with those of the athematic verbs.

	PRESENT IMPERATIVE ACTIVE THEMATIC ENDINGS	PRESENT IMPERATIVE ACTIVE ATHEMATIC ENDINGS
S 2	-ε	-θι, -ε, —
3	-ετω	-τω
P 2	-ετε	-τε
3	-οντων	-ντων

Observation : Except for the second person singular, the present imperative active athematic endings are the person markers of the thematic endings without the thematic vowel. In the second person singular each verb uses one of the following : the ending -θι or -ε on the short vowel grade, or the long-vowel grade of the stem with no ending.

To form the present imperative active of an athematic verb, add the present imperative active athematic endings to the short vowel grade of the stem. The second person singular form must be learned for each verb.

PRESENT IMPERATIVE ACTIVE ATHEMATIC ENDINGS		STEM διδο-	STEM τιθε-	STEM ἱστα-
S 2	-θι, -ε,	δίδου (*δίδοε)	τίθει (*τίθεε)	ἵστη
3	-τω	διδότω	τιθέτω	ἱστάτω
P 2	-τε	δίδοτε	τίθετε	ἵστατε
3	-ντων	διδόντων	τιθέντων	ἱστάντων

Observations: (1) The second person singular forms δίδου and τίθει employ the ending -ε of thematic verbs: cf. παίδευε. The ending contracts with the stem: cf. δήλου, ποίει.

(2) The second person singular form ἴστη consists of the long-vowel grade of the present tense stem with no ending added.

(3) The second person plural, present imperative active is identical in form with the second person plural, present indicative active.

(4) The second person singular ending -θι has been seen as a person marker in the aorist imperative passive ending -ηθι. It will be used to form imperatives of certain athematic verbs given in later Units.

10. PRESENT IMPERATIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE

Compare the present imperative middle/passive endings of the thematic verbs with those of the athematic verbs.

To form the present imperative middle/passive of an athematic verb, add the present imperative middle/passive endings to the short-vowel grade of the present tense stem.

	PRESENT IMPERATIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE ATHEMATIC ENDINGS	STEM διδο-	STEM τιθε-	STEM ἱστα-
S 2	-σο	δίδοσο	τίθεσο	ἴστασο

One verb which introduces fear clauses is:

> φοβέομαι, φοβήσομαι, ——, ——, πεφόβημαι, ἐφοβήθην, "fear, be afraid"

φοβοῦμαι μὴ λύσῃ τοὺς κακούς.
I am afraid that he may/will free the wicked men.

φοβοῦμαι μὴ οὐ λύῃ τοὺς ἀγαθούς.
I am afraid that he may/will not free [habitually] the good men.

ἐφοβούμην μὴ λύσειε τοὺς κακούς.
I was afraid that he might/would free the wicked men.

When a fear clause refers to an action contemporaneous with or prior to that of the main verb of fearing, the indicative is used.

φοβοῦμαι μὴ λύει τοὺς κακούς.
I am afraid that he is freeing the wicked men.

φοβοῦμαι μὴ ἔλῦσε τοὺς κακούς.
I am afraid that he freed the wicked men.

ἐφοβούμην μὴ ἔλῦσε τοὺς κακούς.
I was afraid that he freed the wicked men.

ἐφοβούμην μὴ οὐκ ἔλῦσε τοὺς ἀγαθούς.
I was afraid that he did not free the good men.

Observation: The second person plural, present imperative middle/passive is identical with the second person plural, present indicative middle/passive. Context will help to determine meaning.

11. PRESENT INFINITIVES ACTIVE AND MIDDLE/PASSIVE

Compare the present infinitive active and middle/passive endings of the thematic verbs with those of the athematic verbs.

	THEMATIC	ATHEMATIC
PRESENT ACTIVE	-ειν	-ναι
PRESENT MIDDLE/PASSIVE	-εσθαι	-σθαι

To form the present infinitives active and middle/passive of an athematic verb, add the appropriate ending to the short vowel grade of the present tense stem.

	ENDING	STEM διδο-	STEM τιθε-	STEM ἱστα-
PRESENT ACTIVE	-ναι	διδόναι	τιθέναι	ἱστάναι
PRESENT MIDDLE/PASSIVE	-σθαι	δίδοσθαι	τίθεσθαι	ἵστασθαι

Observations: (1) THE SYLLABLE PRECEDING THE INFINITIVE ENDING -ναι IS ALWAYS ACCENTED; hence the non-recessive accent on διδόναι, as in the perfect infinitive active πεπαιδευκέναι and the aorist infinitive passive παιδευθῆναι.

(2) The present infinitive middle/passive athematic ending differs from the thematic ending only in the absence of the thematic vowel. Note that the accent on the form is recessive.

101. FEAR CLAUSES

After verbs of fearing, a fear clause can serve as an object of the verb. It is introduced by the conjunction μή, which in a fear clause has the meaning "that" or, somewhat archaically, "lest." A fear clause indicating a fear that something may not or might not happen is introduced by μὴ οὐ, "that not."

When the fear clause refers to a subsequent action, the fear clause takes the subjunctive in primary sequence and the optative in secondary sequence; tense indicates aspect only. Fear clauses, like purpose clauses, follow the rules of sequence of moods.

VOCABULARY NOTES

The reciprocal pronoun ——, ἀλλήλων, "one another," is found only in the plural in the genitive (ἀλλήλων), the dative (ἀλλήλοις, ἀλλήλαις, ἀλλήλοις), and the accusative (ἀλλήλους, ἀλλήλᾱς, ἄλληλα).

The prefix ἀνα- has a basic meaning "up" and is opposite in meaning to the prefix κατα-, "down." With verbs of motion, the difference between the two is quite clear; at other times, they seem to overlap: ἀναλύω and καταλύω differ in the same way as do the English translations "I break (it) up" and "I break (it) down." The prefix can also indicate a strengthening or repetition. Like κατά, ἀνά is also a preposition, but it is not used as such in Attic prose.

From the verb γράφω, "write, draw," come the agent noun γραφεύς, γραφέως, ὁ, "writer, painter" (with the suffix -εύς; cf. ἱερεύς, ἱππεύς) and the verbal noun γραφική, γραφικῆς, ἡ, "writing, painting" (from ἡ γραφικὴ τέχνη; cf. ῥητορική).

The noun δημιουργός, δημιουργοῦ, ὁ, "skilled workman," is a compound of the adjective δήμιος, δήμιον, "public," from δῆμος, δήμου, ὁ, "the people" (cf. πόλεμος and πολέμιος) and ἔργον, ἔργον, τό, "work, deed." It means a

	ACTIVE	MIDDLE	PASSIVE

IMPERFECT	ἵστην I was standing (something) up I used to stand (something) up	ἱστάμην I was standing (myself) up I used to stand (myself) up I was standing (something) up for myself I used to stand (something) up for myself	ἱστάμην I was being stood up I used to be stood up person skilled enough to be a professional and can be applied to any craft including, e.g., bronze-workers, sculptors, doctors. In some cosmologies, there is a δημιουργός, creator of the world.

In the verb δίδωμι, δώσω, ἔδωκα, δέδωκα, δέδομαι, ἐδόθην, "give," note the long-vowel grade of the root in Principal Parts I–IV and the short-vowel grade of the root in Principal Parts V and VI. Note that when a present tense has reduplication, the vowel between the repeated consonants is -ι-; contrast the -ε- of the reduplication of the perfect. The prefixed verb ἀποδίδωμι when used in the active voice means such things as "give back, pay (penalties, honors), permit." In the middle, ἀποδίδομαι can mean "sell." The price for which one sells something can be put in the genitive. This is called the genitive of price and is a special instance of the genitive of value seen with, e.g., ἀξιόω.

> They sell the books for gold.

The phrase δίκην διδόναι means "pay a/the penalty":

> δίκην δίδωσιν ὁ ποιητὴς τῶν ἀδίκως πεπρᾱγμένων.
> The poet is paying the penalty for the things which have been done unjustly (i.e., his unjust deeds).

The noun ἔπος, ἔπους, τό, "word; (pl., sometimes) epic poetry," is synonymous in many respects with λόγος, λόγου, ὁ. It, too, can mean things like "speech, story," but it is used more frequently in Attic than λόγος to mean an "individual word." In the plural, in contrast to other types of poetry, it can mean "epic poetry."

The noun ἑρμηνεύς, ἑρμηνέως, ὁ, "interpreter," is used of a "translator" of foreign languages or of anyone who explains anything.

The noun ζωγράφος, ζωγράφου, ὁ, "painter," is an agent noun formed from the roots ζω-, "life" and γραφ-, "paint." It meant originally a "painter of nature" but came to be a general word for painter.

Two words or phrases linked by ἤ usually have the same grammatical construction:

> μᾶλλον τῑμῶσιν οἱ πολῖται τὸν ῥήτορα ἤ τὸν ποιητήν.
> The citizens honor the public speaker more than the poet.

The basic meaning of the verb ἵστημι, στήσω, ἔστησα (trans.) or ἔστην (intrans.), ἕστηκα (intrans.), ἕσταμαι, ἐστάθην is "stand." Its transitive meanings, "make stand, set up," must be distinguished from its intransitive ones, "stand, be standing."

The chart on pages 354–55 gives the meanings of the various tenses of this verb in the active, middle, and passive voices. Intransitive meanings are

στήσω
I shall stand (something) up
I shall be standing (something) up στήσομαι

I shall stand

I shall stand (something) up for myself
I shall be standing (something) up for myself

σταθήσομαι
I shall be stood up
I shall be being stood up

AORIST

ἐστάθην

PERFECT

ἕστηκα

ἕσταμαι (rare)
I have stood (myself) up
I have stood (something) up for myself

ἕσταμαι

PLUPERFECT

εἱστήκη
I was standing
I used to stand

εἱστάμην (rare)
I had stood (myself) up
I had stood (something) up for myself

εἱστάμην

italicized. Note that the present, imperfect, and future middle can be either transitive or intransitive; the first aorist active ἔστησα is transitive, but the second aorist active ἔστην (whose conjugation is given in Unit 13) is intransitive; the first aorist middle, unlike the other middle forms, is only transitive; the perfect ἕστηκα (whose conjugation is given in Unit 13) is intransitive and has a present meaning, and likewise, the pluperfect εἱστήκη is intransitive and has an imperfect meaning. The perfect and pluperfect middle are very rare.

In learning the principal parts, observe how the formation of the various tenses affects the spelling of the word:

> ἵστημι < *σίστημι: the reduplicated σ- drops out but causes the initial rough breathing > ἔστην and ἔστησα: the ἐ- is a past indicative augment > ἕστηκα < *σέστηκα and ἕσταμαι < *σέσταμαι: the reduplicated σ- drops out but causes the initial rough breathing > ἐστάθην: the ἐ- is a past indicative augment.

Note that as in δίδωμι, Principal Parts I–IV have a long vowel; Principal Parts V and VI have a short vowel.

Note carefully that the future active, middle, and passive; the first aorist active and middle; the aorist passive; and the perfect and pluperfect middle/passive of this verb are conjugated just like παιδεύω.

The verb ἵστημι occurs very frequently in compounds. Two important compounds are ἀφίστημι and καθίστημι; the latter is treated under the prefix κατα- below.

The compound verb ἀφίστημι, ἀποστήσω, ἀπέστησα (trans.) or ἀπέστην (intrans.), ἀφέστηκα (intrans.), ἀφέσταμαι, ἀπεστάθην, "(trans.) cause to revolt; (mid. and intrans.) revolt," shows the same distinctions of meaning in the various tenses and voices as does the simple verb, e.g.:

> ἀφίσταμεν τοὺς στρατιώτᾱς.   (present active)
> We are causing the soldiers to revolt.

> ἀφιστάμεθα ἀπὸ τῆς πόλεως.   (present middle)
> We are revolting from the city.

The prefix κατα- can have a spatial meaning, "down," or one of the meanings of the preposition κατά, "against." It can also simply strengthen the meaning of a verb. Thus καταλύω, "destroy," is a somewhat more forceful word than the simple verb λύω.

The compound verb καθίστημι, καταστήσω, κατέστησα (trans.) or κατέστην (intrans.), καθέστηκα (intrans.), καθέσταμαι, κατεστάθην, "appoint, establish, put into a state; (mid. and intrans.) enter into a state," is a very important word and can be used of "setting up" a form of government, "appointing" officials, etc.; it can also be used of putting someone or something into a certain state. It shows the same distinctions of meaning in the various tenses and voices as does the simple verb, e.g.:

> τὸν δῆμον εἰς πόλεμον καθιστάναι > to be putting the people into (a state of) war > δημοκρατίᾱν κατεστήσαμεν.

> We established a democracy.

> βασιλεὺς καθέστηκα.
> I am established as king (i.e., I have entered into the state of being king).

In a negative purpose clause introduced by ἵνα μή, ὡς μή, or ὅπως μή, μή is an adverb. In a fear clause expressing a fear that something may happen, μή is a conjunction. A clause expressing a fear that something may not happen is introduced by μὴ οὐ, in which μή is a conjunction and οὐ is an adverb.

The words μηδέ and οὐδέ can be conjunctions connecting two items, the second of which is negative: "and not." They can also be used as adverbs: "not even."

The three interrogative adverbs of place correspond to the three cases expressing motion or absence of motion; cf. the chart at the end of Section 13.4, page 20.
> ποῖ πέμπεις τὰ βιβλία;
> To where are you sending the books?

> ποῦ τὰ βιβλία γράφεις;
> Where do you write the books?

> πόθεν ἥκεις εἰς τὴν τῶν ὁπλῑτῶν οἰκίᾱν;
> From where have you come to the house of the hoplites?

Distinguish carefully between the interrogative adverb ποῦ, "where," and the indefinite enclitic adverb που, "I suppose; somewhere."

The preposition πρός governs all three cases and has several meanings: with the genitive it means "in the eyes of": πρὸς τῶν ἀνθρώπων, "in the eyes of men." In exclamations and oaths, it means "in the name of": πρὸς τῶν θεῶν, "in the name of the gods." With the dative case, it means either "near" (showing position) or "in addition to." With the accusative, it means "toward," either of motion or of almost any sort of relation (love, hatred, etc.).

The basic meaning of τίθημι, θήσω, ἔθηκα, τέθηκα, τέθειμαι, ἐτέθην is "put, place." It also means "put (something) down to last, make": e.g., νόμους τιθέναι, "to make laws." In learning the principal parts, note that as in δίδωμι and ἵστημι, there is the same reduplication in the present (τίθημι < *θίθημι with dissimilation of aspirates) and the same long-vowel grade of the root in Principal Parts I IV. Observe that Principal Part V has the diphthong -ει- in the tense stem: τέθειμαι (contrast the short vowels of δέδομαι and ἕσταμαι). The short vowel of Principal Part VI is similar to that of ἐδόθην and ἐστάθην.

The compound verb ἀνατίθημι, "set up, dedicate," is used especially to describe the dedication of an object to a god, e.g., ταῦτα τῇ θεῷ ἀναθήσομεν, "We shall dedicate these things to the goddess." Many votive objects bear an inscription stating simply that the donor dedicated the object to a god.

102. -μι (ATHEMATIC) VERBS: CONTINUED

In this Section are presented the remaining forms of δίδωμι, τίθημι, and ἵστημι which are not conjugated like the corresponding tenses of παιδεύω: the second aorist active of all three verbs, the second aorist middle of δίδωμι and τίθημι, and the perfect and pluperfect indicative active and perfect infinitive active of ἵστημι.

The Principal Parts in bold face below are those which still require explanation. All other Principal Parts of these verbs can already be employed to construct the appropriate forms.

(a) δίδωμι, δώσω, ἔδωκα, δέδωκα, δέδομαι, ἐδόθην, "give"

(b) τίθημι, θήσω, ἔθηκα, τέθηκα, τέθειμαι, ἐτέθην, "put"

(c) ἵστημι, στήσω, ἔστησα (transitive) or ἔστην (intransitive), ἔστηκα (intrans.), ἔσταμαι, ἐστάθην, "make stand; (intrans. and mid.) stand"

1. AORIST ACTIVE AND MIDDLE OF ATHEMATIC VERBS

In the aorist active and middle, athematic verbs have some first aorist forms and some second aorist forms. The term first aorist applies to those aorists active and middle which employ exactly the same endings as the equivalent aorist forms of παιδεύω. The term second aorist applies to any aorist active or middle which employs any different endings.

The second aorist active and middle of λείπω, which is thematic throughout and which is marked by the ending -ον (or -ομην) of Principal Part III, must be distinguished from the second aorists active and middle presented in this Section, which are for the most part athematic and which generally employ endings different from those of the second aorists already learned.

369

The second aorist active and (where it exists) the second aorist middle of these athematic verbs are built upon a stem which shows the same vowel gradation as the present tense stem. This stem differs from the present tense stem ONLY in that there is no reduplication of the initial consonant.

PRESENT TENSE STEM:

long-vowel grade	διδω-	τιθη-	ἱστη-	(<*σιστη-)
short-vowel grade	διδο-	τιθε	ἱστα-	(<*σιστα-)

SECOND AORIST ACTIVE AND MIDDLE TENSE STEM:

long-vowel grade	*δω-	*θη-	στη-
short-vowel grade	δο-	θε-	στα-

The stems *δω- and *θη-, which had appeared only in the singular of the indicative active, were replaced by the first aorist stems δωκ- and θηκ- which appear in Principal Part III. In the plural of the indicative active, and in the rest of this conjugation, these verbs use the short-vowel stems δο- and θε-.

In contrast, ἔστην uses the long-vowel grade of the stem throughout the indicative. It is therefore treated separately below.

2. AORIST INDICATIVE ACTIVE

In the singular of the aorist indicative active, the verbs δίδωμι and τίθημι have a first aorist; in the plural they have an athematic second aorist which employs the short-vowel grade of the second aorist active and middle tense stem. To this stem are added the same athematic endings as are employed to form the imperfect indicative active of these verbs.

Such a mixture of first aorist singular and second aorist plural is called a mixed aorist.

AORIST INDICATIVE ACTIVE ATHEMATIC ENDINGS		AUGMENTED STEMS:
		ἐδωκ-	ἐθηκ-
		ἐδο-	ἐθε-
S 1		ἔδωκα	ἔθηκα	FIRST
2		ἔδωκας	ἔθηκας	AORIST
3		ἔδωκε(ν)	ἔθηκε(ν)
P 1	-μεν	ἔδομεν	ἔθεμεν	ATHEMATIC
2	-τε	ἔδοτε	ἔθετε	SECOND
3	-σαν	ἔδοσαν	ἔθεσαν	AORIST

Observations: (1) The singular is formed from Principal Part III with the regular endings of the first aorist (cf. ἐπαίδευσα).

(2) In the plural the aorist indicative active of δίδωμι and τίθημι differs from the imperfect indicative active ONLY in that the stem is not reduplicated: cf. ἔδομεν (first person plural, aorist indicative active) and ἐδίδομεν (first person plural, imperfect indicative active).

The verb ἵστημι has two separate aorists. The first aorist ἔστησα is transitive and means "I stood (something, e.g., a statue) up." It can also be used transitively in the middle, e.g., ἐστησάμην, "I stood (something) up for myself." The second aorist ἔστην is intransitive and means "I stood (someplace)"; it has no middle voice.

Unlike the aorists ἔδωκα and ἔθηκα, the second aorist indicative active ἔστην is an athematic second aorist throughout its conjugation and employs in the indicative ONLY the long-vowel grade of the second aorist active tense stem, together with the same athematic endings as were employed in the imperfect indicative active of athematic verbs. Such a second aorist is called a root aorist. Other root aorists will be introduced later.

ROOT AORIST INDICATIVE ACTIVE ENDINGS		AUGMENTED STEM: ἐστη-
S 1	-ν	ἔστην	ROOT
2	-ς	ἔστης	AORIST
3	—	ἔστη
P 1	-μεν	ἔστημεν
2	-τε	ἔστητε
3	-σαν	ἔστησαν

3. AORIST INDICATIVE MIDDLE

In all forms of the aorist indicative middle, as in the plural of the aorist indicative active, the verbs δίδωμι and τίθημι have an athematic second aorist which employs the short-vowel grade of the second aorist active and middle tense stem. The athematic endings are the same as those of the imperfect indicative middle/passive of these verbs, except in the second person singular. Remember that ἵστημι has no second aorist middle.

	AORIST INDICATIVE	AUGMENTED STEMS:
	MIDDLE	ἐδο-	ἐθε-
	ATHEMATIC ENDINGS
S 1	-μην	ἐδόμην	ἐθέμην
2	-ο < *-σο	ἔδου	ἔθου
3	-το	ἔδοτο	ἔθετο
P 1	-μεθα	ἐδόμεθα	ἐθέμεθα
2	-σθε	ἔδοσθε	ἔθεσθε
3	-ντο	ἔδοντο	ἔθεντο

Observations: (1) In the second person singular, contraction produces the spurious diphthong -ου: *ἔδοο > ἔδου, *ἔθεο > ἔθου.

(2) Remember that the vowel preceding the endings is NOT a thematic vowel but part of the stem: thus ἔδοσθε (where the thematic vowel would be -ε-); ἐθέμεθα (where the thematic vowel would be -ο-).

(3) Since the endings of the athematic aorist indicative middle are the same as those of the corresponding imperfect, except in the second person singular, it follows that everywhere except in the second person singular the aorist indicative middle of δίδωμι and τίθημι differs from the imperfect middle/passive ONLY in that the stem is not reduplicated: cf. ἐδόμεθα (first person plural, aorist indicative middle) and ἐδιδόμεθα (first person plural, imperfect indicative middle/passive).

4. AORIST SUBJUNCTIVE ACTIVE

To form the aorist subjunctive active of athematic verbs, add the usual subjunctive active endings to the unaugmented short-vowel grade of the second aorist active and middle tense stem and contract the vowel of the stem with the initial vowel of the ending.

	SUBJUNCTIVE	STEM:	STEM:	STEM:
	ACTIVE ENDINGS	δο-	θε-	στε-
S 1	-ω	δῶ	θῶ	στῶ
2	-ης	δῷς	θῇς	στῇς
3	-η	δῷ	θῇ	στῇ

P 1	-ωμεν	δῶμεν	θῶμεν	στῶμεν
2	-ητε	δῶτε	θῆτε	στῆτε
3	-ωσι(ν)	δῶσι(ν)	θῶσι(ν)	στῶσι(ν)

Observations: (1) As in the present subjunctive, ἵστημι employs a stem ending in -ε- in the second aorist subjunctive.

(2) The stem δο- contracts with the singular endings as does the present stem διδο- (cf. Section 100.5): *δόῃς becomes δῷς NOT δοῖς; *δόῃ becomes δῷ NOT δοῖ.

(3) Since athematic verbs employ the same endings in the aorist subjunctive active and the present subjunctive active, and since the appropriate stem shows the short-vowel grade in both, it follows that the aorist subjunctive active of these verbs differs from the present subjunctive active ONLY in that the stem is not reduplicated: cf. δῶμεν (first person plural, aorist subjunctive active) and διδῶμεν (first person plural, present subjunctive active).

5. AORIST SUBJUNCTIVE MIDDLE

To form the aorist subjunctive middle of athematic verbs, add the usual subjunctive middle endings to the unaugmented short-vowel grade of the second aorist active and middle tense stem and contract the vowel of the stem with the initial vowel of the ending.

SUBJUNCTIVE MIDDLE ENDINGS		STEM: δο-	STEM: θε-
S 1	-ωμαι	δῶμαι	θῶμαι
2	-ῃ	δῷ	θῇ
3	-ηται	δῶται	θῆται
P 1	-ωμεθα	δώμεθα	θώμεθα
2	-ησθε	δῶσθε	θῆσθε
3	-ωνται	δῶνται	θῶνται

Observations: (1) The stem δο- contracts with the singular endings as does the stem διδο- (cf. Section 100.6): *δόῃ becomes δῷ NOT δοῖ.

(2) As in the active voice, the aorist subjunctive middle of these verbs differs from the present subjunctive middle/passive ONLY in that the stem is not reduplicated: cf. δώμεθα

(first person plural, aorist subjunctive middle) and δίδώμεθα (first person plural, present subjunctive middle/passive).

6. AORIST OPTATIVE ACTIVE

To form the aorist optative active of athematic verbs, add to the unaugmented short-vowel grade of the second aorist active and middle tense stem the same endings as are employed to form the present optative active of athematic verbs.

OPTATIVE ACTIVE ATHEMATIC ENDINGS		STEM: δο-	STEM: θε-	STEM: στα-
S 1	-ιην	δοίην	θείην	σταίην
2	-ιης	δοίης	θείης	σταίης
3	-ιη	δοίη	θείη	σταίη

Observation: The aorist optative active of these verbs differs from the present optative active ONLY in that the stem is not reduplicated: cf.
δοῖμεν (first person plural, aorist optative active) and διδοῖμεν (first person plural, present optative active).

7. AORIST OPTATIVE MIDDLE

To form the aorist optative middle of athematic verbs, add to the unaugmented short-vowel grade of the second aorist active and middle tense stem the same endings as were employed to form the present optative middle/passive of these verbs.

	OPTATIVE MIDDLE ATHEMATIC ENDINGS	STEM: δο-	STEM: θε-
S 1	-ιμην	δοίμην	θείμην
2	-ιο	δοῖο	θεῖο
3	-ιτο	δοῖτο	θεῖτο
P 1	-ιμεθα	δοίμεθα	θείμεθα
2	-ισθε	δοῖσθε	θεῖσθε
3	-ιντο	δοῖντο	θεῖντο

Observations: (1) The verb τίθημι has alternative thematic forms in the third person singular and in the plural. The final vowel of the stem contracts with the initial diphthong of the ending. Cf. the alternative forms of the present optative middle/passive, Section 100.8.

Alternative thematic forms:

S 3	θοῖτο	(*θέοιτο)
P 1	θοίμεθα	(*θεοίμεθα)
2	θοῖσθε	(*θέοισθε)
3	θοῖντο	(*θέοιντο)

(2) The aorist optative middle of these verbs, including both athematic and alternative thematic forms, differs from the present optative middle/passive ONLY in that the stem is not reduplicated: cf. δοίμεθα (first person plural, aorist optative middle) and διδοίμεθα first person plural, present optative middle/passive).

8. AORIST IMPERATIVE ACTIVE

The aorist imperative active of athematic verbs is formed as follows:

	MIXED AORIST: short-vowel grade of second aorist active and middle tense stem + endings:	ROOT AORIST: long-vowel grade of second aorist active and middle tense stem + endings:
S 2	-ς	-θι
3	-τω	-τω

| P 2 | -τε | | -τε |
| 3 | -ντων | | -ντων |

	STEM: δο-	STEM: θε-	STEM: στη-
S 2	δός	θές	στῆθι
3	δότω	θέτω	στήτω
P 2	δότε	θέτε	στῆτε
3	δόντων	θέντων	στάντων

Observations: (1) All root aorists use the second person singular ending -θι with the long-vowel grade of the stem. Verbs with mixed aorists use the ending -ς with the short-vowel grade of the stem.

(2) The imperative forms δός and θές, when compounded, have an accent on the penult:

δός   ἔκδος   ἀπόδος

(3) The long-vowel stem στη- is shortened before the third person plural ending -ντων.

9. AORIST IMPERATIVE MIDDLE

To form the aorist imperative middle of athematic verbs, add to the short-vowel grade of the second aorist active and middle tense stem the following endings:

IMPERATIVE MIDDLE ATHEMATIC ENDINGS	STEM: δο-	STEM: θε-
S 2	-ο < *-σο	δοῦ (*δόο)	θοῦ (*θέο)
3	-σθω	δόσθω	θέσθω
P 2	-σθε	δόσθε	θέσθε
3	-σθων	δόσθων	θέσθων

Observation: The imperative forms δοῦ and θοῦ, when compounded with a monosyllabic prefix, retain the circumflex on the ultima; when compounded with a disyllabic prefix or with more than one prefix, they take an acute accent on the penult:

δοῦ   ἐκδοῦ   ἀπόδου

10. AORIST INFINITIVE ACTIVE

The verbs δίδωμι and τίθημι form the aorist infinitive active by adding to the unaugmented short-vowel grade of the second aorist active and middle tense stem the ending -έναι, which contracts with the vowel of the stem to form a spurious diphthong:

δοῦναι (*δοέναι)   θεῖναι (*θεένaι)

The verb ἵστημι forms the second aorist infinitive active by adding to the unaugmented long-vowel grade of the second aorist active tense stem the ending -ναι :

στῆναι

Other root aorists, to be introduced later, follow the same pattern.

11. AORIST INFINITIVE MIDDLE

The verbs δίδωμι and τίθημι form the aorist infinitive middle by adding to the unaugmented short-vowel grade of the second aorist active and middle tense stem the ending -σθαι:

δόσθαι   θέσθαι

Note that ALL INFINITIVES HAVE A FIXED, NON-RECESSIVE ACCENT WHICH IS RETAINED IN COMPOUNDS:

ἀποστῆναι   ἀποδόσθαι

12. PERFECT AND PLUPERFECT INDICATIVE ACTIVE OF ἵστημι

The perfect and pluperfect indicative active of δίδωμι and τίθημι are formed in the same way as the same tenses of παιδεύω.

The verb ἵστημι forms the singular of the perfect and pluperfect indicative active in the same way as the same tenses of παιδεύω. But in the plural this verb employs a different stem, and different endings.

The perfect active of ἵστημι is conjugated as follows:

	STEMS:
	ἑστηκ-	(*σεστηκ-)
	ἑστα-	(*σεστα-)

S 1	ἕστηκα
2	ἕστηκας
3	ἕστηκε(ν)

P 1	ἔσταμεν
2	ἔστατε
3	ἐστᾶσι(ν)

Observation: In the singular ἕστηκα is conjugated like πεπαίδευκα; in the plural, this perfect uses the stem ἑστα- and the person markers -μεν and -τε as endings, together with the normal third person plural ending -ᾱσι(ν), which contracts with the final α of the stem.

The pluperfect active of ἵστημι is conjugated as follows:

STEMS:
εἱστηκ-	(*ἐσεστηκ-)
ἑστα-	(*σεστα-)

S 1	εἱστήκη
2	εἱστήκης
3	εἱστήκει(ν)

P 1	ἔσταμεν
2	ἔστατε
3	ἔστασαν

Observation: In the singular the augmented stem εἱστηκ- receives the usual pluperfect indicative endings; in the plural the alternative stem ἑστα-, unaugmented, receives the person markers -μεν, -τε, -σαν as endings. In the first and second persons plural the forms of the perfect and pluperfect indicative active are identical. Context will help to determine meaning.

13. PERFECT INFINITIVE ACTIVE OF ἵστημι

The verb ἵστημι forms the perfect infinitive active by adding the ending -ναι to the perfect active stem ἑστα-. The penult is accented, as always before this ending:

    ἑστάναι

103. OBJECT CLAUSES OF EFFORT

Verbs of effort, striving, or caring often take object clauses of effort with the future indicative, introduced by the conjunction ὅπως, "that." The negative is μή.

One verb which introduces such clauses is πράττω when used in the sense "bring it about (that)." Another is μηχανάομαι:

> μηχανάομαι, μηχανήσομαι, ἐμηχανησάμην, —, μεμηχάνημαι, ——,
> "contrive, devise"

πράττει ὅπως τῆς πόλεως ἄρξει.
He is bringing it about that he will rule the city.

μηχανῶνται ὅπως τοὺς πολεμίους νῑκήσουσιν.
They are contriving that they will defeat the enemy.

μηχανᾶσθε ὅπως ἡ δημοκρατίᾱ μὴ λυθήσεται.
You are contriving that the democracy will not be destroyed.

The future indicative is used even when the introductory verb is in a secondary tense:

ἐμηχανῶντο ὅπως τοὺς πολεμίους νῑκήσουσιν.
They were contriving that they would defeat the enemy.

Object clauses of effort can be used independently with the force of an exhortation or a warning. They are thus alternatives to the imperative and the hortatory and prohibitive subjunctives (cf. Section 90).

ὅπως τοὺς πολεμίους νῑκήσετε.
(See to it) that you defeat the enemy!

ὅπως μὴ νῑκηθήσεσθε.
(See to it) that you are not defeated!

ὅπως νῑκήσομεν.
(Let us see to it) that we conquer!

104. OBJECT CLAUSES OF EFFORT AND PURPOSE CLAUSES COMPARED

Object clauses of effort are so named because they function as the direct object of a verb. They answer the question "What?" (E.g., What is he bringing about?, What are they contriving?)

Purpose clauses function as adverbs and answer the question "Why?"

μηχανᾶται ὅπως τοῦ δήμου ἄρξει. (object clause of effort)
He is contriving that he will rule the people.

$$\tau a\tilde{v}\tau a \ \mu\eta\chi a\nu\tilde{a}\tau a\iota \quad \left\{ \begin{array}{l} \text{ő}\pi\omega\varsigma \\ \text{ő}\nu a \\ \text{ő}\varsigma \end{array} \right\} \quad \tau o\tilde{v} \ \delta\acute{\eta}\mu o\upsilon \ \text{ő}\varrho\xi\eta. \quad (purpose\ clause)$$

He is contriving these things in order that he may rule the people.

The object clause of effort answers the question "What is he contriving?" The purpose clause answers the question "Why is he contriving these things?"

105. ACCUSATIVE OF RESPECT

A noun in the accusative case, without a preposition, can indicate the respect in which a statement is true. This usage is called the accusative of respect. It is employed to limit the application of an adjective or of a verb denoting a state of being.

ψῡχὴν μὲν καλὸς ὁ Σωκράτης, σῶμα δὲ αἰσχρός.
In soul (with respect to his soul), on the one hand, Sokrates is beautiful; in body (with respect to his body), on the other hand, (he is) ugly.

ἀγαθὸς μάχην οὗτος ὁ στρατιώτης.
This soldier is good in battle (with respect to battle).

In the first example the two accusatives of respect show that Sokrates' beauty and ugliness are limited to particular areas. In the second example the soldier's goodness is limited to a single area.

106. ACCUSATIVE OF RESPECT AND DATIVE OF RESPECT COMPARED

The accusative of respect and dative of respect (cf. Section 81) overlap in meaning and can often be used interchangeably. They differ in that the force of the dative is instrumental, while the force of the accusative is limiting.

ψῡχὴν καλὸς ὁ Σωκράτης.
Sokrates is beautiful in soul.
(Sokrates' beauty is limited to one area, his soul.)
(As far as his soul is concerned, Sokrates is beautiful.)

ψῡχῇ καλὸς ὁ Σωκράτης.
Sokrates is beautiful in soul.
(Sokrates is beautiful by means of his soul.)

VOCABULARY NOTES

Aristophanes (c. 450 c. 385 b.c.) was a poet of Old Comedy (i.e., Athenian fifth-century comedy). Eleven of his plays have survived.

The noun ἄρχων, ἄρχοντος, ὁ, "ruler; archon," should be distinguished from the related noun ἀρχή, ἀρχῆς, ἡ, "beginning; rule, empire," and the related verb ἄρχω, one of whose meanings is "rule."

The verb γίγνομαι, γενήσομαι, ἐγενόμην, γέγονα, γεγένημαι, ——, "be born; become; happen," is a deponent verb: Principal Parts I, II, III, and V are in the middle voice. But this verb also has a perfect active, with no difference in meaning from the perfect middle. The root shows an e-grade (γενήσομαι, ἐγενόμην, γεγένημαι), an o-grade (γέγονα), and a zero-grade (γίγνομαι). Cf. λείπω. The present tense stem shows a reduplication of the initial consonant of the root + iota: γίγνομαι. Contrast the reduplication with epsilon in the two tense stems of the perfect: γέγονα, γεγένημαι. Note that this verb has a thematic second aorist; cf. ἐλιπόμην.

In the sense "become" this verb is copulative and takes a predicate nominative:

ἀγαθοὶ γίγνονται.
They are becoming good.

In the aorist this verb often indicates that someone was good (bad, etc.) on some particular occasion.

The basic meaning of the preposition ἐπί is "on." Its use with the genitive, dative, and accusative cases deserves special attention, since meanings overlap and cannot always be derived from the original force of these cases.

+ gen.	ἐπὶ γῆς καὶ ὑπὸ γῆς	on the earth and under the earth
	ἐφ᾽ ἵππου	on horseback
+ dat.	χρῡσὸς ἐπὶ a table	gold on a table
	νόμος ἐπὶ τοῖς ἀδίκοις	a law pertaining to the unjust
	εἰρήνην ἐποιησάμεθα ἐπὶ τούτοις.	We made peace on these conditions.
+ acc.	He jumped ἐπὶ τὸν ἵππον.	He jumped onto his horse.
	ἥκω ἐπὶ τόδε.	I have come for this thing (purpose).
	ὁ στρατὸς extended ἐπὶ πέντε στάδια.	The army extended over (a distance of) five stades.
	στρατιώτᾱς ἔπεμψα ἐπὶ τοὺς πολεμίους.	I sent soldiers against the enemy.

The verb ἔρχομαι, ἐλεύσομαι, ἦλθον, ἐλήλυθα, ——, ——, "come, go," is deponent in the present and future tenses only. In Attic Greek it appears ONLY in the present indicative, in the aorist (all moods), and in the perfect and pluperfect. The missing moods and tenses (present EXCEPT for the indicative, imperfect, and future) are supplied by another verb, εἶμι, to be introduced in Unit 17. The unaugmented aorist active tense stem is ἐλθ-. The second person singular, aorist imperative active, like that of λαμβάνω, is accented on the ultima: ἐλθέ, λαβέ. When these forms are compounded, the accent is recessive: ἄπελθε, σύλλαβε.

The pluperfect does not add the past indicative augment: e.g. ἐληλύθη, "I had come." Remember the general rule that when Principal Part IV or V begins with ἐ- or εἰ-, the pluperfect is unaugmented; cf. εἴληφα.

Euripides (c. 485–c. 406 B.C.) was the youngest of the three great tragic playwrights of fifth-century Athens.

The proper noun Εὐρῑπίδης, Εὐρῑπίδου, ὁ, "Euripides," has the vocative singular Εὐρῑπίδη. Contrast the vocative singular of πολίτης: πολῖτα. All first-declension nouns with nominatives in -ιδης have such a vocative.

Principal Parts I and III of μανθάνω, μαθήσομαι, ἔμαθον, μεμάθηκα, ——, ——, "learn, understand," resemble those of λαμβάνω. Note, however, that μανθάνω uses the suffix -ησ- to form the future: contrast μαθήσομαι with λήψομαι.

The verb μάχομαι, μαχοῦμαι, ἐμαχεσάμην, ——, μεμάχημαι, ——, "fight," is a deponent verb with a contracted future. It takes a dative of the person(s) against whom one is fighting:

τοῖς πολεμίοις ἐμαχόμεθα.
We were fighting the enemy.

The prefix μετα- indicates either sharing or change. The verb μεταδίδωμι means "give a share of" and takes a dative of indirect object and a genitive of the thing shared: μεταδιδόᾱσι τῆς ἀρχῆς τῷ δήμῳ, "They give a share of the rule to the people." The verb μετανίσταμαι means "stand up and change place, migrate." Note the double prefix: μετα- + ἀνα-.

The noun μηχανή, μηχανῆς, ἡ, "device, machine," can denote, among other contrivances, the crane-like device by which actors were hoisted into and out of the playing area in the fifth-century B.C. Athenian theater, whence the Latin phrase deus ex machinā, "god from the machine," to describe a god hoisted in to halt the errant plot of a work. The verb μηχανάομαι, μηχανήσομαι, ἐμηχανησάμην, ——, μεμηχάνημαι, ——, "contrive," is a denominative verb formed from this noun. Note that it is a contracted deponent verb.

The genitive plural of the noun παῖς, παιδός, ὁ or ἡ, "child," is παίδων instead of the expected παιδῶν. The vocative singular is παῖ by the regular rules (cf. Section 48).

The vocative singular of the noun πούς, ποδός, ὁ, "foot," is πούς. By the regular rules it would have been *πό (<*πόδ).

Distinguish the adjective σαφής, σαφές, "clear, distinct," from the adjective σοφός, σοφή, σοφόν, "wise, skilled."

The noun σύμμαχος, συμμάχου, ὁ, "ally," is formed from the preposition σύν + the root μαχ- (cf. μάχη, μάχομαι).

The noun τεῖχος, τείχους, τό means the "fortification wall" of a town or a city.

A τρόπαιον, τροπαίου, τό, "trophy, victory monument," according to ancient etymology, was set up on the field of battle at the point where the victors forced the defeated enemy to turn and run (cf. the verb τρέπω, "make turn"). It consisted of a representative sample of the defeated enemies' weapons and was sacred and hence inviolable. No victory was complete until the victors had commemorated their victory by setting up a trophy.

The verb φεύγω, φεύξομαι, ἔφυγον, πέφευγα, ——, ——, "flee; be in exile; be a defendant," is a partial deponent; it is deponent only in the future tense. Principal Parts I, II, and IV show the e-grade of the root; Principal Part III shows the zero-grade.

107. PRESENT PARTICIPLE ACTIVE AND SECOND AORIST PARTICIPLE ACTIVE OF THE ATHEMATIC VERBS δίδωμι, τίθημι, AND ἵστημι

The present participle active and second aorist participle active of the athematic verbs δίδωμι, τίθημι, and ἵστημι are presented below, in the nominative/vocative and genitive singular. The declension of these participles is almost identical with that of participles already learned.

The present and aorist participles of these athematic verbs are identical except that the present participle shows reduplication of the stem.

PRESENT PARTICIPLE ACTIVE

	M	F	N
Nom./Voc. S	διδούς	διδοῦσα	διδόν
Gen.	διδόντος	διδούσης	διδόντος
Nom./Voc. S	τιθείς	τιθεῖσα	τιθέν
Gen.	τιθέντος	τιθείσης	τιθέντος
Nom./Voc. S	ἱστάς	ἱστᾶσα	ἱστάν
Gen.	ἱστάντος	ἱστάσης	ἱστάντος

SECOND AORIST PARTICIPLE ACTIVE

	M	F	N
Nom./Voc. S	δούς	δοῦσα	δόν
Gen.	δόντος	δούσης	δόντος
Nom./Voc. S	θείς	θεῖσα	θέν
Gen.	θέντος	θείσης	θέντος
Nom./Voc. S	στάς	στᾶσα	στάν
Gen.	στάντος	στάσης	στάντος

Observations: (1) The masculine nominative/vocative singular of these participles ends in -ς and has an acute accent on the ultima. The masculine and neuter declension stem uses the short vowel grade of the stem + the suffix -ντ- without the thematic vowel. Particular attention must be paid to the feminine declension stem, which has undergone phonetic changes.

(2) The present and second aorist participles active of δίδωμι are declined, EXCEPT in the masculine nominative singular, exactly like the second aorist participle active of thematic verbs (cf. Section 66.6). Compare λιπόντος, διδόντος, δόντος.

(3) The present and second aorist participles active of τίθημι are declined exactly like the aorist participle passive of all verbs (cf. Section 67.4). Compare παιδευθέντος, τιθέντος.

(4) The present and second aorist participles active of ἵστημι are declined like the first aorist participle active (cf. Section 66.5), EXCEPT for the accent. Contrast ἱστάντος, παιδεύσαντος.

(5) Note that the masculine and neuter genitive plural of these participles is identical in form with the third person plural, present or second aorist imperative active (e.g., ἱστάντων, στάντων).

(6) All these participles accent the ultima of the feminine genitive plural: e.g., διδουσῶν, τιθεισῶν, ἱστᾱσῶν.

(7) Masculine and neuter participles with monosyllabic stems do NOT shift the accent to the ultima in the genitive and dative as do other third-declension forms. Contrast δόντος, αἰγός.

(8) The accent of monosyllabic participles, like that of all participles, is persistent and remains the same when these participles are compounded:

ἀποδούς, ἀποδοῦσα, ἀποδόν

108. PRESENT PARTICIPLE MIDDLE/PASSIVE AND SECOND AORIST PARTICIPLE MIDDLE OF ATHEMATIC VERBS

Athematic verbs form the present participle middle/passive and the second aorist participle middle by adding to the short-vowel grade of the present tense stem and the second aorist active and middle tense stem the suffix and endings
-μενος, -μενη, -μενον without the thematic vowel.

These participles are declined exactly like the present participle middle/passive of παιδεύω (cf. Section 67.3).

Remember that the verb ἵστημι does not have a second aorist middle.

PRESENT PARTICIPLE MIDDLE/PASSIVE

	M	F	N
Nom. S	διδόμενος	διδομένη	διδόμενον
Nom. S	τιθέμενος	τιθεμένη	τιθέμενον
Nom. S	ἱστάμενος	ἱσταμένη	ἱστάμενον

SECOND AORIST PARTICIPLE MIDDLE

	M	F	N
Nom. S	δόμενος	δομένη	δόμενον
Nom. S	θέμενος	θεμένη	θέμενον

The aorist participle passive of all verbs is formed from Principal Part VI according to rules already learned.

109. PERFECT PARTICIPLE ACTIVE OF ἵστημι

The perfect participle active of ἵστημι is declined as follows:

	M	F	N
Nom. S	ἑστώς	ἑστῶσα	ἑστός
Gen.	ἑστῶτος	ἑστώσης	ἑστῶτος

Observation: The masculine and neuter belong, as usual, to the third declension (dative plural ἑστῶσι[ν]), the feminine to the first declension (genitive plural ἑστωσῶν).

All participles of δίδωμι, τίθημι, and ἵστημι not covered in the preceding Sections are formed from the other Principal Parts of these verbs according to rules already learned.

110. THE VERB δείκνῡμι, "show"

The verb δείκνῡμι has the following Principal Parts:

δείκνῡμι, δείξω, ἔδειξα, δέδειχα, δέδειγμαι, ἐδείχθην, "show"

This verb is athematic in the present and imperfect. In all other tenses it employs the same endings as παιδεύω. Thus all the athematic forms of δείκνῡμι come from Principal Part I; ἔδειξα is a first aorist like ἐπαίδευσα, δέδειχα is a perfect like πεπαίδευκα.

This verb also differs from δίδωμι, τίθημι, and ἵστημι in that:

(1) In the present subjunctive, the final vowel of the stem does NOT contract with the endings.
(2) The present optative is thematic.

The present tense stem of δείκνῡμι shows the same vowel gradation as the present tense stems of the athematic verbs already encountered (cf. Section 100):

> Long-vowel grade: δεικνῡ-
> Short-vowel grade: δεικνυ-

As usual, the long-vowel grade is used only in the singular of the present and imperfect indicative active.

1. PRESENT INDICATIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE/PASSIVE

To form the present indicative active and middle/passive of δείκνῡμι, add the usual athematic endings to the appropriate grade of the present tense stem (cf. Section 100). The forms are as follows:

		PRESENT INDICATIVE ACTIVE	PRESENT INDICATIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE
S	1	δείκνῡμι	δείκνυμαι
	2	δείκνῡς	δείκνυσαι
	3	δείκνῡσι(ν)	δείκνυται
P	1	δείκνυμεν	δεικνύμεθα
	2	δείκνυτε	δείκνυσθε
	3	δεικνύᾱσι(ν)	δείκνυνται

2. IMPERFECT INDICATIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE/PASSIVE

To form the imperfect indicative active and middle/passive of δείκνῡμι, add the usual athematic endings to the appropriate grade of the augmented present tense stem (cf. Section 100). The forms are as follows:

		IMPERFECT INDICATIVE ACTIVE	IMPERFECT INDICATIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE
S	1	ἐδείκνῡν	ἐδεικνύμην
	2	ἐδείκνῡς	ἐδείκνυσο
	3	ἐδείκνῡ	ἐδείκνυτο
P	1	ἐδείκνυμεν	ἐδεικνύμεθα
	2	ἐδείκνυτε	ἐδείκνυσθε
	3	ἐδείκνυσαν	ἐδείκνυντο

3. PRESENT SUBJUNCTIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE/PASSIVE

In the present subjunctive active and middle/passive δείκνῡμι employs the usual subjunctive endings. But it differs from δίδωμι, τίθημι, and ἵστημι in that the final vowel of the stem does not contract with the endings. Thus these forms are like the corresponding forms of παιδεύω.

		PRESENT SUBJUNCTIVE ACTIVE	PRESENT SUBJUNCTIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE
S	1	δεικνύω	δεικνύωμαι
	2	δεικνύῃς	δεικνύῃ
		etc.	etc.

4. PRESENT OPTATIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE/PASSIVE

Unlike δίδωμι, τίθημι, and ἵστημι, the verb δείκνῡμι uses in the present optative active and middle/passive the same thematic endings as those employed in the corresponding forms of παιδεύω.

		PRESENT OPTATIVE ACTIVE	PRESENT OPTATIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE
S	1	δεικνύοιμι	δεικνυοίμην
	2	δεικνύοις	δεικνύοιο
		etc.	etc.

5. PRESENT IMPERATIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE/PASSIVE

The present imperative of δείκνῡμι follows the pattern of ἵστημι (Section 100).
The second person singular active consists of the long-vowel grade of the stem with no ending added. The other forms add the usual endings to the short-vowel stem.

	PRESENT IMPERATIVE ACTIVE	PRESENT IMPERATIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE
S 2	δείκνῡ	δείκνυσο
3	δεικνύτω	δεικνύσθω
P 2	δείκνυτε	δείκνυσθε
3	δεικνύντων	δεικνύσθων

Observation: The forms of the second person plural, present imperative active and middle/passive are identical with the corresponding indicative forms.

6. PRESENT INFINITIVE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE/PASSIVE

The verb δείκνῡμι forms the present infinitives active and middle/passive in the same way as the athematic verbs already studied (cf. Section 100).

PRESENT INFINITIVE ACTIVE: δεικνύναι
PRESENT INFINITIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE: δείκνυσθαι

7. PRESENT PARTICIPLE ACTIVE AND MIDDLE/PASSIVE

The present participles active and middle/passive of δείκνῡμι are declined as follows:

PRESENT PARTICIPLE ACTIVE

	M	F	N
Nom./Voc. S	δεικνύς	δεικνῦσα	δεικνύν
Gen.	δεικνύντος	δεικνύσης	δεικνύντος

PRESENT PARTICIPLE MIDDLE/PASSIVE

	M	F	N
Nom. S	δεικνύμενος	δεικνυμένη	δεικνύμενον

Observations: (1) As with the other athematic participles, the masculine nominative/vocative singular ends in -ς and has an acute accent; the masculine and neuter declension stem employs the short-vowel grade of the stem ⊤ the suffix -ντ-. Again, the feminine declension stem has undergone phonetic change. The masculine and neuter dative plural is δεικνῦσι(ν) (< *δεικνύντσι[ν]); the feminine genitive plural is δεικνῡσῶν.

(2) The masculine and neuter genitive plural of the present participle active are identical with the third person plural, present imperative active.

111. SUPPLEMENTARY USE OF THE PARTICIPLE

The supplementary participle completes the meaning of a verb. The participle indicates aspect only, not relative time, in the constructions explained below.

1. SUPPLEMENTARY PARTICIPLE WITH VERBS OF EMOTION

Many verbs indicating emotion take a supplementary participle.

One such verb is:

χαίρω, χαιρήσω, ——, κεχάρηκα, ——, ἐχάρην, "take pleasure, enjoy"

χαίρετε τοῦτο ποιοῦντες.
You take pleasure doing this.
You enjoy doing this.

Such participles are best translated not by an English participle, as in the first translation above, but by an English gerund, as in the second translation. Compare the circumstantial participle, which states a separate circumstance.

τῑμᾶσθε τοῦτο ποιοῦντες.
Doing this, you are honored.
Because you do this, you are honored.

In this example the participle and the main verb cannot be combined into a single verbal expression (cf. "you enjoy doing").

2. SUPPLEMENTARY PARTICIPLE WITH VERBS OF BEGINNING, CEASING, AND ENDURING

Many verbs of beginning, ceasing, and enduring take a supplementary participle. The participle is generally in the present tense.

> ἐπαυσάμεθα τοῦτο ποιοῦντες.
> We ceased doing this.

> παύσομεν αὐτοὺς τοῦτο ποιοῦντας.
> We shall stop them (from) doing this.
> We shall stop their doing this.

These participles must be translated by the English gerund, not the English participle.

The verb ἄρχω, which in the middle voice means "begin," can take either a supplementary participle or an infinitive, with a difference in meaning.

> ἀρξόμεθα τοῦτο ποιοῦντες.
> We shall begin by doing this.

> ἀρξόμεθα τοῦτο ποιεῖν.
> We shall begin to do this.

The supplementary participle with this verb states the first of a series of actions (e.g., "We shall begin by doing this, then we shall do that"); the infinitive indicates the beginning of a single action, and is usually in the present tense.

3. SUPPLEMENTARY PARTICIPLE WITH THE VERBS λανθάνω, φθάνω, AND τυγχάνω

Here are the Principal Parts of three verbs whose meaning is usually completed by a supplementary participle:

λανθάνω, λήσω, ἔλαθον, λέληθα, ——, ——, "escape the notice of (+ acc.)" φθάνω, φθήσομαι, ἔφθασα or ἔφθην, ——, ——, ——, "act first; be first (in doing something); anticipate (someone)" τυγχάνω, τεύξομαι, ἔτυχον, τετύχηκα, ——, —, "happen (to); hit the mark; (+ gen.) obtain"

The supplementary participle with τυγχάνω must be rendered by the appropriate English infinitive.

> τυγχάνομεν τοῦτο ποιοῦντες.   (present participle)
> We happen to be doing this.

ἐτύχομεν τοῦτο ποιήσαντες.   (aorist participle)
We happened to do this.

ἐτύχομεν τοῦτο ποιοῦντες.   (present participle)
We happened to be doing this.

English lacks verbs with the exact meaning of λανθάνω and φθάνω. Sentences with these verbs are best translated in two stages: a literal, if awkward, version, and then a more colloquial version. Note especially that the direct object in the Greek will be translated as a possessive or as the object of a preposition in English.

τοὺς φίλους λανθάνομεν τοῦτο ποιοῦντες.
We escape our friends' notice doing this.
We do this secretly from our friends.
We are doing this secretly from our friends.

τοὺς φίλους ἐλάθομεν τοῦτο ποιήσαντες.
We escaped our friends' notice doing this.
We did this secretly from our friends.

τοὺς φίλους φθάνομεν τοῦτο ποιοῦντες.
We anticipate our friends (in) doing this.
We do this before our friends.
We are doing this before our friends.

τοὺς φίλους $\begin{Bmatrix} ἐφθάσαμεν \\ ἔφθημεν \end{Bmatrix}$ τοῦτο ποιήσαντες.

We anticipated our friends (in) doing this.
We "beat" our friends doing this.
We did this before our friends.

The participle usually has the same aspect as the finite verb, but an aorist participle together with a present or imperfect indicative shows prior action:

τυγχάνομεν τοῦτο ποιήσαντες.
We happen to have done this.

VOCABULARY NOTES

The adjective ἀμαθής, ἀμαθές, "ignorant, stupid," is formed from the root μαθ- (cf. μανθάνω) + alpha privative. From the stem of this adjective is formed the abstract noun ἀμαθίᾱ, ἀμαθίᾱς, ἡ, "ignorance, stupidity." Cf. the agent noun μαθητής, μαθητοῦ, ὁ, "student, pupil" (with which compare, e.g., ποιητής).

The verb δείκνῡμι, δείξω, ἔδειξα, δέδειχα, δέδειγμαι, ἐδείχθην, "show," has the root δεικ- and is athematic only in the present indicative, imperative, infinitive, and participle, and the imperfect indicative. The present tense stem consists of the root δεικ- + the suffix -νῡ-/-νυ- and adds the appropriate athematic or thematic endings (cf. Section 110). Several other verbs are formed similarly and show in Principal Part I the suffix + ending -νῡμι.

The compound verb ἐπιδείκνυμαι means "to show off (something of one's own)," e.g., rhetorical skill. The verbal noun ἐπίδειξις, ἐπιδείξεως, ἡ, "display, demonstration," can take an objective genitive of the thing displayed.

The verb ἐπανίσταμαι, ἐπαναστήσομαι, ἐπανέστην, ἐπανέστηκα, ——, ——, "rise in insurrection (against)," takes a dative of the persons against whom one rises. Note that this verb is a double compound: ἐπι- + ἀνα- + ἵσταμαι. The past indicative augment follows both prefixes: compare ἐπανέστην (first person singular, root aorist indicative active) with ἐπαναστῶ (first person singular, root aorist subjunctive active). This verb uses intransitive forms of ἵστημι: present and imperfect middle, future middle, second aorist active, perfect and pluperfect active.

The adjective ἕτερος, ἑτέρᾱ, ἕτερον, "the other (of two)," refers in the singular to an individual contrasted with another individual. In the plural, it refers to one of two contrasted groups. This adjective marks, more strongly than the adjective ἄλλος, ἄλλη, ἄλλο, the fact that one person or thing (or group) belongs to a different class from another. The adjective can be repeated and refer in turn to each of the contrasted persons or groups.

Δημοσθένης μὲν ταῦτα ποιεῖ, ὁ δ' ἕτερος τάδε.
Demosthenes does these (those) things, but the other man does the following things.

ὁ μὲν ἕτερος ταῦτα ποιεῖ, ὁ δ' ἕτερος τάδε.
The one man does these (those) things, but the other man does the following things.

οἱ μὲν ἕτεροι ταῦτα ποιοῦσιν, οἱ δ' ἕτεροι τάδε.
One group does these (those) things, but the other group does the following things.

ἕτερον τόδε ἢ οὔ;
Is this another (a different, a separate) thing or not?

The adjective κοινός, κοινή, κοινόν, "common," refers to things shared. The phrase τὰ κοινά often means "public affairs," and τὸ κοινόν can mean "the state" (i.e., the city). Koine (ἡ κοινὴ διάλεκτος) is a "common" dialect of Greek which developed during the Hellenistic age.

The adjective μέσος, μέση, μέσον, "middle (of)," has two distinct meanings: in the attributive position it means "middle"; when it precedes the article, it means "(the) middle of (the noun which follows)."

ἐν τῇ μέσῃ ἀγορᾷ
in the middle market place (i.e., not the one to the left or the right)

ἐν μέσῃ τῇ ἀγορᾷ
in the middle of the market place

The adjective νέος, νέᾱ, νέον, "new, young," was originally νέϝος.* Compare the stem νεϝ-* with the English cognate new.

The verbal noun στάσις, στάσεως, ἡ, "civil strife, faction," means literally a "standing"; it is formed from the unreduplicated short-vowel grade of the stem of ἵστημι: στα-.

The verb τυγχάνω, τεύξομαι, ἔτυχον, τετύχηκα, ——, ——, "happen (to); hit the mark; (+ gen.) obtain," is deponent in the future tense only. Principal Parts III and IV show the zero-grade of the root: τυχ-. Principal Part I has the zero-grade with a nasal infix and the suffix -αν-: τυγχαν-. Principal Part II has the e-grade: τευξ- (<τευχσ-). Cf. μανθάνω, but note the different formation of its future μαθήσομαι. The zero-grade of this root appears also in the noun τύχη. When this verb means "obtain" it takes an object in the genitive case: εἰρήνης ἐτύχομεν, "We obtained peace."

Note the difference in meaning between ὑπομένω, "await; stand firm; endure," and παραμένω, "stand fast; stay behind."

The verb φθάνω, φθήσομαι, ἔφθασα or ἔφθην, ——, ——, ——, "act first; be first (in doing something); anticipate (someone)," is deponent in the future tense only. There is no difference in meaning between the first aorist ἔφθασα and the root aorist ἔφθην, which is conjugated just like ἔστην (from ἵστημι). E.g.:

The verb χαίρω, χαιρήσω, ——, κεχάρηκα, ——, ἐχάρην, "rejoice (in), take pleasure (in), enjoy (+ dat.)," is a passive partial depondent: it has an aorist passive, with an active meaning, rather than an aorist active. The present was originally *χάριω: cf. χάρις. The iota "jumped over" the rho. The resulting stem χαιρ- was used, with a suffix, to form the future.

112. THE INTERROGATIVE PRONOUN/ADJECTIVE τίς, τί

As a pronoun, the interrogative τίς, τί means "who?, what?"

As an adjective, the interrogative τίς, τί means "which?, what?"

	M/F	N
Nom. S	τίς	τί
Gen.	τίνος/τοῦ	τίνος/τοῦ
Dat.	τίνι/τῷ	τίνι/τῷ
Acc.	τίνα	τί
Nom. P	τίνες	τίνα
Gen.	τίνων	τίνων
Dat.	τίσι(ν)	τίσι(ν)
Acc.	τίνας	τίνα

Observations: (1) The accent on the interrogative is always on the first syllable. Although the word has a monosyllabic stem, the accent does not shift to the ultima in the genitive and the dative, singular and plural, as it does, e.g., in αἴξ, αἰγός.

(2) Even when followed directly by another word, in violation of the rules for accent the acute accent on τίς and τί is NEVER changed to a grave.

(3) Note the alternative forms in the genitive and dative singular with the circumflex accent.

(4) Note that τίνα can be either the masculine/feminine accusative singular "whom?" or the neuter plural nominative or accusative "what (things)?"

435

Examples: τίνας ἐπέμψατε;
           Whom did you send?

           τίνας στρατιώτᾱς ἐπέμψατε;
           Which/What soldiers did you send?

           τίνας γυναῖκας ἐπέμψατε;
           Which/What women did you send?

           τίνα ἐπέμψατε;
           Whom did you send?
           What (things) did you send?

           τίς τοὺς ἀγγέλους ἔπεμψεν;
           Who sent the messengers?

           τί ἔπεμψας;
           What did you send?

113. THE INDEFINITE PRONOUN/ADJECTIVE τις, τι

As a pronoun, the indefinite τις, τι means "someone, anyone, something, anything."

As an adjective, the indefinite τις, τι means "some, any."

	M/F	N
Nom. S	τις	τι
Gen.	τινός/του	τινός/του
Dat.	τινί/τῳ	τινί/τῳ
Acc.	τινά	τι
Nom. P	τινές	τινά
Gen.	τινῶν	τινῶν
Dat.	τισί(ν)	τισί(ν)
Acc.	τινάς	τινά

Observations: (1) The indefinite pronoun/adjective differs from the interrogative pronoun/adjective in accent only and is an enclitic. For a summary of enclitics and examples of the use of the indefinite pronoun/adjective, see Section 114.

(2) Note the alternative forms in the genitive and dative singular.

(3) Note that the form τινά can be either the masculine/feminine accusative singular or the neuter nominative or accusative plural.

(4) Note that the genitive plural, when accented, takes a circumflex accent on the ultima; cf. Section 114.

114. ENCLITICS SUMMARIZED

Enclitics are words which are closely attached in pronunciation to the word they follow, and which usually affect the accent of the preceding word. In addition to the indefinite pronoun/adjective τις, τι, there are a number of other words which are enclitic. Seven words which are enclitic are:

γε: emphasizes or limits the preceding word; "at any rate"

-περ: adds force to the word it follows ποτέ: "at some time, ever"

που: qualifies an assertion, "I suppose"; "somewhere"

πως: "in any way, in some way"

τε: "and" (often used together with καί)

τοι: "let me tell you, you know"

See the Vocabulary Notes of the various units for the uses of these enclitics.

Observe how an enclitic affects the accent of the preceding word:

(1) A word ending with an acute accent (-a-p-ú) followed by an enclitic (e, e-é, e-ê) does NOT change its acute accent to a grave accent; the enclitic does not take any accent:

$$-a\text{-}p\text{-}ú + e \qquad ἀγαθός \; τις$$
some good man

$$-a\text{-}p\text{-}ú + e\text{-}e \qquad ἀδελφοί \; τινες$$ some brothers

(2) A monosyllabic enclitic following a word with an acute on the penult has no accent:

$$-a\text{-}ṕ\text{-}u + e \qquad λόγῳ \; τε \; καὶ \; ἔργῳ$$
by word and deed

A disyllabic enclitic following a word with an acute on the penult takes an accent on its final syllable:

$$-a\text{-}ṕ\text{-}u + e\text{-}é \qquad ἀνδράσι \; τισί(ν)$$ to some men

$$-a\text{-}ṕ\text{-}u + e\text{-}ê \qquad ἀνθρώπων \; τινῶν$$
of some men

(3) A word with an acute accent on the antepenult (-á-p-u) receives an additional accent from the enclitic; the enclitic does not take any accent:

    -á-p-ú + e   ἄνθρωποί τε καὶ θεοί
                            men and gods

    -á-p-ú + e-e   ἄνθρωποί τινες
                            some men

(4) A word ending in a circumflex keeps its circumflex; the enclitic has no accent:

    -a-p-û + e   αἱ τῑμαὶ τῶν ἀγαθῶν τε καὶ σοφῶν
                            the honors of the good and wise

    -a-p-û + e-e   αἱ τῑμαὶ σοφῶν τινων
                            the honors of some wise men

(5) A word with a circumflex accent on the penult takes an additional accent on the final syllable; the enclitic has no accent:

    -a-p̃-ú + e   ἐκεῖνά τε καὶ ταῦτα
                            those things and these things

    -a-p̃-ú + e-e   δῶρά τινα
                            some presents

(6) A proclitic (εἰς, ἐκ/ἐξ, ἐν, εἰ, ὡς, οὐ/οὐκ/οὐχ, and the forms of the article ὁ, ἡ, οἱ, and αἱ) takes an acute accent when followed by an enclitic; the enclitic has no accent:

        εἴ τις   οἵ γ' ἄνθρωποι
        if anyone   the men/the men, at least

Thus, if the accent is as far back on the word as it can go (-á-p-u or -a-p̃-u), the word, when followed by an enclitic, takes an additional acute accent on the final syllable (e.g. -á-p-ú + e, -a-p̃-ú + e). There is no accent on the enclitic.

If the accent is on the final syllable (-a-p-û or -a-p-ú), the accent on the word remains unchanged; there is no accent on the enclitic (-a-p-ú + e, -a-p-û + e).

Only in the case of a word with an acute accent on the penult followed by a disyllabic enclitic does the enclitic have an accent, an acute on the final syllable of the word (except for τινῶν, the genitive plural of τις, τι).

In a series of enclitics, each takes an acute accent from the following enclitic; the final enclitic of such a series has no accent:

              ἐάν ποτέ τίς τί τινι διδῷ
              if anyone ever gives anything to anyone

Some disyllabic enclitics can be placed at the beginning of a clause or sentence. When this occurs, they take an acute accent on the ultima; this accent becomes a grave accent if no pause follows:

> τινὲς μὲν χρῡσὸν διδόᾱσιν, τινὲς δ' οὔ.
> Some give gold, others do not.

115. THE VERB εἰμί, "be"

εἰμί, ἔσομαι,　　·, ——, ——, ——,　"be"

This verb is found only in the present system active and as a middle deponent in the future. The present system has an athematic conjugation with a number of irregularities. The future has a regular thematic conjugation (ἔσομαι, ἔσῃ/ ἔσει, etc.) except for the third person singular, which is ἔσται.

	PRESENT IND. ACTIVE	IMPERF. IND. ACTIVE	PRESENT SUBJ. ACTIVE	PRESENT OPT. ACTIVE	PRESENT IMPER. ACTIVE
S 1	εἰμί	ἦ / ἦν	ὦ	εἴην
2	εἶ	ἦσθα	ᾖς	εἴης	ἴσθι
3	ἐστί(ν)	ἦν	ᾖ	εἴη	ἔστω
P 1	ἐσμέν	ἦμεν	ὦμεν	εἶμεν/εἴημεν
2	ἐστέ	ἦτε	ἦτε	εἶτε/εἴητε	ἔστε
3	εἰσί(ν)	ἦσαν	ὦσι(ν)	εἶεν/εἴησαν	ἔστων/ὄντων

PRESENT INFINITIVE ACTIVE:　　εἶναι

PRESENT PARTICIPLE ACTIVE:

	M	F	N
Nom. S	ὤν	οὖσα	ὄν
Gen.	ὄντος	οὔσης	ὄντος

Observations: (1) Unlike the athematic verbs seen thus far, the verb εἰμί does not have a long-vowel and a short-vowel grade of the stem. Instead, the forms are built on the e-grade stem ἐσ- or the zero-grade stem σ-.

(2) Note the absence of the final -ς in the second person singular of the present indicative active εἶ; contrast this with τίθης, δίδως, etc.

(3) Note that the third person singular indicative active ending is -τι and not the -σι of, e.g., δίδωσι.

(4) Particular care must be taken in memorizing the third person plural of the present indicative active and all of the imperfect.

(5) In the imperative the second person singular is irregular; the third person plural form ἔστων omits the -ν- of the ending -ντων; the alternative third person plural form ὄντων is identical with the masculine and neuter genitive plural of the present participle active.

The disyllabic forms of the present indicative active of εἰμί (all forms except the second person singular εἶ) are enclitic and follow the rules for accent given above.

> We are good.
>
> εὐδαίμονές ἐστε.
> You are happy.

At the beginning of a sentence ἔστι(ν) is not an enclitic: it has an acute accent on the penult and can mean "there is" or "it is possible."

> ἔστι σοφός τις ἐν τῇ πόλει.
> There is some wise man in the city.
>
> ἔστιν ἀπελθεῖν.
> It is possible to go away.

116. DATIVE OF THE POSSESSOR

With the verb εἰμί and similar verbs (e.g., γίγνομαι), ownership is shown by the dative of the possessor.

ἐκείνῳ τῷ ἀνδρί ἐστι μῑκρὰ οἰκίᾱ.
To that man there is a small house.
That man has a small house.

Note the difference between the genitive and the dative when showing possession. The dative stresses the existence of the object and answers the question, "What does that man have?" The genitive in a similar sentence puts stress on the owner and answers the question, "Who has that thing?"

ἐκείνου τοῦ ἀνδρὸς μῑκρά ἐστιν ἡ οἰκίᾱ.
Of that man small is the house.
That man's house is small.

Since the Greek verb form itself contains the subject, the nominative of the personal pronouns is used only for emphasis or contrast.

ἐγὼ ἐδίδαξα τὸν ἀδελφόν.
I taught my brother.
It was I who taught my brother.

Compare the same sentence without the pronoun:

ἐδίδαξα τὸν ἀδελφόν.
I taught my brother.

Personal pronouns can also be used in nominal sentences:

ἐγὼ μὲν ἀγαθός, σὺ δὲ κακός.
I am good; you are bad.

When the enclitic particle γε is used with the nominative and dative singular of ἐγώ, the two words are written together as one; the accent is recessive: ἔγωγε, ἔμοιγε.

119. REFLEXIVE PRONOUNS

A pronoun in a case other than the nominative which refers back to the subject of its own clause is called a reflexive pronoun:   "We love ourselves." "Ourselves" is the reflexive pronoun and refers back to the subject of the sentence, "we." (Be sure to distinguish the English reflexive "-self" from the intensive "-self": "We ourselves love them." Remember that Greek uses αὐτός in the predicate position or by itself in the nominative case as the intensive.)

	M	F
Gen. P	ἡμῶν αὐτῶν	ἡμῶν αὐτῶν
Dat.	ἡμῖν αὐτοῖς	ἡμῖν αὐταῖς
Acc.	ἡμᾶς αὐτούς	ἡμᾶς αὐτάς

117. ADVERBIAL ACCUSATIVE

An accusative which limits the meaning of a verb and functions as an adverb is called an adverbial accusative.

τί ταῦτα ἐποίησας;
For what did you do these things?
Why did you do these things?

τίνα τρόπον τοῦτο ἐποίησας; τόνδε τὸν τρόπον τοῦτο ἐποίησα.
In what way did you do this?   I did this in the following way.

τέλος ἀπῆλθον.
In the end they went away.
They finally went away.

118. PERSONAL PRONOUNS

Attic Greek uses the first-person pronouns ἐγώ ("I") and ἡμεῖς ("we"), and the second-person pronouns σύ ("you" singular) and ὑμεῖς ("you" plural).   In the third person ("he," "she," "it," "they"), Attic Greek uses the demonstrative pronouns in the nominative case (οὗτος, ὅδε, ἐκεῖνος) and forms of αὐτός in cases other than the nominative.

	I	you
Nom. S	ἐγώ	σύ
Gen.	ἐμοῦ/μου	σοῦ/σου

	we	you
Nom. P	ἡμεῖς	ὑμεῖς
Gen.	ἡμῶν	ὑμῶν
Dat.	ἡμῖν	ὑμῖν
Acc.	ἡμᾶς	ὑμᾶς

Observations: (1) In the singular, the unaccented forms are alternative enclitic forms and are less emphatic.

(2) Note that Greek, unlike English, distinguishes between singular and plural forms of the second person pronoun. Unlike many modern languages, Greek does NOT use a polite plural form for the singular "you."

Gen. P	σφῶν αὐτῶν	σφῶν αὐτῶν
Dat.	σφίσιν αὐτοῖς	σφίσιν αὐταῖς
Acc.	σφᾶς αὐτούς	σφᾶς αὐτάς

Observations: (1) Since the reflexive pronoun must refer back to the subject of the sentence, it never appears in the nominative case.

(2) The reflexive pronoun uses αὐτός, αὐτή, αὐτό either as part of a compound form (e.g., ἐμαυτοῦ) in which it alone is declined or together with the personal pronoun (e.g., ἡμῶν αὐτῶν) where both pronouns are declined.

(3) Note that only the third-person reflexive pronoun has a neuter.

(4) In the plural, the third-person reflexives, both masculine and feminine, have alternative forms, ἑαυτῶν, etc. and σφῶν αὐτῶν, etc.

(5) All forms of σεαυτοῦ, σεαυτῆς and ἑαυτοῦ, ἑαυτῆς, ἑαυτοῦ can contract the first two vowels to give σαυτοῦ, σαυτῆς, etc.
and αὑτοῦ, αὑτῆς, αὑτοῦ, etc. Distinguish carefully between the contracted third person reflexive pronoun forms and the corresponding forms of αὐτός, αὐτή, αὐτό; they differ only in breathing: e.g., αὑτόν "himself"; αὐτόν "him."

120. POSSESSION WITH PERSONAL AND REFLEXIVE PRONOUNS

To show possession in the first and second persons, either the possessive adjective or the genitive of the personal pronoun (enclitic in the singular) can be used.
The possessive adjectives are:

ἐμός, ἐμή, ἐμόν,   "my, mine"
ἡμέτερος, ἡμετέρᾱ, ἡμέτερον,   "our, ours" σός, σή, σόν,   "your, yours (addressing one person)" ῡ̔μέτερος, ῡ̔μετέρᾱ, ῡ̔μέτερον,   "your, yours (addressing more than one person)"

These possessive adjectives are the equivalent of the genitive of the personal pronouns. The possessive adjective is used in the attributive position, the genitive of the personal pronoun in the predicate position:

ὁ ἐμὸς φίλος	ὁ φίλος μου	my friend
οἱ ἐμοὶ φίλοι	οἱ φίλοι μου	my friends
ὁ ἡμέτερος φίλος	ὁ φίλος ἡμῶν	our friend
οἱ ἡμέτεροι φίλοι	οἱ φίλοι ἡμῶν	our friends
ὁ σὸς ἀδελφός	ὁ ἀδελφός σου	your brother (addressing one person)
οἱ σοὶ ἀδελφοί	οἱ ἀδελφοί σου	your brothers (addressing one person)
ὁ ῡ̔μέτερος ἀδελφός	ὁ ἀδελφὸς ῡ̔μῶν	your brother (addressing more than one)
οἱ ῡ̔μέτεροι ἀδελφοί	οἱ ἀδελφοὶ ῡ̔μῶν	your brothers (addressing more than one)

Thus, to express the idea "my friend," Greek can use either the adjective (ὁ ἐμὸς φίλος) or the genitive of the personal pronoun (ὁ φίλος μου, literally,
"the friend of me").

To show possession in the third person, the genitive of a demonstrative pronoun in the attributive position or the genitive of αὐτός, αὐτή, αὐτό in the predicate position is used:

ὁ τούτου φίλος	ὁ φίλος αὐτοῦ	his friend
ὁ ταύτης φίλος	ὁ φίλος αὐτῆς	her friend
οἱ τούτου φίλοι	οἱ φίλοι αὐτοῦ	his friends
οἱ ταύτης φίλοι	οἱ φίλοι αὐτῆς	her friends
ὁ τούτων φίλος	ὁ φίλος αὐτῶν	their friend
οἱ τούτων φίλοι	οἱ φίλοι αὐτῶν	their friends

To show reflexive possession in the singular, the genitive of the reflexive pronoun is used in the attributive position:

ἔπεμψα τὸν ἐμαυτοῦ ἀδελφόν.
I sent my (own) brother.

ἔπεμψας τὸν σεαυτοῦ ἀδελφόν.
You sent your (own) brother.

ἔπεμψε τὸν ἑαυτοῦ ἀδελφόν.
He sent his (own) brother.

Less commonly, the possessive adjectives ἐμός and σός are used:

ἔπεμψα τὸν ἐμὸν ἀδελφόν.
I sent my brother.

To show reflexive possession in the plural, in the first and second persons the adjectives ἡμέτερος, ἡμετέρᾱ, ἡμέτερον and ὑμέτερος, ὑμετέρᾱ, ὑμέτερον can be used by themselves, but they are usually strengthened by αὐτῶν, which agrees with the genitive idea in the possessive adjective. To show reflexive possession in the third person plural, ἑαυτῶν is used in the attributive position, or the reflexive possessive adjective σφέτερος, σφετέρᾱ, σφέτερον, strengthened by αὐτῶν, can be used:

We sent our (own) brother.

You sent your (own) brother.

They sent their (own) brother.

VOCABULARY NOTES

In the verb αἱρέω, αἱρήσω, εἷλον, ᾕρηκα, ᾕρημαι, ᾑρέθην, "take, capture; (mid.) choose," observe that in the perfect active, perfect middle, and aorist passive, the iota of the diphthong αἱ- becomes a subscript. As with ᾖρχα and ᾖργμαι from ἄρχω, the ᾖ- of the perfect stem remains unchanged throughout the perfect and the pluperfect. The unaugmented form of the aorist passive tense stem is αἱρεθ-. Note also the short vowel before the -θ- of the aorist passive tense stem; contrast this with the -η- of ἐποιήθην, ἐνῑκήθην. The second aorist εἷλον was borrowed from another root; the unaugmented second aorist active and middle tense stem is ἑλ-.

In the active αἱρέω means "take, capture" and in the middle "choose." The passive means "be chosen" NOT "be captured": i.e., it is the passive of the middle and not of the active. For the passive "I am captured" Attic Greek uses the passive of λαμβάνω or another verb: ἁλίσκομαι, ἁλώσομαι, ἑάλων or ἥλων, ἑάλωκα or ἥλωκα, —, ——, "be captured."

The verb αἰσθάνομαι, αἰσθήσομαι, ἠσθόμην, ——, ἤσθημαι, ——, "perceive," is a deponent with a second aorist middle. Note the iota subscript in Principal Parts III and V.

For the conjugation of εἰμί, ἔσομαι, ——, ——, ——, ——, "be," see Section 115. The neuter singular dative of the present participle is employed in the idiomatic phrase τῷ ὄντι, "really, truly" (literally "with respect to what is, with respect to reality").

The impersonal verb (one with no personal subject) ἔξεστι(ν), ἐξέσται, ——, , ——, ——, "it is possible," takes either a dative and an infinitive or an accusative and an infinitive. When used impersonally, ἔστι(ν) can take the same constructions. Note the accent on the penult of the future: ἐξέσται (< * ἐξέσεται).

> ἐξῆν τῷ Σωκράτει διδάσκειν τοὺς νεανίας.
> ἐξῆν τὸν Σωκράτη διδάσκειν τοὺς νεανίας.
> It was possible for Sokrates to teach the young men.

The verb ἕπομαι, ἕψομαι, ἑσπόμην, ——, ——, ——, "follow," governs the dative case. The root of the word was *sekʷ-. The loss of the initial s accounts for the rough breathing in the first two principal parts. The Indo-European labiovelar (kʷ) became a -π- in this word in Greek. The augmented present tense stem is εἰπ- (e.g., εἰπόμην, εἰπον). Principal Part III shows a past indicative augment with a rough breathing on the analogy of the first two principal parts, the zero-grade of the stem, and the ending -ομην. The unaugmented aorist active and middle tense stem is σπ-, e.g., σποῦ τούτῳ, "follow that man."

The enclitic particle -περ has been seen in the adverb καίπερ. It is often added to forms of the relative pronoun:

> ὁ Σωκράτης ὅσπερ τὴν πόλιν ἀγαθὰ ἀεὶ ἔπραττεν ὑπὸ τῶν κακῶν πολιτῶν ἐβλάβη.
> Sokrates, just the one who was always doing good things to the city, was harmed by the bad citizens.

The adjectives ποῖος, ποία, ποῖον, "of what kind?," τοιοῦτος, τοιαύτη, τοιοῦτο/τοιοῦτον, "of this/that sort, such (as this)," and οἷος, οἵα, οἷον, "such as, of the sort which," are a set of correlative adjectives. In such a series, the word beginning with π- is interrogative, the word beginning with τ- is demonstrative, and the word beginning with the rough breathing is either a relative (introducing a relative clause) or an exclamatory word.

> ποῖός ἐστιν ὁ Σωκράτης;
> What kind of man is Sokrates?

> τοιοῦτός ἐστιν ὁ Σωκράτης οἷον πάντες τīμῶσιν.
> Sokrates is that sort of man, the sort which all men honor.
> Sokrates is the sort of man whom all men honor.

> οἷός ἐστιν ὁ Σωκράτης.
> What sort of man Sokrates is!

The phrase οἷός τ᾽ εἰμί is an idiom meaning "be able"; it governs a complementary infinitive:

οὐχ οἷοί τ᾽ ἐσμὲν νῑκᾶν.
We are not able to win.

Note the accent on the enclitic forms of the verb εἰμί in this idiom: it follows the general rule that WHEN AN ENCLITIC FOLLOWS AN ELIDED SYLLABLE (OF EITHER A NON-ENCLITIC OR AN ENCLITIC WORD), IT RECEIVES AN ACCENT (cf. the Appendix, p. 613).

Note that the verb ὁράω, ὄψομαι, εἶδον, ἑόρᾱκα or ἑώρᾱκα, ἑώρᾱμαι or ὦμμαι, ὤφθην, "see," uses several different roots. The imperfect is ἑώρων, ἑώρᾱς, etc., with a double augment. The root of the second aorist was *ϝιδ-, *ἐϝιδ- in its augmented form. The loss of the intervocalic digamma accounts for the initial diphthong in εἶδον; the aorist subjunctive is ἴδω, ἴδῃς, etc. The second person singular, aorist imperative active is accented on the ultima: ἰδέ. Cf. λαβέ, ἐλθέ. Remember that in compounds these imperatives have a recessive accent. The unaugmented aorist passive tense stem is ὀφθ-.

Note the acute accent which distinguishes the interrogative τίς, τί from the enclitic indefinite τις, τι:

τίς ἀνὴρ τοῦτο ἐποίησεν;
What man did this?

ἀνὴρ τις τοῦτο ἐποίησεν.
Some man did this.

In τοιοῦτος, τοιαύτη, τοιοῦτο/τοιοῦτον note the alternative forms in the neuter nominative/vocative/accusative singular: τοιοῦτο and τοιοῦτον. The word is declined like οὗτος, αὕτη, τοῦτο, with the neuter nominative/vocative/accusative plural τοιαῦτα, and the genitive plural of all three genders τοιούτων.

The verb φέρω, οἴσω, ἤνεγκα or ἤνεγκον, ἐνήνοχα, ἐνήνεγμαι, ἠνέχθην, "bring, carry, bear; (mid.) win," uses three different roots. In the aorist there are both first and second aorist forms with no difference in meaning; the first aorist forms are much more common in prose in the indicative than are the second aorist forms. In the optative, both ἐνέγκαιμι, etc., and ἐνέγκοιμι, etc., are found. The infinitive is ἐνεγκεῖν and the participle is usually ἐνεγκών.

In the compound διαφέρω, the prefix can have its usual spatial meaning of "through."

διαφέρομεν τοὺς λίθους διὰ τοῦ πεδίου.
We carry the rocks through the plain.

The word can also mean "be different (from), be better (than), excel," and the person from whom one differs or than who one is better is put in the genitive case (genitive of comparison).

The compound συμφέρω is used impersonally (in the third person singular) to mean "it is expedient"; this verb can govern an infinitive. The verb can also be used personally to mean "bring things together, confer a benefit."

121. THE VERB φημί, "say, affirm, assert"

The verb φημί is athematic in the present and imperfect tenses:

φημί, φήσω, ἔφησα, ——, ——, ——, "say, affirm, assert"

This verb has only an active voice. It is conjugated exactly like ἵστημι (Section 100) in the present and imperfect, except that:

(1) In the present indicative active all forms except the second person singular are enclitic (cf. εἰμί, Section 115).

(2) In the present and imperfect indicative active, and in the present imperative active, the second person singular is different.

The present tense stem shows the usual vowel gradation:

Long-vowel grade: φη-
Short-vowel grade: φα-

The athematic forms of this verb are as follows.

	PRESENT IND. ACTIVE	IMPERFECT IND. ACTIVE	PRESENT SUBJ. ACTIVE	PRESENT OPT. ACTIVE	PRESENT IMPER. ACTIVE
S 1	φημί	ἔφην	φῶ	φαίην
2	φῄς	ἔφησθα/ἔφης	φῇς	φαίης	φάθι
3	φησί(ν)	ἔφη	φῇ	φαίη	φάτω
P 1	φαμέν	ἔφαμεν	φῶμεν	φαῖμεν/φαίημεν
2	φατέ	ἔφατε	φῆτε	φαῖτε/φαίητε	φάτε
3	φᾱσί(ν)	ἔφασαν	φῶσι(ν)	φαῖεν/φαίησαν	φάντων

461

PRESENT INFINITIVE ACTIVE: φάναι

PRESENT PARTICIPLE ACTIVE:

	M	F	N
Nom./Voc. S	φάς	φᾶσα	φάν
Gen.	φάντος	φάσης	φάντος

Observations: (1) Note the iota subscript in the second person singular, present indicative active.

(2) In the third person plural, present indicative active the ending contracts with the stem. Cf. ἱστᾶσι(ν).

(3) The ending -σθα of the second person singular, imperfect indicative active appears also in the form ἦσθα, from εἰμί.

(4) The subjunctive employs a stem φε- which contracts with the endings (cf. the stem ἱστε- in the present subjunctive active of ἵστημι).

(5) The second person plural, present indicative and imperative active are identical except for their accent.

(6) The participle is declined exactly like ἱστάς, ἱστᾶσα, ἱστάν. The third person plural, present imperative active is identical with the masculine and neuter genitive plural of the present participle active.

(7) In Attic prose, instead of the participle φάς, φᾶσα, φάν, the participle of the related inchoative verb φάσκω, —, ——, ——, ——, ——, "say," is used.

122. THE VERB γιγνώσκω, "perceive, recognize, know"

The verb γιγνώσκω has an athematic second aorist active:

γιγνώσκω, γνώσομαι, ἔγνων, ἔγνωκα, ἔγνωσμαι, ἐγνώσθην, "perceive, recognize, know"

This verb does not form an aorist middle.

The second aorist active tense stem shows vowel gradation:

Long-vowel grade: γνω-
Short-vowel grade: γνο-

Like the athematic second aorist ἔστην (Section 102), ἔγνων is a root aorist: the long-vowel grade appears throughout the indicative and in the imperative and infinitive; the short-vowel grade in the subjunctive and optative, and in the masculine/neuter participial stem.

The usual endings are employed. The subjunctive, optative, and participle are exactly like the equivalent second aorist forms of δίδωμι.

		AORIST IND.. ACTIVE	AORIST SUBJ. ACTIVE	AORIST OPT. ACTIVE	AORIST IMPER. ACTIVE
S	1	ἔγνων	γνῶ	γνοίην
	2	ἔγνως	γνῷς	γνοίης	γνῶθι
	3	ἔγνω	γνῷ	γνοίη	γνώτω
P	1	ἔγνωμεν	γνῶμεν	γνοῖμεν/γνοίημεν
	2	ἔγνωτε	γνῶτε	γνοῖτε/γνοίητε	γνῶτε
	3	ἔγνωσαν	γνῶσι(ν)	γνοῖεν/γνοίησαν	γνόντων

AORIST INFINITIVE ACTIVE: γνῶναι

AORIST PARTICIPLE ACTIVE:

	M	F	N
Nom./Voc. S	γνούς	γνοῦσα	γνόν
Gen.	γνόντος	γνούσης	γνόντος

Observations: (1) Compare ἔγνων with ἔστην and γνῶναι with στῆναι.

(2) Compare γνῶ, γνῷς with δῶ, δῷς; γνοίην with δοίην; and γνούς; γνοῦσα, γνόν with δούς, δοῦσα, δόν.

(3) The third person plural, aorist imperative active is identical with the masculine and neuter genitive plural of the aorist participle active. Note the shortening of the vowel of the stem before the ending.

123. FUTURE OPTATIVE

The future optative (one of whose functions is to replace a future indicative in one type of indirect statement; see Section 125) is formed as follows.

The future optative active adds to the future active and middle tense stem the endings of the present optative active of thematic verbs. The future optative middle adds to this stem the endings of the present optative middle/passive of thematic verbs.

The future optative passive adds to the future passive tense stem the endings of the present optative middle/passive of thematic verbs.

		FUTURE OPTATIVE ACTIVE	FUTURE OPTATIVE MIDDLE	FUTURE OPTATIVE PASSIVE
S	1	παιδεύσοιμι	παιδευσοίμην	παιδευθησοίμην
	2	παιδεύσοις	παιδεύσοιο	παιδευθήσοιο
	3	παιδεύσοι	παιδεύσοιτο	παιδευθήσοιτο
P	1	παιδεύσοιμεν	παιδευσοίμεθα	παιδευθησοίμεθα
	2	παιδεύσοιτε	παιδεύσοισθε	παιδευθήσοισθε
	3	παιδεύσοιεν	παιδεύσοιντο	παιδευθήσοιντο

Verbs whose future active and middle tense stem ends in ε or α form the future optative active in the same way as the present optative active of ποιέω and τῑμάω. Thus, from ἀγγέλλω: ἀγγελοῖμι, ἀγγελοῖς, etc., or ἀγγελοίην, ἀγγελοίης, etc. The alternative endings are more common in the plural. See the Appendix, p. 656.

The future optative middle of these verbs is formed like the present optative middle/passive of ποιέω or τῑμάω. Thus, from ἀγγέλλω: ἀγγελοίμην, ἀγγελοῖο, etc.

Remember that the future optative passive of all verbs is formed separately, from Principal Part VI.

124. FUTURE INFINITIVE

The future infinitive (one of whose functions is to replace a future indicative in one type of indirect statement; cf. Section 125) is formed as follows.

The future infinitive active adds to the future active and middle tense stem the ending -ειν; the future infinitive middle adds to this stem the ending -εσθαι. The future infinitive passive adds to the future passive tense stem the ending -εσθαι.

FUTURE INFINITIVE ACTIVE	FUTURE INFINITIVE MIDDLE	FUTURE INFINITIVE PASSIVE
παιδεύσειν	παιδεύσεσθαι	παιδευθήσεσθαι

Verbs whose future active and middle tense stem ends in ε or α have a future infinitive active and middle formed like the present infinitive active and middle/passive of ποιέω and τῑμάω.

Thus the future infinitive active of ἀγγέλλω, for example, is ἀγγελεῖν, and the future infinitive middle is ἀγγελεῖσθαι.

Remember that the future infinitive passive of all verbs is formed separately, from Principal Part VI.

125. INDIRECT STATEMENT

Statements can be quoted either directly or indirectly. Direct quotation preserves the speaker's original words, which in English are set off by quotation marks. But indirect quotation, or indirect statement, incorporates the original words into a complex sentence.

He says, "Sokrates is doing this."   (direct quotation)

He says that Sokrates is doing this. (indirect statement)

Indirect statement can be introduced not only by verbs of saying, but also by verbs of thinking, believing, knowing, and perceiving (e.g., He believes that Sokrates is doing this).

Greek has three different ways of expressing indirect statement. The various introductory verbs take one or more of these three constructions.

A list of verbs already learned, and those presented in this Section, showing the constructions which each commonly takes, is at the end of the Section.

The three types of indirect statement are as follows:

1. FINITE VERB introduced by the conjunctions ὅτι/ὡς, "that"
2. INFINITIVE + subject accusative
3. PARTICIPLE + subject accusative

1. FINITE VERB INTRODUCED BY ὅτι/ὡς

One verb which introduces this construction is λέγω:

λέγω, ἐρῶ or λέξω, εἶπον or ἔλεξα, εἴρηκα, εἴρημαι or λέλεγμαι, ἐλέχθην or ἐρρήθην, "say, speak"

WHEN THE INTRODUCTORY VERB IS IN A PRIMARY TENSE (PRESENT, PERFECT, OR FUTURE), ALL VERBS IN THE INDIRECT STATEMENT RETAIN THEIR ORIGINAL MOOD AND TENSE. NEGATIVES REMAIN UNCHANGED.

He says that Sokrates is doing this.

$\lambda \acute{\epsilon} \xi \epsilon \iota \left\{ \begin{array}{l} \ddot{o} \tau \iota \\ \dot{\omega} \varsigma \end{array} \right\} \Sigma \omega \kappa \varrho \acute{\alpha} \tau \eta \varsigma \ \tau o \widetilde{v} \tau' \ o \dot{v} \kappa \ \dot{\epsilon} \pi o \acute{\iota} \eta \sigma \epsilon \nu.$

He will say that Sokrates did not do this.

WHEN THE INTRODUCTORY VERB IS IN A SECONDARY TENSE (IMPERFECT, AORIST OR PLUPERFECT), ALL VERBS IN THE INDIRECT STATEMENT ARE CHANGED FROM THE INDICATIVE TO THE OPTATIVE OF THE SAME TENSE AS IN THE ORIGINAL STATEMENT. NEGATIVES REMAIN UNCHANGED.

$\epsilon \tilde{\iota} \pi \epsilon \nu \left\{ \begin{array}{l} \ddot{o} \tau \iota \\ \dot{\omega} \varsigma \end{array} \right\} \Sigma \omega \kappa \varrho \acute{\alpha} \tau \eta \varsigma \ \tau o \widetilde{v} \tau o \ \pi o \iota o \acute{\iota} \eta.$

He said that Sokrates was doing this.

$\epsilon \tilde{\iota} \pi \epsilon \nu \left\{ \begin{array}{l} \ddot{o} \tau \iota \\ \dot{\omega} \varsigma \end{array} \right\} \Sigma \omega \kappa \varrho \acute{\alpha} \tau \eta \varsigma \ \tau o \widetilde{v} \tau' \ o \dot{v} \ \pi o \iota \acute{\eta} \sigma \epsilon \iota \epsilon \nu.$

He said that Sokrates did not do this.

The present optative $\pi o \iota o \acute{\iota} \eta$ shows that the tense of the original statement was present: he said, "Sokrates is doing this." The aorist optative $\pi o \iota \acute{\eta} \sigma \epsilon \iota \epsilon \nu$ shows that the tense of the original statement was aorist: he said, "Sokrates did not do this." In English, when the introductory verb is in past time, one often alters the tense of the verbs in indirect statement: e.g., "is doing" becomes "was doing," and "did not do" can become "had not done."

Such a change of tense never occurs in Greek. Instead, there is a change of mood from indicative to optative, while the tense remains the same.

In this construction Greek uses the future optative, to stand in place of a future indicative.

$\epsilon \tilde{\iota} \pi \epsilon \nu \left\{ \begin{array}{l} \ddot{o} \tau \iota \\ \dot{\omega} \varsigma \end{array} \right\} \Sigma \omega \kappa \varrho \acute{\alpha} \tau \eta \varsigma \ \tau o \widetilde{v} \tau o \ \pi o \iota \acute{\eta} \sigma o \iota.$

He said that Sokrates would do this.

For the formation of the future optative see Section 123. In the translation above, English "would" represents an original "will," i.e., a future indicative: he said, "Sokrates will do this." Distinguish this carefully from the meaning of the optative in a future less vivid ("should/would") conditional sentence.

The perfect optative, which can stand for an original perfect indicative, is rare. Its forms are given in the Appendix, pages 663–64 and 666.

When an optative stands for an indicative in indirect statement, it shows time as well as aspect. A present optative places the action of the indirect statement at a time simultaneous with that of the introductory verb; an aorist optative places the action at a time prior to that of the introductory verb; a future optative places the action at a time subsequent to that of the main verb. Contrast, e.g., purpose clauses in secondary sequence, where the tenses of the optative indicate aspect only.

Sometimes, when the introductory verb is in past time, verbs of the original statement remain in the indicative and are not changed to the optative. This usage is called the retained indicative and gives added vividness to the quoted statement, a vividness which cannot be represented in translation.

$$\varepsilon \tilde{\iota} \pi \varepsilon \nu \left\{ \begin{array}{c} \ddot{o} \tau \iota \\ \dot{\omega} \varsigma \end{array} \right\} \Sigma \omega \kappa \varrho \dot{\alpha} \tau \eta \varsigma \ \tau o \tilde{\upsilon} \tau o \ \pi o \iota \dot{\eta} \sigma \varepsilon \iota.$$

He said that Sokrates would do this.

The imperfect and pluperfect, which lack an optative, are normally represented in indirect statement by a retained indicative.

In all of the examples above the verb of the original statement was in the indicative mood. The treatment of original subjunctives, optatives, and complex sentences in indirect statement is explained in the Appendix, pages 760–68.

Greek, like English, changes the person of the verb in an indirect statement when this is necessary: e.g., Sokrates says, "I did it"; Sokrates says that he (= Sokrates) did it.

2. INFINITIVE PLUS SUBJECT ACCUSATIVE

Many verbs introduce a second type of indirect statement in which an indicative verb of the original statement is replaced by the infinitive of the same tense and the subject of the original finite verb (whether separately expressed or not) appears in the accusative case as the subject of the infinitive. There is no introductory conjunction. Direct and indirect objects keep their own cases; negatives remain unchanged.

This construction remains the same, regardless of the tense of the introductory verb.

The infinitive, which here stands for an original indicative, shows time as well as aspect. A present infinitive shows time simultaneous with that of the introductory verb; an aorist infinitive shows prior time; a future infinitive shows subsequent time; and a perfect infinitive describes an action already completed.

For the formation of the future infinitive see Section 124.

One verb which introduces this construction is νομίζω:

> νομίζω, νομιῶ, ἐνόμισα, νενόμιχα, νενόμισμαι, ἐνομίσθην, "consider, think, believe" > νομίζει Σωκράτη τοῦτο ποιεῖν.

> He thinks that Sokrates is doing this.

> νομίζει Σωκράτη τοῦτο ποιῆσαι.
> He thinks that Sokrates did this.

> νομίζει Σωκράτη τοῦτ' οὐ ποιήσειν.
> He thinks that Sokrates will not do this.

> ἐνόμισε Σωκράτη τοῦτ' οὐ ποιήσειν.
> He thought that Sokrates would not do this.

WHEN THE SUBJECT OF THE INFINITIVE IS THE SAME AS THAT OF THE INTRODUCTORY VERB, NO SEPARATE SUBJECT ACCUSATIVE APPEARS. WHEN THE SUBJECT IS DIFFERENT, IT MUST APPEAR.

> νομίζει τοῦτο ποιήσειν.
> He thinks that he (̠ the same person) will do this.

> νομίζει αὐτὸν τοῦτο ποιήσειν.
> He thinks that he (— someone else) will do this.

A predicate adjective agrees with the accusative subject of an infinitive in indirect statement, but with the subject of the introductory verb when the subject of the infinitive is the same and is not separately expressed.

> νομίζει Σωκράτη ἀγαθὸν εἶναι.
> He thinks that Sokrates is good.

> νομίζει ἀγαθὸς εἶναι.
> He thinks that he (= the same person) is good.

The imperfect and pluperfect tenses, which lack infinitives, can be represented in indirect statement by the present and perfect infinitives whenever the context makes the time relationship clear. This usage is illustrated in the Appendix.

3. PARTICIPLE PLUS SUBJECT ACCUSATIVE

Many verbs introduce a third type of indirect statement in which an indicative of the original statement is replaced by the participle of the same tense and the subject of the original finite verb (whether separately expressed in the original statement or not) appears in the accusative case. There is no introductory conjunction. Direct and indirect objects keep their own cases. Negatives remain unchanged.

This construction remains the same, regardless of the tense of the introductory verb.

Indirect statement with the participle will present no difficulties since it follows exactly the same rules as indirect statement with the infinitive.

Three verbs which can introduce this construction are ἀγγέλλω, αἰσθάνομαι, and ἀκούω.

ἀγγέλλει Σωκράτη τοῦτο ποιοῦντα.
He announces that Sokrates is doing this.

ἀγγέλλει Σωκράτη τοῦτο ποιήσαντα.
He announces that Sokrates did this.

ἀγγέλλει Σωκράτη τοῦτ' οὐ ποιήσοντα.
He announces that Sokrates will not do this.

ἤγγειλε Σωκράτη τοῦτ' οὐ ποιήσοντα.
He announced that Sokrates would not do this.

Participles in indirect statement, like infinitives when so used, stand for original indicatives and show time as well as aspect.

WHEN THE SUBJECT OF THE PARTICIPLE IS THE SAME AS THAT OF THE INTRODUCTORY VERB, NO SEPARATE SUBJECT ACCUSATIVE APPEARS, AND THE PARTICIPLE AGREES WITH THE SUBJECT OF THE INTRODUCTORY VERB. WHEN THE SUBJECT OF THE PARTICIPLE IS DIFFERENT, IT MUST APPEAR IN THE ACCUSATIVE CASE.

αἰσθάνονται κακοὶ ὄντες.
They perceive that they (='the same people) are evil.

αἰσθάνονται αὐτοὺς κακοὺς ὄντας.
They perceive that they (= other people) are evil.

Predicate adjectives agree with the accusative subject of the participle or, when this is not expressed, with the subject of the introductory verb, as in the examples above.

With ἀκούω, this form of indirect statement conveys an intellectually perceived fact. The same verb can also take an object in the genitive case, accompanied by a participle (not in indirect statement) to describe something physically perceived.

ἀκούει Σωκράτη τοῦτο ποιοῦντα.
He hears that Sokrates is doing this.

ἀκούει Σωκράτους τοῦτο ποιοῦντος.
He hears Sokrates doing this.

The imperfect and pluperfect tenses, which lack participles, can be represented by present and perfect participles whenever the context makes the time relationship clear. This usage is illustrated in the Appendix.

4. THE THREE TYPES OF INDIRECT STATEMENT COMPARED

1. FINITE VERB introduced by ὅτι/ὡς

Introductory verb in primary tense:

All verbs of the original statement remain the same except for any necessary change of person.

Introductory verb in secondary tense:

Indicatives of the original statement are changed to optatives of the same tense, OR indicatives of the original statement are retained for vividness; person is changed when necessary.

2. INFINITIVE + subject accusative

Indicatives of the original statement are changed to infinitives of the same tense, AND the subject of the original statement appears in the accusative case as the subject of the infinitive.

3. PARTICIPLE + subject accusative

Indicatives of the original statement are changed to participles of the same tense, AND the subject of the original statement appears in the accusative case and the participle agrees with it.

5. INTRODUCTORY VERBS CLASSIFIED

Here is a list of verbs already introduced, and verbs presented in this Unit, which introduce the three types of indirect statement.

INFINITIVE ONLY:	νομίζω, φημί
FINITE VERB OR INFINITIVE:	λέγω
FINITE VERB OR PARTICIPLE:	ἀγγέλλω, αἰσθάνομαι, ἀκούω, γιγνώσκω, δείκνῡμι, δηλόω, μανθάνω, ὁράω

126. RETAINED SUBJUNCTIVE

Just as in indirect statement with a finite verb an original indicative can be retained after an introductory verb in a secondary tense, instead of being changed to an optative, so also in purpose clauses and fear clauses introduced by a main verb in a secondary tense a subjunctive can be retained instead of being changed to an optative according to sequence of moods.

The retained subjunctive presents the intention or fear more vividly than the optative. This vividness cannot be represented in translation.

ἐφοβούμεθα μὴ αἰσχρὰ ποιοίη. (optative)
We feared that he might do shameful things.

ἐφοβούμεθα μὴ αἰσχρὰ ποιῇ. (retained subjunctive)
We feared that he might do shameful things.

ἦλθεν εἰς τὴν πόλιν ἵνα χορεύσαι. (optative)
He came into the city in order that he might dance.

ἦλθεν εἰς τὴν πόλιν ἵνα χορεύσῃ. (retained subjunctive)
He came into the city in order that he might dance.

127. THE ADJECTIVE πολύς, πολλή, πολύ, "much, many"

The adjective πολύς, πολλή, πολύ has forms belonging to the first, second, and third declensions.

The masculine and neuter nominative and accusative singular belong to the third declension and use the stem πολυ-.

All other forms use the stem πολλ- and are declined like ἀγαθός, ἀγαθή, ἀγαθόν. There is no vocative.

128. THE NOUN ναῦς, νεώς, ἡ, "ship"

The third-declension noun ναῦς, νεώς, ἡ, "ship," is irregular.

Nom. S	ναῦς
Gen.	νεώς
Dat.	νηί
Acc.	ναῦν
Voc.	ναῦ
Nom./Voc. P	νῆες
Gen.	νεῶν
Dat.	ναυσί(ν)
Acc.	ναῦς

Observations: (1) This noun has two stems. The stem ναυ- appears in the nominative, accusative, and vocative singular, and in the dative and accusative plural. The stem νη- appears elsewhere. The genitive singular was originally νηός, but by quantitative metathesis the form became νεώς (cf. πόλεως). The genitive plural imitates the genitive singular.

(2) Note that the accusative plural is the same as the nominative singular.

VOCABULARY NOTES

In the verb βαίνω, -βήσομαι, -ἔβην, βέβηκα, ——, ——, "walk, step, go," the future and aorist tenses appear only in compounds. The future tense is deponent; the aorist is a root aorist, i.e., an athematic second aorist conjugated exactly like ἔστην (from ἵστημι): indicative -ἔβην, -ἔβης, etc.; subjunctive -βῶ, -βῇς, etc.; optative -βαίην, -βαίης, etc.; imperative -βῆθι, -βήτω, etc.; infinitive -βῆναι; participle -βάς, -βᾶσα, -βάν.

The compound verb ἀναβαίνω, "go up, go upland, board, mount," can be used of someone going up to speak in a public assembly, making a journey upland, boarding a ship, or mounting a horse. What one boards or mounts is indicated by a prepositional phrase: ἐπὶ (εἰς) τὴν ναῦν, ἐφ' ἵππον. Xenophon's Anabasis (ἀνάβασις, ἀναβάσεως, ἡ) describes an "Upland March."

The verb γιγνώσκω, γνώσομαι, ἔγνων, ἔγνωκα, ἔγνωσμαι, ἐγνώσθην, "perceive, recognize, know," is deponent in the future tense and has a root aorist. It can introduce two types of indirect statement: ὅτι/ὡς + finite verb, or participle + subject accusative. This verb shows throughout its conjugation the root γνω-/γνο-. Principal Part I shows a reduplication of the stem and has also the inchoative suffix -σκω. For the conjugation of the root aorist ἔγνων see Section 122. Note that the epsilon with which Principal Parts IV and V begin is NOT the past indicative augment. Be careful not to confuse forms of γιγνώσκω with forms of γίγνομαι.

The object of the preposition ἕνεκα, "for the sake of," often precedes the preposition; cf. χάριν.

The noun Ζεύς, Διός, ὁ, "Zeus," has a dative Διί, an accusative Δία, and a vocative Ζεῦ. The noun, and the god, are inherited from Indo-European. The nominative was originally *dyēus. From the vocative *dyeu + the word for "father" (pater) comes the Latin Iūpiter, "Jupiter."

The noun θέᾱτρον, θεᾱ́τρου, τό, "theater," means literally "place of viewing."

The verb λέγω, "say, speak" (cf. λόγος), has several alternative tense stems, with no difference in meaning, which may be classified as follows:

λέγω	λέξω	ἔλεξα		λέλεγμαι	ἐλέχθην
	ἐρῶ		εἴρηκα	εἴρημαι	ἐρρήθην
		εἶπον

The unaugmented second aorist active and middle tense stem is εἰπ-. The second person singular, aorist imperative active is εἰπέ. Cf. ἐλθέ, ἰδέ, λαβέ. The unaugmented aorist passive tense stem is ῥηθ-.

This verb introduces two types of indirect statement: ὅτι/ὡς + finite verb, and infinitive + subject accusative.

The noun ναῦς, νεώς, ἡ, "ship," originally had a stem ending in digamma. The digamma survives as an upsilon in the nominative, accusative, and vocative singular, and in the dative and accusative plural. For the declension of this noun see Section 128.

The affirmative particle νή is followed by the name of a god in the accusative case and strengthens an assenting statement: νὴ τὸν Δία, "yes, by Zeus."

The verb νομίζω, νομιῶ, ἐνόμισα, νενόμικα, νενόμισμαι, ἐνομίσθην, "consider, think, believe," is formed from the noun νόμος, "law, custom" + the verbal suffix -ιζω and originally meant "practice customarily." Like most verbs with presents in -ιζω, this verb has a contracted future active and middle which lacks the -ζ- of the present tense stem. The suffix -ιζω derives from *ιδιω; the dental disappeared in all other Principal Parts. This verb introduces only one kind of indirect statement: infinitive + subject accusative.

The adverb πάνυ, "perfectly, very; by all means," is often used to express assent to a statement: πάνυ γε, "yes, by all means."

The verb πίπτω, πεσοῦμαι, ἔπεσον, πέπτωκα, ——, ——, "fall," has a present tense stem which shows reduplication with long iota; the future tense is deponent and contracted; and there is a second aorist (cf. ἔλιπον). The compound verb ἐκπίπτω, "be driven out, be banished," serves as the passive of ἐκβάλλω in these senses.

ἐκ τῆς πόλεως ἐξεβάλομεν αὐτόν.
We drove him out of the city.

ἐκ τῆς πόλεως ἐξέπεσεν ὑφ' ἡμῶν.
He was driven out of the city by us.

For the declension of the adjective πολύς, πολλή, πολύ, "much, many," see Section 127. Greek normally uses the conjunction καί to link this adjective with other adjectives: πολλὰ καὶ ἀγαθὰ βιβλία, "many good books."

Monosyllabic prefixes, such as προ-, do NOT drop the final vowel when compounded with a verb form beginning with a vowel or diphthong. The omicron of προ-, however, can contract with an epsilon. Contrast ἀπέδοσαν with προέδοσαν, προύδοσαν.

The noun σωφροσύνη, σωφροσύνης, ἡ, "prudence, self-control, moderation," is formed from the adjective σώφρων, σῶφρον + the suffix -σύνη, which often denotes traits of character.

The verb φημί, φήσω, ἔφησα, ——, ——, ——, "say, assert, affirm," is enclitic in the present indicative; for its conjugation cf. Section 121. This verb introduces only one type of indirect statement: infinitive + subject accusative. This verb can mean "say yes, affirm" or, when negated, "say no, deny":

ἔγωγέ φημι.
I agree.
I say yes.

οὔ φημι.
I disagree.
I say no.

οὔ φημι τούτους ἀγαθοὺς εἶναι.
I deny that these men are good.

Distinguish the conjunction ὡς, "that," introducing indirect statement with a finite verb from the conjunction ὡς introducing purpose clauses.

129. THE ADJECTIVE μέγας, μεγάλη, μέγα, "big, great, large"

This adjective has five third-declension forms:

	M	F	N
Nom. S	μέγας	μεγάλη	μέγα
Gen.	μεγάλου	μεγάλης	μεγάλου
Dat.	μεγάλῳ	μεγάλῃ	μεγάλῳ
Acc.	μέγαν	μεγάλην	μέγα
Voc.	μεγάλε	μεγάλη	μέγα
Nom./Voc. P	μεγάλοι	μεγάλαι	μεγάλα
Gen.	μεγάλων	μεγάλων	μεγάλων
Dat.	μεγάλοις	μεγάλαις	μεγάλοις
Acc.	μεγάλους	μεγάλᾱς	μεγάλα

Observation: The forms in bold face are the third-declension ones. All other forms are those of first- and second-declension adjectives built on the stem μεγαλ- with a persistent accent on the penult.

130. ADJECTIVES OF THE TYPE ἡδύς, ἡδεῖα, ἡδύ, "pleasant, glad"

Nom. S	ἡδύς	ἡδεῖα	ἡδύ
Gen.	ἡδέος	ἡδείᾱς	ἡδέος
Dat.	ἡδεῖ	ἡδείᾳ	ἡδεῖ
Acc.	ἡδύν	ἡδεῖαν	ἡδύ
Voc.	ἡδύ	ἡδεῖα	ἡδύ

491

Nom./Voc. P	ἡδεῖς	ἡδεῖαι	ἡδέα
Gen.	ἡδέων	ἡδειῶν	ἡδέων
Dat.	ἡδέσι(ν)	ἡδείαις	ἡδέσι(ν)
Acc.	ἡδεῖς	ἡδείᾱς	ἡδέα

Observations: (1) Note the -ν- in the masculine and neuter nominative, accusative, and vocative singular; elsewhere in the masculine and neuter, the stem ἡδε- is used. The dative singular is the result of a contraction of ἡδέι; the masculine plural nominative is contracted from ἡδέες. The masculine plural accusative is the same as the masculine plural nominative.

(2) The feminine has short -α first-declension endings, with a circumflex on the ultima in the genitive plural.

(3) These adjectives form adverbs by adding the ending -ως to the stem ending in -ε-: ἡδέως.

131. COMPARISON OF ADJECTIVES

Adjectives in Greek have three degrees:

(1) the positive degree, the one seen thus far, simply attributes a quality to a noun or pronoun (e.g., "clear, beautiful");

(2) the comparative degree shows that of two nouns or pronouns one has more of a quality than the other (e.g., "clearer, more beautiful") or that one noun or pronoun has the quality to a rather high degree (e.g., "rather clear, rather beautiful");

(3) the superlative degree shows that of more than two nouns or pronouns one has the most of a quality (e.g., "clearest, most beautiful") or that a noun or pronoun has the quality to a very high degree (e.g., "very clear, very beautiful").

The Greek comparative and superlative thus can show degrees of intensity in addition to strict comparison.

A Greek adjective shows degrees of comparison by using one of two sets of suffixes or by the use of comparative and superlative adverbs:

SUFFIX: either   (1)   Comparative in -τερος, -τερᾱ, -τερον
                             Superlative in -τατος, -τατη, -τατον

           or   (2)   Comparative in -ῑων, -ῑον
                             Superlative in -ιστος, -ιστη, -ιστον

ADVERB: Comparative adverb μᾶλλον, "more"
                        Superlative adverb μάλιστα, "most"

1. COMPARATIVE IN -τερος, -τερᾱ, -τερον
   SUPERLATIVE IN -τατος, -τατη, -τατον

Since most adjectives form their comparative and superlative with these suffixes, use these suffixes for all adjectives unless told otherwise.

To form the comparative and superlative degrees of a first- and second-declension adjective, drop the ending -ος from the masculine singular nominative to get the stem. If the stem ends in a long syllable (a syllable containing [1] a long vowel or diphthong or [2] a short vowel followed by two consonants or the double consonants ζ, ξ, or ψ), add the vowel -ο- and the suffixes. If the stem ends in a short syllable (a syllable containing a short vowel not followed by two consonants or a double consonant), add the letter -ω- and the suffixes.

The comparative degree thus obtained is declined like the adjective ἄξιος, ἀξίᾱ, ἄξιον. Except for the accent, the superlative degree is declined like ἀγαθός, ἀγαθή, ἀγαθόν.

POSITIVE	STEM	COMPARATIVE	SUPERLATIVE
δίκαιος	δικαι-	δικαιότερος	δικαιότατος
δικαίᾱ		δικαιοτέρᾱ	δικαιοτάτη
δίκαιον		δικαιότερον	δικαιότατον
"just"		"more just, rather just"	"most just, very just"
δῆλος	δηλ-	δηλότερος	δηλότατος
δήλη		δηλοτέρᾱ	δηλοτάτη
δῆλον		δηλότερον	δηλότατον
"clear"		"clearer, rather clear"	"clearest, very clear"
ἄξιος	ἀξι-	ἀξιώτερος	ἀξιώτατος
ἀξίᾱ		ἀξιωτέρᾱ	ἀξιωτάτη
ἄξιον		ἀξιώτερον	ἀξιώτατον
"worthy"		"worthier, rather worthy"	"worthiest, very worthy"
σοφός	σοφ-	σοφώτερος	σοφώτατος
σοφή		σοφωτέρᾱ	σοφωτάτη
σοφόν		σοφώτερον	σοφώτατον
"wise"		"wiser, rather wise"	"wisest, very wise"

The following first- and second-declension adjectives are irregular. (In giving the degrees of an adjective, one gives only the masculine singular nominative.)

μέσος	μεσαίτερος	μεσαίτατος
παλαιός	παλαίτερος	παλαίτατος
φίλος	φιλαίτερος	φιλαίτατος/φίλτατος

Third-declension adjectives in -ης, -ες, and third- and first-declension adjectives in -ύς, -εῖα, -ύ add the suffixes directly to the stem without any intervening vowel. The stem of these adjectives is identical with the neuter singular nominative and accusative.

ADJECTIVE	STEM	COMPARATIVE	SUPERLATIVE
ἀμαθής	ἀμαθεσ-	ἀμαθέστερος	ἀμαθέστατος
σαφής	σαφεσ-	σαφέστερος	σαφέστατος
βαρύς	βαρυ-	βαρύτερος	βαρύτατος

(cf. Vocabulary, page 502.)

Some third-declension adjectives add the suffixes -εστερος and - εστατος to their stem:

ἄφρων	ἀφρον-	ἀφρονέστερος	ἀφρονέστατος
εὐδαίμων	εὐδαιμον-	εὐδαιμονέστερος	εὐδαιμονέστατος
σώφρων	σωφρον-	σωφρονέστερος	σωφρονέστατος

2. COMPARATIVE IN -ῑων, -ῑον
SUPERLATIVE IN -ιστος, -ιστη, -ιστον

The comparative and superlative degrees of these adjectives must be learned individually, since these suffixes are put on a stem different from that of the positive degree. Any adjective that takes -ῑων, -ῑον in the comparative degree takes -ιστος, -ιστη, -ιστον in the superlative degree. An adjective regularly takes -τερος, -τερᾱ, -τερον in the comparative degree and -τατος, -τατη, -τατον in the superlative degree OR -ῑων, -ῑον and -ιστος, -ιστη, -ιστον, NOT both sets of suffixes.

Here are presented four adjectives with comparatives in -ῑων, -ῑον and superlatives in -ιστος, -ιστη, -ιστον. More such adjectives are given in Unit 19.

POSITIVE	COMPARATIVE	SUPERLATIVE
αἰσχρός	αἰσχίων	αἴσχιστος
ἐχθρός	ἐχθίων	ἔχθιστος
ἡδύς	ἡδίων	ἥδιστος
καλός	καλλίων	κάλλιστος

3. DECLENSION OF COMPARATIVES OF THE TYPE ἡδίων, ἥδῑον

In the declension which follows, pay particular attention to the alternative forms.

	M/F	N
Nom. S	ἡδίων	ἥδῑον
Gen.	ἡδίονος	ἡδίονος
Dat.	ἡδίονι	ἡδίονι
Acc.	ἡδίονα/ἡδίω	ἥδῑον
Voc.	ἥδῑον	ἥδῑον
Nom./Voc. P	ἡδίονες/ἡδίους	ἡδίονα/ἡδίω
Gen.	ἡδῑόνων	ἡδῑόνων
Dat.	ἡδίοσι(ν)	ἡδίοσι(ν)
Acc.	ἡδίονας/ἡδίους	ἡδίονα/ἡδίω

Observations: (1) Note that in the masculine/feminine singular vocative and neuter singular nominative/accusative/vocative the accent is on the antepenult.

(2) The alternative forms derive from a different suffix which ended in -σ-. The intervocalic -σ- dropped out and the remaining vowels con⁺acted:

$$\hat{η}δίω < *\hat{η}δίοσα; \ \hat{η}δίους < *\hat{η}δίοσες$$

The alternative masculine and feminine plural accusative is simply the same form as the nominative.

4. COMPARATIVE ADVERB μᾶλλον, "more"
SUPERLATIVE ADVERB μάλιστα, "most"

Instead of using one of the two sets of suffixes, any adjective can form a comparative degree by using the comparative adverb μᾶλλον, "more," with the positive degree of the adjective. The superlative is formed by using the superlative adverb μάλιστα, "most," with the positive degree of the adjective.

POSITIVE	COMPARATIVE	SUPERLATIVE
φίλος	μᾶλλον φίλος	μάλιστα φίλος
εὐγενής	μᾶλλον εὐγενής	μάλιστα εὐγενής

5. COMPARISON WITH ἤ; GENITIVE OF COMPARISON

Comparisons are made in two ways in Greek, by the conjunction ἤ, "than," or by the genitive of comparison.

(1) The conjunction ἤ introduces a new clause. The case of the person or thing compared depends on its function in its own clause.

> Σωκράτης σοφώτερός ἐστιν ἤ Ἀριστοφάνης.
> Sokrates is wiser than Aristophanes.

> νομίζομεν Σωκράτη σοφώτερον εἶναι ἤ Ἀριστοφάνη.
> We think that Sokrates is wiser than Aristophanes.

In the first sentence, Ἀριστοφάνης is in the nominative, since it is the subject of an understood ἐστίν in its own clause. In the second sentence, Ἀριστοφάνη is in the accusative, since it is the subject of an understood εἶναι in its own clause.

(2) Alternatively, the person or thing being compared can stand in the genitive case without any conjunction or preposition. Such a genitive is called a genitive of comparison.

> Σωκράτης σοφώτερός ἐστιν Ἀριστοφάνους.
> Sokrates is wiser than Aristophanes.

> νομίζομεν Σωκράτη σοφώτερον εἶναι Ἀριστοφάνους.
> We think that Sokrates is wiser than Aristophanes.

6. DATIVE OF DEGREE OF DIFFERENCE

The degree to which two persons or things being compared differ is shown by the dative of degree of difference, with no preposition.

> Σωκράτης πολλῷ σοφώτερός ἐστιν ἤ Ἀριστοφάνης.
> Sokrates is wiser than Aristophanes by much.
> Sokrates is much wiser than Aristophanes.

The same idea can be expressed by an adverbial accusative.

> Σωκράτης πολὺ σοφώτερός ἐστιν ἤ Ἀριστοφάνης.
> Sokrates is much wiser than Aristophanes.

7. SUPERLATIVE WITH ὡς and ὅτι

The conjunctions ὡς and ὅτι followed by the superlative degree mean "as ... as possible."

> Σωκράτης, ἀνὴρ $\begin{Bmatrix} ὡς \\ ὅτι \end{Bmatrix}$ σοφώτατος, τοὺς νεᾱνίᾱς ἐδίδασκεν.

> Sokrates, a man as wise as possible, taught the young men.

8. OTHER CONSTRUCTIONS WITH THE SUPERLATIVE

A superlative is often accompanied by a partitive genitive, a dative of degree of difference, or an adverbial accusative.

> Σωκράτης, ὁ σοφώτατος μακρῷ τῶν Ἑλλήνων, τοὺς νεᾱνίᾱς ἐδίδασκεν.
> Sokrates, by far the wisest of the Greeks, taught the young men.

> Σωκράτης, ὁ πολὺ σοφώτατος τῶν Ἀθηναίων, τοὺς νεᾱνίᾱς ἐδίδασκεν.
> Sokrates, much the wisest of the Athenians, taught the young men.

132. THE VERB εἶμι, "go, come"

εἶμι, ——, ——, ——, ——, ——, "go, come"

This verb occurs only in the present and imperfect tenses of the active voice. A discussion of the use of the tenses follows the presentation of the forms.

		PRESENT INDICATIVE ACTIVE	IMPERFECT INDICATIVE ACTIVE	PRESENT SUBJ. ACTIVE	PRESENT OPTATIVE ACTIVE
S	1	εἶμι	ᾖα/ᾖειν	ἴω	ἴοιμι/ἰοίην
	2	εἶ	ᾔεισθα/ᾔεις	ἴῃς	ἴοις
	3	εἶσι(ν)	ᾔει(ν)	ἴῃ	ἴοι
P	1	ἴμεν	ᾖμεν	ἴωμεν	ἴοιμεν
	2	ἴτε	ᾖτε	ἴητε	ἴοιτε
	3	ἴᾱσι(ν)	ᾖσαν/ᾖεσαν	ἴωσι(ν)	ἴοιεν

Observations: (1) This verb shows vowel gradation:

> Long-vowel present tense stem: εἰ-
> Short-vowel present tense stem: ἰ-

(2) The present indicative is regular except for the second person singular εἶ. The imperfect is irregular and must be learned with special care. As in all athematic verbs, the subjunctive uses a thematic conjugation, but without the contraction of, e.g., διδῶ. The optative is thematic, with one alternative form with the ending -οιην: ἰοίην.

(3) Be careful not to confuse forms of εἶμι, "go, come," with εἰμί, "be." The two verbs are printed side by side in the Appendix, pp. 673–75. Note the following:

> εἶμι, "go, come," is NOT an enclitic like εἰμί, "be."

εἶ: The form is the second person singular, present indicative active of both verbs.

Compare εἶσι(ν): third person singular, present indicative active of "to go"

εἰσί(ν): third person plural, present indicative active of "to be"

Note the iota subscript throughout the imperfect of εἶμι, "go, come."

PRESENT IMPERATIVE ACTIVE

2	ἴθι	ἴτε
3	ἴτω	ἰόντων

PRESENT INFINITIVE ACTIVE: ἰέναι

PRESENT PARTICIPLE ACTIVE

	M	F	N
Nom. S	ἰών	ἰοῦσα	ἰόν
Gen.	ἰόντος	ἰούσης	ἰόντος

Observation: Note the accented thematic endings in the participle.

Use of the tenses of εἶμι:

The present indicative forms of εἶμι, "go, come," are used in Attic prose as the future indicative of ἔρχομαι, which is used only in the present indicative. (The future ἐλεύσομαι is not used in Attic prose.) In indirect statement the optative, the infinitive, and the participle of εἶμι can stand either for forms of εἶμι in an original statement and therefore represent an original future or they can stand for forms of ἔρχομαι and therefore represent an original present tense. Context will usually allow one to distinguish between these uses. The participle ἰών can also function as a future and express purpose. In other uses of the optative, the infinitive, and the participle, and in all uses of the subjunctive and the imperative, the non-indicative forms of εἶμι show progressive/ repeated aspect in contrast to the non-indicative forms derived from ἦλθον. The imperfect of εἶμι is used as the imperfect of ἔρχομαι.

Thus in Attic prose the principal parts and the moods and tenses formed from them which express the idea "go, come" are:

ἔρχομαι,	εἶμι,	ἦλθον,	ἐλήλυθα, ——, ——, "go, come"
ἴω		ἔλθω
ἴοιμι	ἴοιμι	ἔλθοιμι
ἴθι		ἐλθέ
ἰέναι	ἰέναι	ἐλθεῖν	ἐληλυθέναι
ἰών	ἰών	ἐλθών	ἐληλυθώς
ᾖα/ᾖειν			ἐληλύθη

Examples:

νῦν ἀπέρχονται.
They are now going away.

ἀγγέλλω αὐτοὺς νῦν ἀπιόντας.
I report that they are now
   going away.

νομίζω αὐτοὺς νῦν ἀπιέναι.
I think that they are now
   going away.

μετὰ τὴν μάχην ἀπίασιν.
After the battle they will go away.

ἀγγέλλω αὐτοὺς μετὰ τὴν μάχην ἀπιόντας.
I report that they will go away
   after the battle.

νομίζω αὐτοὺς μετὰ τὴν μάχην
   ἀπιέναι.
I think that they will go away
   after the battle.

133. NUMERALS

The numbers one through four are numerical adjectives which are declined as follows:

Observation: In the declension of εἷς, μία, ἕν note the shift of accent to the ultima in the feminine genitive and dative; contrast μιᾶς, μιᾷ with μία, μίαν.

134. NEGATIVE PRONOUNS/ADJECTIVES

The forms of εἷς, μία, ἕν combine with the negatives οὐδέ and μηδέ to give the compound negative pronouns/adjectives "no one, nothing."

	M	F	N	M	F	N
Nom.	οὐδείς	οὐδεμία	οὐδέν	μηδείς	μηδεμία	μηδέν
Gen.	οὐδενός	οὐδεμιᾶς	οὐδενός	μηδενός	μηδεμιᾶς	μηδενός

Acc.	οὐδένα	οὐδεμίαν	οὐδέν	μηδένα	μηδεμίαν	μηδέν

Where the negative would be οὐ, οὐδείς is used; where the negative would be μή, μηδείς is used.

A SIMPLE NEGATIVE (οὐ, μή) FOLLOWED BY A COMPOUND NEGATIVE OR NEGATIVES (E.G., οὐδείς, μηδείς), OR A COMPOUND NEGATIVE FOLLOWED BY ANOTHER COMPOUND NEGATIVE OR NEGATIVES, HAS ITS NEGATION STRENGTHENED.

οὐκ ἄπεισιν οὐδείς.
No one will go away.

ἔμοιγε οὐδεὶς οὐδὲν ἔδωκεν.
To me no one gave anything.

μὴ ἀπέλθῃ μηδείς.
Let no one go away.

οὐ λυθήσεται οὐδεμία πόλις οὔποτε οὐδενὶ τρόπῳ.
No city will ever be freed in any way.

BUT A COMPOUND NEGATIVE FOLLOWED BY A SIMPLE NEGATIVE PRODUCES A POSITIVE STATEMENT.

οὐδεὶς οὐκ ἔφυγεν.
No one did not flee (i.e., everyone fled).

135. UNATTAINABLE WISH

In order to express a wish, hope, or prayer whose fulfillment is possible, Greek uses an independent optative of wish, often introduced by εἴθε or εἰ γάρ; cf. Section 61. If, however, the fulfillment of the wish is impossible, the optative is replaced by a past tense of the indicative: an imperfect indicative if the wish refers to present time; an aorist indicative if the wish refers to past time. Such unattainable wishes must be accompanied by εἴθε or εἰ γάρ, or they would be indistinguishable from plain factual statements about the past. The negative of all expressions of wish is μή.

$$\left\{ \begin{array}{l} \text{———} \\ εἴθε \\ εἰ\ γὰρ \end{array} \right\}\ παύσαιμεν\ τοὺς\ πολεμίους.$$

May we stop the enemy.

If only we may stop the enemy.

I wish we may stop the enemy.

$$\left\{ \begin{array}{l} εἴθε \\ εἰ\ γὰρ \end{array} \right\}\ ἐπαύομεν\ τοὺς\ πολεμίους.$$

Would that we were stopping the enemy.

If only we were stopping the enemy.

I wish that we were stopping the enemy.

$$\left\{ \begin{array}{l} εἴθε \\ εἰ\ γὰρ \end{array} \right\}\ ἐπαύσαμεν\ τοὺς\ πολεμίους.$$

Would that we had stopped the enemy.

If only we had stopped the enemy.

I wish that we had stopped the enemy.

εἰ γὰρ μὴ ἐνίκησαν οἱ πολέμιοι.

Would that the enemy had not conquered.

If only the enemy had not conquered.

I wish that the enemy had not conquered.

VOCABULARY NOTES

The verb ἁμαρτάνω, ἁμαρτήσομαι, ἥμαρτον, ἡμάρτηκα, ἡμάρτημαι, ἡμαρτή-θην means literally "miss a target"; in this sense it governs a genitive. Its extended meaning is "make a mistake, do wrong." The related noun ἁμαρτίᾱ, ἁμαρτίᾱς, ἡ means "mistake, error." In Aristotle's Poetics, the tragic hero undergoes a change of fortune δι' ἁμαρτίᾱν τινά.

The adjective βαρύς, βαρεῖα, βαρύ literally means "heavy." Among its extended meanings are "heavy to bear, burdensome, severe."

The verb δοκέω, δόξω, ἔδοξα, ——, δέδογμαι, -ἐδόχθην, related to the noun δόξα, means either "think" (with an accusative and infinitive) or "seem":

δοκῶ Σωκράτη σοφὸν εἶναι.
I think that Sokrates is wise.

δοκῶ τοῖς πολίταις σοφὸς εἶναι.
I seem to the citizens to be wise.

The verb δύναμαι, δυνήσομαι, ——, ——, δεδύνημαι, ἐδυνήθην, "be able," is an athematic deponent verb. The present and the imperfect are conjugated like ἵσταμαι and ἱστάμην, the present and imperfect middle/passive of ἵστημι. The second person singular of the imperfect is, however, ἐδύνω; contrast ἵστασο. The accent in the present subjunctive and optative is recessive: δύνωμαι, δύναιτο. This verb can govern a complementary infinitive. At times the past indicative augment appears as ἠ- instead of ἐ-.

For the use of the forms of εἶμι as the future and imperfect indicative, and as the non-indicative present and future forms of ἔρχομαι, see Section 132.

The verb ἐλαύνω, ἐλῶ (ἐλάω), ἤλασα, -ἐλήλακα, ἐλήλαμαι, ἠλάθην, "drive, march," has a future which is contracted like τῑμάω. The Greek verb, like the English verb "drive," can be either transitive or intransitive.

The verb ἐπίσταμαι, ἐπιστήσομαι, ——, ——, ——, ἠπιστήθην, "know," was probably a compound of ἐπι- and ἵσταμαι; cf. "understand." Note, however, that the rough breathing of the verb does not change the -π- to a -φ- after the -ι- of the prefix dropped out (contrast καθίστημι from κατα- + ἵστημι). Note also that the past indicative augment is shown by lengthening the initial ἐ-. As in δύναμαι, the second person singular of the imperfect indicative active is a contracted form, ἠπίστω, and the accent in the present subjunctive and optative is recessive: ἐπίστωμαι, ἐπίσταιτο. In Homer, the word meant "to know," with an emphasis on practical knowledge; the meaning was then extended to other forms of knowing. This verb introduces two kinds of indirect statement, the finite construction introduced by ὅτι or ὡς or the accusative subject + participle. The noun ἐπιστήμη, ἐπιστήμης, ἡ, "knowledge," had a similar development from "practical knowledge, know-how," to "knowledge" as opposed to "opinion," δόξα.

The verb ἔχω, ἕξω or σχήσω, ἔσχον, ἔσχηκα, -ἔσχημαι, ——, "have, hold," has as its basic root *segh-. In the present tense stem, the loss of the initial s- caused a rough breathing, which in turn was lost due to dissimilation of aspirates: *segho > *ἕχω > ἔχω. The imperfect is εἶχον < *ἔεχον < *ἔσεχον. In the future, the suffix -σ- caused the loss of the aspiration on the final consonant of the stem; this allowed the rough breathing due to the loss of the initial σ- to remain: *seghso > *σέξω > ἕξω. The alternative future is built on the zero-grade of the root, σχ-, with an added -η-. This element -σχη- also appears in the perfect active and perfect middle tense stems. Note also the second aorist with the zero-grade of the root without the additional -η-. The second person singular, aorist imperative active is σχές; the aorist subjunctive has a circumflex accent: σχῶ, σχῇς, etc.; and in uncompounded forms the optative is σχοίην, σχοίης, σχοίη, σχοῖμεν, σχοῖτε, σχοῖεν. In compounded forms of the aorist note the accent of the subjunctive (παράσχω) and imperative (παράσχες); the optative follows the usual pattern of the thematic second aorists, παράσχοιμι, παράσχοις, etc.

The verb means "have, hold." The future ἕξω has progressive/repeated aspect and is used of an action that lasts; σχήσω has simple aspect. Note the difference between the imperfect and the aorist:

εἶχες τὰ ξίφη. You were holding the swords.

ἔσχες τὰ ξίφη. You took hold of the swords.

The verb can also mean "be able to" and take a complementary infinitive.

In another very common idiom, any form of ἔχω with an adverb is the equivalent of the verb "to be" with an adjective:

ταῦτα οὐ κακῶς ἔχει.
These things are not bad.

In the middle the verb can mean "cling to" or "be next to" and take a genitive:

τῆς αὐτῆς γνώμης ἔχομαι.
I cling to the same opinion.

The adjective μέγας, μεγάλη, μέγα, "big, great, large," is used of both size and importance.

The negative pronouns/adjectives οὐδείς, οὐδεμία, οὐδέν and μηδείς, μηδεμία, μηδέν, "no one, nothing," are compounds of the negatives οὐ and μή. Any compound of οὐ is used where the simple οὐ is used. Any compound of μή is used where the simple μή is used.

The adjectives πόσος, πόση, πόσον, "how much/many?, how large?"; τοσοῦτος, τοσαύτη, τοσοῦτο/τοσοῦτον, "so much/many, so large"; and ὅσος, ὅση, ὅσον, "as much/many as, as large as; how much/many!, how large!" are correlatives and have the same relation to each other as ποῖος, τοιοῦτος, and οἷος. Note the alternative neuter singular nominative and accusative form with a final -ν: τοσοῦτον.

INTERROGATIVE	DEMONSTRATIVE	RELATIVE/ EXCLAMATORY
ποῖος, ποῖα, ποῖον of what kind?	τοιοῦτος, τοιαύτη, τοιοῦτο/τοιοῦτον of this/that sort, such (as this)	οἷος, οἵα, οἷον such as, of the sort which what sort of!

πόσος, πόση, πόσον
how much/many?, how
  large?
	τοσοῦτος, τοσαύτη,
	  τοσοῦτο/τοσοῦτον
	so much/many, so large ὅσος, ὅση, ὅσον
		as much/many as,
		  as large as how much/many!, how large!

The interrogative adjective πότερος, ποτέρα, πότερον, "which," is limited to two items or groups of items. The neuter singular πότερον is an adverb which introduces an alternative question; often, it cannot be translated:

πότερον τὸν Σωκράτη τῑμᾷς ἢ οὔ;
Do you honor Sokrates or not?

The rhetorician Isokrates gives advice to Demonikos, the son of a friend.

136. THE VERB ἵημι, "release, hurl, send"

The verb ἵημι is athematic in the present and imperfect tenses, and in the second aorist active and middle. Except for the present and imperfect tenses, this verb usually appears in compounds.

ἵημι, -ἥσω, -ἧκα, -εἷκα, -εἷμαι, -εἵθην, "release, hurl, send"

The present tense stem of this verb shows vowel gradation:

Long-vowel grade: ἱη-
Short-vowel grade: ἱε-

In the present and imperfect tenses ἵημι is conjugated almost exactly like τίθημι. Only a few forms of either verb are irregular. Irregular forms of ἵημι are printed entirely in boldface below.

The forms of ἵημι and τίθημι are set forth side by side in the Appendix, pp. 670–73, 677–80. In comparing the two verbs note carefully those few instances where they employ different endings.

1. PRESENT AND IMPERFECT ACTIVE

	PRESENT IND. ACTIVE	IMPERF. IND. ACTIVE	PRESENT SUBJ. ACTIVE	PRESENT OPT. ACTIVE	PRESENT IMPER. ACTIVE
S 1	ἵημι	ἵην	ἱῶ	ἱείην
2	ἵης/ἱεῖς	ἵεις	ἱῇς	ἱείης	ἵει
3	ἵησι(ν)	ἵει	ἱῇ	ἱείη	ἱέτω
P 1	ἵεμεν	ἵεμεν	ἱῶμεν	ἱεῖμεν
2	ἵετε	ἵετε	ἱῆτε	ἱεῖτε	ἵετε
3	ἱᾶσι(ν)	ἵεσαν	ἱῶσι(ν)	ἱεῖεν	ἱέντων

519

ALTERNATIVE PRESENT OPTATIVE ACTIVE:

P 1	ἱείημεν
2	ἱείητε
3	ἱείησαν

PRESENT INFINITIVE ACTIVE: ἱέναι

PRESENT PARTICIPLE ACTIVE:

	M	F	N
Nom. S	ἱείς	ἱεῖσα	ἱέν
Gen.	ἱέντος	ἱείσης	ἱέντος

Observations: (1) The second person singular, present indicative active has an alternate thematic form derived from *ἱέεις.

(2) In the third person plural, present indicative active the ending -ᾶσι(ν) contracts with the stem. Contrast ἱᾶσι(ν), τιθέᾶσι(ν).

(3) The second and third person singular, imperfect indicative active, are thematic and derive from *ἵεες, *ἵεε. Cf. ἐτίθεις, ἐτίθει.

(4) Since the initial vowel of the present tense stem is long, the addition of the past indicative augment does not change the stem, and the present and imperfect indicative active are identical in the first and second person plural.

(5) The second person singular, present imperative active is thematic and derives from *ἵεε. Cf. τίθει < *τίθεε, δίδου < *δίδοε.

(6) The second person plural, present imperative active is identical with the second person plural, present and imperfect indicative active.

(7) The third person plural, present imperative active is identical with the masculine and neuter genitive plural of the present participle active. Context will help to determine meaning.

(8) Distinguish the present infinitive active ἱέναι from the present infinitive active of εἶμι: ἰέναι.

2. PRESENT AND IMPERFECT MIDDLE/PASSIVE

	PRESENT IND. MIDDLE/ PASSIVE	IMPERF. IND. MIDDLE/ PASSIVE	PRESENT SUBJ. MIDDLE/ PASSIVE	PRESENT OPT. MIDDLE/ PASSIVE	PRESENT IMPER. MIDDLE/ PASSIVE
S 1	ἵεμαι	ἱέμην	ἱῶμαι	ἱείμην
2	ἵεσαι	ἵεσο	ἱῇ	ἱεῖο	ἵεσο
3	ἵεται	ἵετο	ἱῆται	ἱεῖτο	ἱέσθω
P 1	ἱέμεθα	ἱέμεθα	ἱώμεθα	ἱείμεθα
2	ἵεσθε	ἵεσθε	ἱῆσθε	ἱεῖσθε	ἵεσθε
3	ἵενται	ἵεντο	ἱῶνται	ἱεῖντο	ἱέσθων

PRESENT INFINITIVE MIDDLE/PASSIVE: ἵεσθαι

PRESENT PARTICIPLE MIDDLE/PASSIVE:

	M	F	N
Nom. S	ἱέμενος	ἱεμένη	ἱέμενον

Observation: Since the addition of the past indicative augment does not change the initial long vowel of the present tense stem, the present and imperfect indicative middle/passive are identical in the first and second person plural. In the second person plural, the present imperative middle/passive is also identical to these forms. Context will help to determine meaning.

3. AORIST ACTIVE

The verb ἵημι, like the verbs δίδωμι and τίθημι, has a mixed aorist which employs the first aorist tense stem ἡκ- and the athematic second aorist tense stem ἑ- (augmented form εἱ- from *ἐέ-).

Compare closely the aorist active and middle of τίθημι (first aorist stem θηκ-, second aorist stem θε-) and that of δίδωμι (first aorist stem δωκ-, second aorist stem δο-). Only these three verbs have mixed aorists.

The aorist forms of ἵημι are normally found only in compounds.

	AORIST IND. ACTIVE	AORIST SUBJ. ACTIVE	AORIST OPTATIVE ACTIVE	AORIST IMPERATIVE ACTIVE
S 1	-ἧκα	-ὧ	-εἵην
2	-ἧκας	-ῇς	-εἵης	-ἕς
3	-ἧκε(ν)	-ῇ	-εἵη	-ἕτω
P 1	-εἷμεν	-ὧμεν	-εἷμεν/-εἵημεν
2	-εἷτε	-ῆτε	-εἷτε/-εἵητε	-ἕτε
3	-εἷσαν	-ὧσι(ν)	-εἷεν/-εἵησαν	-ἕντων

AORIST INFINITIVE ACTIVE: -εἷναι

AORIST PARTICIPLE ACTIVE:

	M	F	N
Nom. S	-εἵς	-εἷσα	-ἕν
Gen.	-ἕντος	-εἵσης	-ἕντος

Observations: (1) In the aorist subjunctive active the vowel of the stem contracts with the endings; e.g., *-ἕω > -ὧ.

(2) The rough breathing of the aorist subjunctive and optative active distinguishes them from the present subjunctive and optative active of εἰμί: ὧ, εἴην.

(3) The rough breathing distinguishes the aorist infinitive active -εἷναι from the present infinitive active of εἰμί: εἷναι.

(4) The third person plural, aorist imperative active is identical with the masculine and neuter genitive plural of the aorist participle active. Context will determine meaning.

(5) In the first and second person plural, the shorter forms of the aorist optative active are identical with those of the aorist indicative active.

4. AORIST MIDDLE

		AORIST IND. MIDDLE	AORIST SUBJ. MIDDLE	AORIST OPTATIVE MIDDLE	AORIST IMPERATIVE MIDDLE
S	1	-είμην	-ῶμαι	-είμην
	2	-είσο	-ῇ	-είο	-οῦ (*έο)
	3	-είτο	-ῆται	-είτο/-οίτο	-έσθω
P	1	-είμεθα	-ώμεθα	-είμεθα/-οίμεθα
	2	-είσθε	-ῆσθε	-είσθε/-οίσθε	-έσθε
	3	-είντο	-ῶνται	-είντο/-οίντο	-έσθων

AORIST INFINITIVE MIDDLE: -έσθαι

AORIST PARTICIPLE MIDDLE:

	M	F	N
Nom. S	-έμενος	-εμένη	-έμενον

Observations: (1) In the second person singular the aorist indicative middle uses the ending -σο instead of the ending -ο. Contrast -είσο with έθου, έδου.

(2) The aorist indicative middle, aorist optative middle (except for the second person singular), and pluperfect indicative middle/passive are all identical in form.

(3) The alternative thematic forms of the optative are exactly like the equivalent forms of τίθημι. The stem έ- contracts with the endings.

(4) The second person singular, aorist imperative middle -οῦ retains its circumflex accent when compounded with a monosyllabic prefix (see the Appendix, p. 609): ἀφοῦ.

(5) Remember that ALL infinitives have fixed, non-recessive accents which are retained in compounds:

ἀφεῖναι   ἀφέσθαι

137. INDEFINITE RELATIVE PRONOUN
INDIRECT INTERROGATIVE PRONOUN/ADJECTIVE

The indefinite relative pronoun ὅστις, ἥτις, ὅτι, "whoever, whatever," serves also as the indirect interrogative pronoun/adjective, with the meaning "who, what." An indirect interrogative introduces an indirect question. For indirect questions see Section 140.

This pronoun/adjective is formed by combining into one word the relative pronoun ὅς, ἥ, ὅ and the indefinite pronoun/adjective τις, τι, while declining each word separately.

There are several alternative masculine and neuter forms.

	M	F	N
Nom. S	ὅστις	ἥτις	ὅτι
Gen.	οὗτινος/ὅτου	ἧστινος	οὗτινος/ὅτου
Dat.	ᾧτινι/ὅτῳ	ᾗτινι	ᾧτινι/ὅτῳ
Acc.	ὅντινα	ἥντινα	ὅτι
Nom. P	οἵτινες	αἵτινες	ἅτινα/ἅττα
Gen.	ὧντινων/ὅτων	ὧντινων	ὧντινων/ὅτων
Dat.	οἷστισι(ν)/ὅτοις	αἷστισι(ν)	οἷστισι(ν)/ὅτοις
Acc.	οὕστινας	ἅστινας	ἅτινα/ἅττα

Observations: (1) The accent of the compound forms follows the rules for enclitics.

(2) The neuter nominative and accusative singular must be distinguished from the conjunction ὅτι.

The following sentences will illustrate the use of the indefinite relative pronoun:

ὅστις κακὰ ποιεῖ, κακὰ πείσεται.
Whoever does evil things, will suffer evil things.

ὅστις ἂν κακὰ ποιῇ, κακὰ πείσεται.
Whoever does evil things, will suffer evil things.

ὅστις ἂν κακὸς ᾖ, κακὰ ποιεῖ.
Whoever is evil, does evil things.

The indefinite relative pronoun adds an extra generalizing force even to a present (or past) general conditional sentence, as in the third example above.

138. INDEFINITE RELATIVES AND DIRECT AND INDIRECT INTERROGATIVES

Corresponding to the indefinite relative/indirect interrogative ὅστις, ἥτις, ὅτι are several adjectives which serve the same two functions. These are listed in the right-hand column below. Direct interrogative forms are listed in the left-hand column.

When used as indefinite relative pronouns or adjectives, these words have a meaning which includes the element "-ever": e.g., "whoever," "whichever." When used as indirect interrogative pronouns or adjectives, these words have the same meaning as the direct interrogative but are used to introduce indirect questions.

DIRECT INTERROGATIVE	INDEFINITE RELATIVE/ INDIRECT INTERROGATIVE
τίς, τί who?, what?	ὅστις, ἥτις, ὅτι whoever, whatever who?, what?
ποῖος, ποία, ποῖον of what sort?	ὁποῖος, ὁποία, ὁποῖον of whatever sort of what sort?
πόσος, πόση, πόσον how much/many?	ὁπόσος, ὁπόση, ὁπόσον however much/many how much/many?
πότερος, ποτέρᾱ, πότερον which (of two)?	ὁπότερος, ὁποτέρᾱ, ὁπότερον whichever (of two) which (of two)?

Compare the chart of correlative pronouns, adjectives, and adverbs included in the Vocabulary, pages 530–31.

139. INDEFINITE, RELATIVE, AND INTERROGATIVE ADVERBS

Many adverbs have three forms: direct interrogative, indefinite (enclitic), and indefinite relative/indirect interrogative.

DIRECT INTERROGATIVE	INDEFINITE (enclitic)	INDEFINITE RELATIVE INDIRECT INTERROGATIVE
πόθεν from where?, whence?	ποθέν from somewhere	ὁπόθεν from wherever from where?, whence?
ποῖ to where?, whither?	ποι to some place	ὅποι to wherever to where?, whither?
πότε when?	ποτέ at some time, ever	ὁπότε whenever when?
ποῦ where?	που somewhere	ὅπου wherever where?
πῶς how?	πως somehow	ὅπως however how?

Observation: The indefinite relative/indirect interrogative ὅπως must be distinguished from the conjunction ὅπως which introduces purpose clauses and object clauses of effort.

Compare the chart of correlative pronouns, adjectives, and adverbs included in the Vocabulary, pages 530–31.

140. INDIRECT QUESTION

A question, like a statement, can be quoted either directly or indirectly. Direct quotation preserves the speaker's original words, which in English are set off by quotation marks. But indirect quotation, or indirect question, incorporates the original words into a complex sentence.

> He asks, "What are they doing?" (direct quotation)
> He asks what they are doing. (indirect question)

The main verb which introduces an indirect question can be not only a verb of asking, but also a verb of knowing, learning, perceiving, etc. (e.g., "I learned what they were doing.").

While there are three different ways of expressing indirect statement, THERE IS ONLY ONE WAY OF EXPRESSING INDIRECT QUESTION: FINITE VERB INTRODUCED BY AN INDIRECT INTERROGATIVE WORD.

The rules for indirect question are the same as those for indirect statement with a finite verb introduced by ὅτι or ὡς:

> When the introductory verb is in a primary tense, all verbs in the indirect question retain their original mood and tense.

> When the introductory verb is in a secondary tense, all indicative verbs of the original question

>> EITHER are changed to the corresponding tense of the optative
>> OR remain unchanged (retained indicative).

In addition, all direct interrogative words of the original question are usually changed to the corresponding indirect interrogative words (cf. Sections 138, 139).

The particle ἆρα remains unchanged.

If the original question has no interrogative word, the indirect question is introduced by the particle εἰ, "whether, if."

If a question includes two alternatives, these are introduced in an indirect question by the following introductory words, each pair of which means "whether . . . or":

$$\pi ό τ ε ρ ο ν \ . . . \ ἤ$$ $$ε ἴ τ ε \ . . . \ ε ἴ τ ε$$
$$ε ἰ \ . . . \ ε ἴ τ ε$$

The negative of the original question is preserved in an indirect question.

Here are examples of direct and indirect questions:

τίς εἶ; Who are you?	(original question)
ἐρωτᾷ ὅστις εἶ. He asks who you are.	(indirect question)
πότερος τοῦτ' ἐποίησεν; Which one did this?	(original question)
ἠρωτήσαμεν ὁπότερος τοῦτο ποιήσειεν. We asked which one did this.	(indirect question)
Εὐρῑπίδης σοφός ἐστιν; Is Euripides wise?	(original question)
ἐρωτήσετ' εἰ Εὐρῑπίδης σοφός ἐστιν. You will ask whether (if) Euripides is wise.	(indirect question)

ὦ βασιλεῦ, πότερον βούλει μένειν ἢ ἀπιέναι;   (original question) King, do you wish to stay or go away?

ἠρώτᾱ τὸν βασιλέᾱ πότερον βούλοιτο   (indirect question)
    μένειν ἢ ἀπιέναι.
ἠρώτᾱ τὸν βασιλέᾱ εἴτε βούλοιτο
    μένειν εἴτε ἀπιέναι.
ἠρώτᾱ τὸν βασιλέᾱ εἰ βούλοιτο
    μένειν εἴτε ἀπιέναι.
She was asking the king whether he wanted to stay or go away.

πόσους ἀγγέλους πέμπεις;   (original question)
How many messengers are you sending?

ἠρώτησα ὁπόσους ἀγγέλους πέμπεις.   (indirect question with
I asked how many messengers you were sending.   retained indicative)

The interrogative word of the original statement is sometimes retained:

τίνες εἰσίν;   (original question)
Who are they?

ἠρώτων αὐτοὺς τίνες εἶεν.   (indirect question)
I was asking them who they were.

VOCABULARY NOTES

The verb ἀποθνῄσκω, ἀποθανοῦμαι, ἀπέθανον, τέθνηκα, ——, ——, "die," has a contracted deponent future and a second aorist. The perfect tense is not compounded with ἀπο-. Note that Principal Part I shows the inchoative suffix -σκω and that Principal Part IV lacks the iota subscript beneath the eta. In the perfect indicative active the plural has, in addition to the regular forms, the alternative forms τέθναμεν, τέθνατε, τεθνᾶσι(ν). The pluperfect has the alternative third person plural ἐτέθνασαν. The perfect infinitive active is τεθνηκέναι or τεθνάναι. The perfect participle active is either τεθνηκώς, τεθνηκυῖα, τεθνη-κός or τεθνεώς, τεθνεῶσα, τεθνεός (gen. τεθνεῶτος, τεθνεώσης, τεθνεῶτος); cf., from ἵστημι, ἑστώς, ἑστῶσα, ἑστός.

In the verb ἀποκτείνω, ἀποκτενῶ, ἀπέκτεινα, ἀπέκτονα, ——, ——, "kill," Principal Part I derives from *ἀποκτένι̯ω and Principal Part III from *ἀπέκτενσα. Note the contracted future, and the o-grade of the root in the perfect (where the epsilon is part of the tense stem). The passive of this verb is supplied by ἀποθνῄσκω:

> αὐτὸν ἀπεκτείναμεν.
> We killed him.
>
> ὑφ' ἡμῶν ἀπέθανεν.
> He died at our hands.
> He was killed by us.

Do not confuse the verb βουλεύω, βουλεύσω, ἐβούλευσα, βεβούλευκα, βεβούλευμαι, ἐβουλεύθην, "deliberate on, plan; (mid.) take counsel with oneself, deliberate," with the verb βούλομαι.

Note that in the verb ζητέω, ζητήσω, ἐζήτησα, ἐζήτηκα, ——, ἐζητήθην, "seek," the epsilon with which Principal Part IV begins is part of the tense stem. This verb can govern a direct object indicating the person or thing after which one is seeking, an indirect question indicating the problem which one is investigating, or an object infinitive of the thing which one is seeking to do.

The verb ἵημι, -ήσω, -ῆκα, -εἷκα, -εἷμαι, -εἵθην, "release, hurl, send," is con-jugated almost exactly like τίθημι, with which it should be closely compared. This will most easily be done by consulting pp. 670–73 and 677–80 of the Appendix, where the forms of these two verbs are listed side by side. (Dual forms, which appear between the singular and plural forms in the Appendix, should be ignored.)

Compare the following stems of these verbs:

present tense stem (long-vowel grade)	τιθη-	ἱη-
(short-vowel grade)	τιθε-	ἱεfirst aorist active and middle tense stem	θηκ-	ἠκ-

second aorist active and middle
tense stem	θε-	ἑ-

The unaugmented aorist passive tense stem is ἑθ-.

The verb ἵημι usually appears in compounds, two of which are ἀφίημι, "send forth, send away; let go, neglect," and συνίημι, "understand, comprehend."

The verb μέλλω, μελλήσω, ἐμέλλησα, ——, ——, ——, when it means "be about to, be likely to," governs a future (sometimes a present) infinitive; used by itself, or with a present infinitive, it can mean "delay."

> νῦν γε μέλλομεν νῑκήσειν.
> Now, at least, we are about to (are likely to) win.
>
> τί ἀεὶ ἔμελλεν οὗτος;
> Why did this man always delay?

The adjective ὀξύς, ὀξεῖα, ὀξύ, "sharp, keen," can refer to pointed objects, things perceived, or one's own senses.

The noun τράπεζα, τραπέζης, ἡ, "table; money-changer's table, bank," means literally something "four-footed": *τρά-πεδι̯α.

Distinguish the noun ψεῦδος, ψεύδους, τό, "falsehood, lie," from the adjective ψευδής, ψευδές, "false, lying."

Distinguish carefully the various meanings of ὡς encountered thus far:

> correlative conjunction: "as"
> ἀθάνατός ἐστιν ἡ ψῡχή, ὡς λέγει ὁ ποιητής.
> The soul is immortal, as the poet says.
>
> exclamatory adverb: "how!"
> ὡς ἄφρονες οἱ ῥήτορές εἰσιν.
> How foolish the public speakers are!
>
> introducing purpose clauses: "in order that"
> with causal or purpose participle: cause or purpose not vouched for by speaker
>
> introducing indirect statement with finite verb: "that"
>
> with superlative adjective or adverb: "as . . . as possible"

READINGS

A. Aristophanes, Knights 150–181

So bad has the leadership of Athens become that in Aristophanes' reductio ad absurdum Demosthenes and Nikias, two servants of Demos (= the people of Athens), have just found out through an oracle that the city can be saved only when it is led by a sausage-seller. Needless to say, a sausage-seller opportunely happens along.

141. COMPARISON OF ADVERBS

Adverbs have, like adjectives, a positive, comparative, and superlative degree. Those adverbs which are derived from adjectives use as their comparative degree the neuter accusative singular of the comparative degree of the adjective; they use as their superlative degree the neuter accusative plural of the superlative degree of the adjective.

POSITIVE DEGREE	COMPARATIVE DEGREE	SUPERLATIVE DEGREE
δικαίως justly	δικαιότερον more justly rather justly	δικαιότατα most justly very justly
σοφῶς wisely	σοφώτερον more wisely rather wisely	σοφώτατα most wisely very wisely
ἀληθῶς truly	ἀληθέστερον more truly rather truly	ἀληθέστατα most truly very truly
ἡδέως gladly, pleasantly	ἥδῑον more gladly, more pleasantly rather gladly, rather pleasantly	ἥδιστα most gladly, most pleasantly very gladly, very pleasantly

Comparative and superlative adverbs can take the same constructions as comparative and superlative adjectives (cf. Section 131.5 8).

> Ἀριστοφάνης τοῖς πολίταις σοφώτερον Εὐρῑπίδου συνεβούλευεν.
> Aristophanes used to advise the citizens more wisely than Euripides.
>   (genitive of comparison)

ὁ δῆμος εἰρήνην ἐποιήσατο ὡς δικαιότατα.
The people made peace as justly as possible. (superlative with ὡς)

Some adverbs also form comparatives with the ending -ως. These alternative forms (e.g., ἀληθεστέρως, δικαιοτέρως) will be easily recognized in reading. The regular rules should be followed in English-to-Greek composition.

142. IRREGULAR COMPARISON OF ADJECTIVES

Some adjectives alter the stem, or employ a different stem or stems, in the comparative and superlative degree.

All such adjectives employ the comparative suffix -ίων, -ῑον (or, because of phonetic changes, -ων, -ον) and the superlative suffix -ιστος, -ιστη, -ιστον. Compare ἡδίων, ἥδῑον; ἥδιστος, ἡδίστη, ἥδιστον (Section 131.2). The chart below lists only the masculine nominative singular.

For the sake of simplicity only the strict comparative and superlative meanings, e.g., "better," "best," are given, but intensive meanings, e.g., "rather good," "very good," are equally possible.

The adjectives ἀγαθός, "good," and κακός, "bad," have three different comparatives and superlatives with somewhat different meanings.

POSITIVE DEGREE	COMPARATIVE DEGREE	SUPERLATIVE DEGREE
ἀγαθός good	ἀμείνων better (in ability or worth)	ἄριστος best (in ability or worth)
	βελτίων better (morally)	βέλτιστος best (morally) κρείττων stronger, better	κράτιστος strongest, best κακός bad	κακίων worse (morally)	κάκιστος worst (morally) χείρων worse (morally, in ability)	χείριστος worst (morally, in ability)

	ἥττων	adverb: ἥκιστα
	weaker,	least,
	worse	not at all
μέγας	μείζων	μέγιστος
great	greater	greatest
ὀλίγος	ἐλάττων	ἐλάχιστος
little	less	least
few	fewer	fewest
πολύς	πλείων or πλέων	πλεῖστος
much	more	most many ῥᾴδιος	ῥᾴων	ῥᾷστος
easy	easier	easiest
ταχύς	θάττων	τάχιστος
swift	swifter	swiftest

Observations: (1) Note the origins of the following comparatives:

$$
\begin{array}{lll}
\text{κρείττων} & < & \text{*κρέτι̯ων} \\
\text{ἥττων} & < & \text{*ἥκι̯ων} \\
\text{μείζων} & < & \text{*μέγι̯ων} \\
\text{ἐλάττων} & < & \text{*ἐλάχι̯ων} \\ \text{θάττων} & < & \text{*θάχι̯ων} \end{array}

In the positive and superlative degrees of ταχύς the initial aspirate of the stem θαχ- has lost its aspiration (dissimilation of aspirates).

(2) The comparative πλείων/πλέων, πλεῖον/πλέον has a genitive singular πλείονος/πλέονος (all genders) and employs the two alternative stems πλειον- and πλεον- throughout its declension.

(3) Adverbs derived from these adjectives use as their comparative the neuter accusative singular of the comparative degree of the adjective; the superlative degree of the adverb is the neuter accusative plural of the superlative degree of the adjective, e.g.:

| κακῶς | κάκιον | κάκιστα |

143. THE VERB οἶδα, "know"

οἶδα, εἴσομαι, ——, ——, ——, ——, "know"

The first Principal Part of this verb is an unreduplicated perfect which has some endings slightly different from those of πεπαίδευκα. This perfect tense has a present meaning: "I know"; the pluperfect means "I knew." The verb is actually the perfect tense of the verb which is used as the aorist of ὁράω: εἶδον. The perfect tense stem has three different forms with different vowel grades:

οἰδ-: used only in the perfect indicative singular ἰδ-: used only in the perfect indicative plural and in the imperative εἰδε-/εἰδ-: used elsewhere

	PERFECT INDICATIVE ACTIVE	PERFECT SUBJUNCTIVE ACTIVE	PERFECT OPTATIVE ACTIVE
S 1	οἶδα	εἰδῶ	εἰδείην
2	οἶσθα	εἰδῇς	εἰδείης
3	οἶδε(ν)	εἰδῇ	εἰδείη
P 1	ἴσμεν	εἰδῶμεν	εἰδεῖμεν/εἰδείημεν
2	ἴστε	εἰδῆτε	εἰδεῖτε/εἰδείητε
3	ἴσᾱσι(ν)	εἰδῶσι(ν)	εἰδεῖεν/εἰδείησαν

Observations: (1) The accent in the perfect subjunctive is due to the contraction of the final vowel of the stem εἰδε- with the subjunctive endings. Note that the accent in the perfect optative active never goes back beyond the -ι-. Cf. the first person plural, aorist optative passive παιδευθεῖμεν.

(2) Note the change of -δ- to -σ- in the stem ἰδ- in the perfect indicative plural. The second person singular was originally οἶδθα*.

PLUPERFECT INDICATIVE ACTIVE:

S 1 ᾔδη/ᾔδειν   P 1 ᾖσμεν/ᾔδεμεν
2 ᾔδησθα/ᾔδεις   2 ᾖστε/ᾔδετε
3 ᾔδει(ν)   3 ᾖσαν/ᾔδεσαν

Observations: (1) The augmented form of εἰ- is ᾐ-; note the iota subscript (cf. Vocabulary Notes, pages 101–102).

(2) Note the change of -δ- to -σ- of the augmented stem ἠδ- in the first set of forms in the plural of the pluperfect indicative active.

(3) The form ᾖσαν is the third person plural, pluperfect indicative active of οἶδα or imperfect indicative active of εἶμι. Be careful to distinguish the pluperfect of οἶδα from the imperfects of εἰμί and εἶμι.

PERFECT IMPERATIVE ACTIVE:

S 2 ἴσθι   P 2 ἴστε
  3 ἴστω   3 ἴστων

Observations: (1) The second person singular is identical in form with the second person singular, present imperative active of the verb εἰμί.

(2) Note again the change of -δ- to -σ- in the stem ἰδ-.

PERFECT INFINITIVE ACTIVE: εἰδέναι

PERFECT PARTICIPLE ACTIVE:

	M	F	N
Nom.	εἰδώς	εἰδυῖα	εἰδός
Gen.	εἰδότος	εἰδυίας	εἰδότος

144. TEMPORAL CLAUSES INTRODUCED BY μέχρι and ἕως μέχρι, "as long as; until"

ἕως, "as long as, while; until"

The two most common constructions in temporal clauses introduced by these conjunctions are a past indicative when the main verb is past and the temporal clause refers to a definite act in past time, and ἄν with the subjunctive when the main verb is either present or future.

1. PAST INDICATIVE

$$\grave{\varepsilon}\mu\alpha\chi\acute{o}\mu\eta\nu \left\{ \begin{array}{l} \mu\acute{\varepsilon}\chi\rho\iota \\ \mǽ\omega\varsigma \end{array} \right\} \grave{\varepsilon}\nu\acute{\iota}\kappa\eta\sigma\alpha.$$

I was fighting until I won.

$$\grave{\varepsilon}\mu\alpha\chi\acute{o}\mu\eta\nu \left\{ \begin{array}{l} \mu\acute{\varepsilon}\chi\varrho\iota \\ \acute{\varepsilon}\omega\varsigma \end{array} \right\} \grave{\varepsilon}\nu\acute{\iota}\varkappa\omega\nu.$$

I was fighting as long as I was winning.

2. ἄν + SUBJUNCTIVE

$$\mu\alpha\chi\tilde{o}\tilde{v}\mu\alpha\iota \left\{ \begin{array}{l} \mu\acute{\varepsilon}\chi\varrho\iota \\ \acute{\varepsilon}\omega\varsigma \end{array} \right\} \ \check{\alpha}\nu \ \nu\bar{\iota}\varkappa\acute{\eta}\sigma\omega\mu\varepsilon\nu.$$

I shall fight until we win.

I shall fight as long as you remain here.

Usually, as in the examples above, the conjunctions μέχρι and ἕως mean "until" when the verb which they introduce has simple aspect (aorist indicative or subjunctive) and mean "as long as" when the verb which they introduce has progressive/repeated aspect (imperfect indicative or present subjunctive).

145. TEMPORAL CLAUSES INTRODUCED BY πρίν, "before, until"

The conjunction πρίν can introduce both an infinitive and a finite verb.

1. πρίν + INFINITIVE

πρίν introducing an infinitive means "before." The infinitive may have an accusative subject. The main clause is usually not negated.

ἐδίδαξεν τοὺς πολίτᾱς πρὶν ἀπελθεῖν.
He taught the citizens before going away.

ἀγγελεῖ τὴν νίκην τῇ πόλει πρὶν τοὺς κήρῡκας ἐλθεῖν.
He will announce the victory to the city before the heralds come.

2. πρίν + FINITE VERB

When the verb of the main clause is negated, πρίν introduces a finite verb and means "until"; it governs the same constructions as μέχρι and ἕως: a past indicative or ἄν and the subjunctive.

οὐ τοὺς πολίτᾱς ἐπαίδευσε πρὶν τὸ βιβλίον ἔγραψεν.
He did not educate the citizens until he wrote the book.

οὐ τοὺς πολίτᾱς παιδεύσει πρὶν ἂν τὸ βιβλίον γράψῃ.
He will not educate the citizens until he writes the book.

146. ATTRACTION OF THE RELATIVE PRONOUN TO THE CASE OF ITS ANTECEDENT OMISSION OF THE ANTECEDENT OF THE RELATIVE PRONOUN

The relative pronoun ὅς, ἥ, ὅ takes its gender and number from its antecedent, and its case from its use in its own clause.

οἱ στρατιῶται ἄξιοί εἰσι τῶν ἄθλων ἃ οἱ πολῖται διδόᾱσιν.
The soldiers are worthy of the prizes which the citizens give.

In this sentence, the relative pronoun is neuter plural because its antecedent is the neuter plural ἄθλων, accusative because it is the direct object of διδόᾱσιν in its own clause.

When the relative pronoun is accusative and the antecedent is either genitive or dative, the relative pronoun is frequently attracted into the case of the antecedent:

οἱ στρατιῶται ἄξιοί εἰσι τῶν ἄθλων ὧν οἱ πολῖται διδόᾱσιν.
The soldiers are worthy of the prizes which the citizens give.

In this sentence, the relative pronoun has been attracted into the genitive case, the case of its antecedent. If asked for the syntax of such a relative pronoun one should say that it is neuter plural because of its antecedent ἄθλων, genitive by attraction to the case of its antecedent instead of accusative as direct object of διδόᾱσιν.

οὐχ ἕψομαι τούτῳ τῷ ἡγεμόνι ὃν πέμπετε.
οὐχ ἕψομαι τούτῳ τῷ ἡγεμόνι ᾧ πέμπετε.
I shall not follow this leader whom you are sending.

In both sentences, the relative pronoun is masculine singular because of its antecedent ἡγεμόνι. In the first sentence the relative pronoun is accusative because it is the direct object of the verb πέμπετε. In the second the relative pronoun is dative because it is attracted to the case of its antecedent, which is dative.

The relative pronouns ὅσος and οἷος are also frequently attracted into the case of their antecedent.

τοῦτόν γ' οὐκ ἀξιοῦμεν τῶν ἄθλων ὅσων πέμπετε.

We do not think this man, at least, worthy of the prizes, as many as you send.

οὐχ ἑσπόμεθα τούτοις οἵοις ἐπέμψατε.

We did not follow these men, the sort which you sent.

At times, especially when the antecedent is either indefinite or demonstrative, it is left out and the relative is attracted to the case of the omitted antecedent.

οἱ στρατιῶται ἄξιοί εἰσιν ὧν οἱ πολῖται διδόασιν.

The soldiers are worthy (of the things) which the citizens give.

The soldiers are worthy of what the citizens give.

The ὧν is standing for ἐκείνων ἅ, in which ἐκείνων would be the genitive governed by ἄξιοι, and ἅ the direct object of διδόασιν.

The omission of the antecedent of the relative pronoun has already been seen in such sentences as:

οὐ τῑμῶ ὅς ἂν τοῦτο πράττῃ.

I do not honor whoever does this.

The omission of the antecedent of the relative is frequent in such sentences as:

ἔστιν ὅστις τοῦτον τῑμᾷ.

There is (someone) who honors this man.

οὐκ ἔστιν ὅστις τοῦτον τῑμᾷ.

There is not (anyone) who honors this man.

There is no one who honors this man.

οὐκ ἔστι περὶ ὅτου οὐ λέγει οὗτος.

There is not (anything) about which this man does not speak.

There is nothing about which this man does not speak.

VOCABULARY NOTES

The verb αἰσχΰνομαι, αἰσχυνοῦμαι, ——, ——, ᾔσχυμμαι, ᾐσχΰνθην, "be ashamed, feel shame before," is a passive deponent with a contracted future. It has the same root as the adjective αἰσχρός, αἰσχρά, αἰσχρόν. The people before whom one feels shame are put in the accusative. Note that the original form of the first person singular, perfect indicative middle/passive was *ᾔσχυνμαι. The conjugation is: ᾔσχυμμαι, ᾐσχυμμένος εἶ, ᾔσχυνται, ᾐσχύμμεθα, ᾔσχυνθε, ᾐσχυμμένοι εἰσί(ν). Both the second person singular and the third person plural use periphrastic forms, forms consisting of a participle and a form of the verb εἰμί. The pluperfect follows the same pattern. The perfect infinitive middle/passive is ᾐσχΰνθαι.

In the verb ἀπόλλῡμι, ἀπολῶ, ἀπώλεσα (trans.) or ἀπωλόμην (intrans.), ἀπολώλεκα (trans.) or ἀπόλωλα (intrans.), ——, ——, "kill, lose; (mid. and intrans.) die, cease to exist," note the contracted future and the fact that in the aorist and in the perfect, there are separate transitive forms (the first aorist ἀπώλεσα and the perfect ἀπολώλεκα) and intransitive forms (the second aorist middle ἀπωλόμην and the perfect ἀπόλωλα). In the present, imperfect, and future tenses, the middle forms are also intransitive. The present and imperfect are conjugated exactly like the corresponding tenses of δείκνῡμι.

The verb ——, ἐρήσομαι, ἠρόμην, ——, ——, —— is synonymous with the corresponding tenses of ἐρωτάω. Both of these verbs govern indirect questions.

In the verb εὑρίσκω, εὑρήσω, ηὗρον, ηὕρηκα, ηὕρημαι, ηὑρέθην, "find, discover," note the inchoative suffix in Principal Part I and the -ε- in Principal Part VI, ηὑρέθην. All of the forms beginning with ηὑ- are also found with εὑ-: e.g., the first person singular, imperfect indicative active is either ηὕρισκον or εὕρισκον. The second person singular, aorist imperative active is εὑρέ: cf. εἰπέ, ἐλθέ, ἰδέ, λαβέ.

The verb ἡγέομαι, ἡγήσομαι, ἡγησάμην, ——, ἥγημαι, ἡγήθην has the same root as the noun ἡγεμών, ἡγεμόνος, ὁ, "leader." The primary meaning of the verb is "to lead the way." From that developed the notion of "to be a command-er, rule"; like ἄρχω, ἡγέομαι governs the genitive case. A final and very important meaning is "to believe"; in this sense, ἡγέομαι, like νομίζω, governs an infinitive with an accusative subject.

The adjective ἴσος, ἴση, ἴσον, "equal, fair; flat," has the comparative ἰσαίτερος and the superlative ἰσαίτατος; cf. παλαιός. Note the second and more com-mon meaning of the adverb ἴσως: "perhaps."

The word καινός, καινή, καινόν, "new, strange," is in some senses synonymous with νέος, νέα, νέον. Unlike νέος, however, it never has the meaning "young."

The basic meaning of κρίνω, κρινῶ, ἔκρῖνα, κέκρικα, κέκριμαι, ἐκρίθην is "separate," from which developed the meanings "decide, judge." Note the -ῑ- in Principal Parts I and III, and the short vowel elsewhere. The future is contracted; cf. μενῶ. The compound deponent ἀποκρίνομαι, ἀποκρινοῦμαι, ἀπεκρῖνάμην, ——, ἀποκέκριμαι, ——, "answer," is a very common verb. The person to whom an answer is given is in the dative.

Note that μᾶλλον, the comparative degree of the adverb μάλα, has already been presented.

The verb οἶδα, εἴσομαι, ——, ——, ——, ——, "know," takes two kinds of indirect statement: participle, or ὅτι/ὡς + finite verb. With an infinitive the verb means "know how (to) . . . ."

The compound σύνοιδα, "know," can take a reflexive pronoun in the dative with which a participle can agree, or the participle can agree with the subject in the nominative:

> σύνοιδα ἐμαυτῇ τὴν πόλιν σωσάσῃ.
> σύνοιδα ἐμαυτῇ τὴν πόλιν σώσασα.
> I know that I saved the city.

The rhetorical figure in which the chronological order of events is reversed is called ὕστερον πρότερον.

147. VERBAL ADJECTIVES IN -τέος, -τέᾱ, -τέον

Many verbs form verbal adjectives which express necessity or obligation. Most such adjectives are formed from a stem obtained by dropping from Principal Part VI not only the past indicative augment and the ending -ην but also, in those verbs where it appears, the -θ- preceding the ending. To this stem is added the adjectival suffix -τέος, -τέᾱ, -τέον. Verbal adjectives are declined like ἄξιος.

VERB	PRINCIPAL PART VI	VERBAL ADJECTIVE
λύω	ἐλύθην	λυτέος, λυτέᾱ, λυτέον
δίδωμι	ἐδόθην	δοτέος, δοτέᾱ, δοτέον
ποιέω	ἐποιήθην	ποιητέος, ποιητέᾱ, ποιητέον

When the consonants -φ- or -χ- precede the adjectival suffix, they lose their aspiration and become -π- and -κ- respectively.

ἄρχω	ἤρχθην	ἀρκτέος, ἀρκτέᾱ, ἀρκτέον
γράφω	ἐγράφην	γραπτέος, γραπτέᾱ, γραπτέον
πρᾱττω	ἐπρᾱχθην	πρᾱκτέος, πρᾱκτέᾱ, πρᾱκτέον

Verbal adjectives not formed according to these rules are given in the Appendix, pp. 688–89.

Verbal adjectives can be employed in two ways:

(1) the personal (passive) construction
(2) the impersonal (active and middle) construction

563

1. THE PERSONAL (PASSIVE) CONSTRUCTION OF VERBAL ADJECTIVES

If a verb is transitive and takes a direct object in the accusative case, its verbal adjective can modify a noun or pronoun in order to indicate that the verbal action is obligatory and must be performed upon that noun or pronoun:

> ποιητέος, ποιητέα, ποιητέον > having to be done
>
> ταῦτα ποιητέα ἐστίν.
> These things are having to be done.
> These things must be done.

In this construction the verbal adjective usually serves as a predicate adjective linked by some form of εἰμί to the noun or pronoun with which it agrees.

If the agent of the action is mentioned, the dative of personal agent is employed (cf. Section 44).

> ἡμῖν ταῦτα γραπτέα ἐστίν.
> These things must be written by us.
>
> ὑμῖν οὗτοι λυτέοι εἰσίν.
> These men must be released by you.

2. THE IMPERSONAL (ACTIVE, MIDDLE) CONSTRUCTION OF VERBAL ADJECTIVES

The verbal adjective of any verb can be placed in the neuter nominative singular, standing alone and not modifying any noun or pronoun. In this impersonal construction

(a) the verbal adjective indicates that the action of the verb (in the active or middle voice) is obligatory;

(b) the object of the verb, if expressed, stands in the same case as that which the verb requires in its finite forms;

(c) if a personal agent of the action is named, a dative of personal agent is usually employed;

(d) the verbal adjective serves as a substantive, and is the subject of the appropriate form of the verb εἰμί.

> Σωκράτει δίκην δοτέον ἐστίν.
> Sokrates must pay the penalty.

> ὑμῖν τούτους λυτέον ἐστίν.
> You must release these men.

> ἡμῖν ταῦτα γραπτέον ἐστίν.
> We must write these things.

> τῷ βασιλεῖ τοῦ δήμου ἀρκτέον ἐστίν.
> The king must rule the people.

Sometimes the neuter nominative plural of the verbal adjective is employed in this construction with no difference in meaning.

> ὑμῖν τούτους λυτέα ἐστίν.
> You must release these men.

Occasionally, in this construction, the personal agent appears in the accusative case instead of the dative.

> ἡμᾶς ταῦτα γραπτέον ἐστίν.
> We must write these things.

When negated by οὐ, verbal adjectives in either the personal or impersonal construction convey the idea that the action must not occur.

> ὑμῖν οὗτοι οὐ λυτέοι εἰσίν.
> These men must not be released by you.

> ὑμῖν τούτους οὐ λυτέον ἐστίν.
> You must not release these men.

148. THE IMPERSONAL VERBS δεῖ, "it is necessary, must; there is need" χρή, "ought, must"

Like the impersonal verbs ἔστι(ν) and ἔξεστι(ν), "it is possible," are the verbs δεῖ, "there is need, must," and χρή, "ought, must." Such verbs have no definite subject; all finite forms are third person singular active.

    δεῖ, δεήσει, ἐδέησε(ν), ——, ——,   , "it is necessary, must; there is need" χρή, χρῆσται, ——, ——, ——, ——, "ought, must"

The verb δεῖ has a present tense stem δε- which contracts with the ending ONLY in the present indicative and infinitive active and in the imperfect indicative active.

The verb χρή consists of an indeclinable noun χρή, not translated separately, contracted with the appropriate form of εἰμί, except in the present indicative active, where χρή stands by itself.

The forms of these verbs are as follows:

present indicative active	δεῖ	χρή
present subjunctive active	δέῃ	χρῇ (χρή + ῇ)
present optative active	δέοι	χρείη (χρή + εἴη)
present infinitive active	δεῖν	χρῆναι (χρή + εἶναι)
present participle active	δέον	χρεών (χρή + ὄν)
imperfect indicative active	ἔδει	χρῆν/ἐχρῆν (χρή + ἦν)
future indicative active	δεήσει	χρῆσται (χρή + ἔσται)
aorist indicative active	ἐδέησε(ν)	——

Observations: (1) The participle of these verbs appears in the neuter only.

(2) The participle χρεών (from *χρηόν) results from quantitative metathesis.

(3) The alternative imperfect form ἐχρῆν adds the past indicative augment.

These verbs take an infinitive, usually with subject accusative, to complete their meaning.

> δεῖ ἡμᾶς τοῦτο ποιῆσαι.
> There is need for us to do this.
> We must do this.
> χρή ἡμᾶς τοῦτο ποιῆσαι.
> We ought to do this.
> We must do this.

When negated, these verbs usually mean "must not," but οὐ δεῖ can sometimes mean "there is no need."

> οὐ δεῖ ⎱
> οὐ χρή ⎰ ἡμᾶς τοῦτο ποιῆσαι.
> We must not do this.
>
> οὐ δεῖ ἡμᾶς τοῦτο ποιῆσαι.
> There is no need for us to do this.

The verb δεῖ can take a genitive of the thing needed (a genitive of separation) and a dative of the person needing the thing.

> δεῖ ἡμῖν σωφροσύνης.
> There is need to us of moderation.
> We have need of moderation.

>πολλοῦ δεῖ.
>There is need of much.
>(I.e., much is lacking.)

The neuter participle δέον, δέοντος means "needed, necessary."

>ἀεὶ ποιοῦμεν τὰ δέοντα.
>We always do the things necessary.

149. THE USE OF δοκεῖ IN THE SENSE "seems best"

The verb δοκέω, "seem," can be used in the third person singular with the meaning "it seems best" to express a personal or collective opinion or decision. In such sentences, the infinitive serves as the subject of δοκεῖ.

>δοκεῖ μοι τοῦτο ποιεῖν.
>It seems best to me to do this.

>ἔδοξε τοῖς Ἀθηναίοις ἀγγέλους πρὸς βασιλέᾱ πέμψαι.
>It seemed best to the Athenians to send messengers to the king.

>ἔδοξε τῇ βουλῇ καὶ τῷ δήμῳ . . .
>It seemed best to the council and the people . . .
>(= The council and the people decided . . .)

A pronoun can stand, instead of an infinitive, as subject.

>ταῦτά μοι δοκεῖ.
>These things seem best to me.

150. ACCUSATIVE ABSOLUTE

The participles of impersonal verbs (e.g., δεῖ, δοκεῖ, ἔξεστι, χρή) can be employed, independently of the main verb of a sentence, in a construction called the accusative absolute. Such participles are neuter singular and can govern an infinitive just as do the other forms of these verbs. These are NOT accompanied by a noun or pronoun.

This construction is like the genitive absolute, which is employed with verbs which have a specific noun or pronoun as subject. Both the genitive absolute and the accusative absolute are circumstantial uses of the participle; both are "absolute" in the sense that they express a circumstance separate from the main clause of the sentence. But the obligation or possibility expressed by an accusative absolute usually applies to someone named in the main clause.

δέον δίκην δοῦναι, ἐκ τῆς πόλεως ἐφύγετε.

It being necessary to pay the penalty, you left the city.

Although it was necessary to pay the penalty, you left the city.

ἐξὸν ἀγαθὰ ποιεῖν, ποιῶμεν ἀγαθά.

It being possible to do good things, let us do good things.

Since it is possible to do good things, let us do good things.

151. THE VERB κεῖμαι, "lie, be placed, be set"

The verb κεῖμαι appears only in the present, imperfect, and future tenses.
It has only a middle voice.

κεῖμαι, κείσομαι, ——, ——, ——, —— "lie, be placed, be set"

The verb is athematic in the present and imperfect tenses. The present tense stem has two grades:

   Long-vowel grade: κει-

   Short-vowel grade: κε-

Unlike the athematic verbs already encountered, κεῖμαι employs the longvowel grade of the present tense stem throughout the present indicative, in the present infinitive and participle, and in the imperfect indicative. The short-vowel grade is employed only in the present subjunctive and optative.

The usual athematic endings are employed, EXCEPT that the optative has thematic endings.

The short-vowel present tense stem κε- does NOT contract with the subjunctive and optative endings.

These, then, are the forms of κεῖμαι in the present and imperfect tenses.

		PRESENT IND. MIDDLE	IMPERF. IND. MIDDLE	PRESENT SUBJ. MIDDLE	PRESENT OPT. MIDDLE	PRESENT IMPER. MIDDLE
S	1	κεῖμαι	ἐκείμην	κέωμαι	κεοίμην
	2	κεῖσαι	ἔκεισο	κέῃ	κέοιο	κεῖσο
	3	κεῖται	ἔκειτο	κέηται	κέοιτο	κείσθω
P	1	κείμεθα	ἐκείμεθα	κεώμεθα	κεοίμεθα
	2	κεῖσθε	ἔκεισθε	κέησθε	κέοισθε	κεῖσθε
	3	κεῖνται	ἔκειντο	κέωνται	κέοιντο	κείσθων

PRESENT INFINITIVE MIDDLE: κεῖσθαι
PRESENT PARTICIPLE MIDDLE: κείμενος, κειμένη, κείμενον

Observation: The second person plural, present imperative middle is identical with the second person plural, present indicative middle. Context will help to determine meaning.

152. SECOND-DECLENSION NOUNS OF THE TYPE νοῦς, νοῦ, ὁ, "mind"

Second-declension nouns of the type νοῦς, νοῦ, ὁ, "mind," have stems ending in the vowel -o-, which contracts with the declensional endings according to the regular rules. Uncontracted forms are given in parentheses.

Nom. S	νοῦς	(νόος)
Gen.	νοῦ	(νόου)
Dat.	νῷ	(νόῳ)
Acc.	νοῦν	(νόον)
Voc.	νοῦ	(νόε)
Nom./Voc. P	νοῖ	(νόοι)
Gen.	νῶν	(νόων)
Dat.	νοῖς	(νόοις)
Acc.	νοῦς	(νόους)

153. THE THIRD-DECLENSION NOUN ἄστυ, ἄστεως, τό, "town"

The third-declension noun ἄστυ, ἄστεως, τό, "town," has two stems: the stem ἀστυ-, with no ending added, forms the nominative, accusative, and vocative singular; the stem ἀστε-, plus the appropriate endings, appears elsewhere.

Nom./Voc. S	ἄστυ
Gen.	ἄστεως
Dat.	ἄστει
Acc.	ἄστυ
Nom./Voc. P	ἄστη (<ἄστεα)
Gen.	ἄστεων
Dat.	ἄστεσι(ν)
Acc.	ἄστη (<ἄστεα)

Observations: (1) The genitive singular and plural are like those of πόλις, πόλεως, ἡ.

(2) The nominative, accusative, and vocative plural are like those of γένος, γένους, τό.

VOCABULARY NOTES

The verb ἀφικνέομαι, ἀφίξομαι, ἀφικόμην, ——, ἀφῖγμαι, ——, "arrive," is a middle deponent compounded with ἀπο-. The root is ἱκ-. Principal Part I has the suffix -νε- and is contracted; Principal Part II has the suffix -σ-; Principal Part III is a second aorist. The -ῑ- of Principal Part III shows the past indicative augment; that of Principal Part V is part of the tense stem.

The accent of Principal Part V follows the rule that IN THE PERFECT ACTIVE AND MIDDLE/PASSIVE THE ACCENT OF A COMPOUND VERB CANNOT RECEDE BEYOND THE INITIAL SYLLABLE OF THE STEM.

The deponent verb κεῖμαι, κείσομαι, ——, ——, ——, ——, "lie, be placed, be set," is athematic in the present and imperfect tenses (see Section 151). The present tense of this verb serves as the perfect passive of τίθημι, and the imperfect as its pluperfect.

> νόμος κεῖται περὶ τούτων.
> A law is laid down (= has been laid down) about these things.

> οἱ κείμενοι νόμοι
> the laws set
> the laws laid down

The deponent verb πυνθάνομαι, πεύσομαι, ἐπυθόμην, ——, πέπυσμαι, ——, "inquire, learn by inquiry," has in Principal Part I both a nasal infix and the suffix -αν-; Principal Part III is a second aorist; Principal Part II shows the e-grade of the root, while the other Principal Parts show the zero-grade. This verb takes the same constructions as ἀκούω: accusative of the thing heard, genitive of the person heard, indirect statement with a finite verb introduced by ὅτι/ὡς, indirect statement with a participle and subject accusative. It can also introduce indirect statement with infinitive and subject accusative.

The verb τρέπω, τρέψω, ἔτρεψα or ἐτραπόμην, τέτροφα, τέτραμμαι, ἐτράπην or ἐτρέφθην, "turn; (mid., aorist passive) turn oneself," has both a first aorist and a deponent second aorist middle, and two aorists passive. The active forms are always transitive and mean "make (something) turn" or, in military contexts, "make an enemy turn and run, put to flight." Except for the first aorist middle, which is only transitive in the sense of "put to flight for one's own advantage," the middle can be intransitive ("turn oneself") or transitive ("make turn for one's own advantage"). The intransitive aorist is either ἐτραπόμην or ἐτράπην. Note, in addition to the e-grade of the root (τρεπ-), the o-grade in the aspirated perfect τέτροφα and the zero-grade in the forms ἐτραπόμην, τέτραμμαι, and ἐτράπην (τραπ- from *τρπ-).

The verb φαίνω, φανῶ, ἔφηνα, πέφηνα, πέφασμαι, ἐφάνην, "show, cause to appear; (mid., perfect active, aorist passive) appear," has a contracted future active and middle. The perfect middle/passive tense stem was originally πεφαν-, but this stem was replaced by the stem πεφασ- in many but not all forms. The perfect middle/passive is conjugated as follows in the indicative: πέφασμαι, πεφασμένος εἶ, πέφανται, πεφάσμεθα, πέφανθε, πεφασμένοι εἰσί(ν). Note the periphrastic forms in the second person singular and third person plural. The pluperfect indicative middle/passive follows the same pattern. The perfect infinitive middle/passive is πεφάνθαι (<*πεφάνσθαι). The perfect active πέφηνα means "I have appeared"; the aorist passive ἐφάνην is deponent and means "I appeared." In the sense "appear" this verb can govern either an infinitive or a participle with a substantial difference in meaning:

> φαίνεται κακὸς εἶναι.
> He appears to be bad.

> φαίνεται κακὸς ὤν.
> He is apparent, being bad.
> It is apparent that he is bad.

ἐγὼ δὴ βούλομαι πρῶτον μὲν εἰπεῖν ὅπως χρή με εἰπεῖν, ἔπειτα δὲ εἰπεῖν. δοκοῦσι γάρ μοι πάντες οἱ πρότερον εἰρηκότες οὐ τὸν θεὸν τιμᾶν, ἀλλὰ τοὺς ἀνθρώπους εὐδαιμονίζειν τῶν ἀγαθῶν ὧν ὁ θεὸς αὐτοῖς αἴτιος· ὁποῖος δέ τις αὐτὸς ὢν ταῦτα δίδωσιν, 5 οὐδενὶ εἴρηται. εἷς δὲ τρόπος ἀγαθὸς πάσης τιμῆς, λόγῳ διελθεῖν οἷος ὢν τυγχάνει περὶ οὗ ἂν ὁ λόγος ᾖ. οὕτω δὴ τὸν Ἔρωτα καὶ ἡμᾶς δίκαιον τιμᾶν πρῶτον περὶ αὐτοῦ λέγοντας ὁποῖός ἐστιν, ἔπειτα δὲ ἅττα δίδωσιν.

φημὶ οὖν ἐγὼ πάντων θεῶν εὐδαιμόνων ὄντων Ἔρωτα, εἰ θέμις
10 οὕτως εἰπεῖν, εὐδαιμονέστατον εἶναι αὐτῶν, κάλλιστον ὄντα καὶ ἄριστον. κάλλιστος δ' ἐστὶν οὗτος τόνδε τὸν τρόπον. πρῶτον μὲν νεώτατος τῶν θεῶν ἐστιν, ὦ ἑταῖρε, καὶ μετὰ νέων ἀεὶ σύνεστιν. ὁ γὰρ παλαιὸς λόγος εὖ ἔχει, ὡς "ὅμοιον ὁμοίῳ ἀεὶ σύνεστιν." ...

15 περὶ μὲν οὖν κάλλους τοῦ θεοῦ ταῦτα δὴ ἱκανά, περὶ δὲ ἀρετῆς Ἔρωτος μετὰ ταῦτα λεκτέον, τὸ μὲν μέγιστον ὅτι Ἔρως οὔτ' ἀδικεῖ οὔτ' ἀδικεῖται οὔθ' ὑπὸ θεοῦ οὔτε θεόν, οὔθ' ὑπ' ἀνθρώπου οὔτε ἄνθρωπον. πρὸς δὲ τῇ δικαιοσύνῃ σωφροσύνης πλείστης μετέχει. εἶναι γάρ φασιν πάντες σωφροσύνην τὸ κρατεῖν ἡδονῶν 20 καὶ ἐπιθυμιῶν, Ἔρωτος δὲ οὐδεμίαν ἡδονὴν κρείττω εἶναι.

περὶ μὲν οὖν δικαιοσύνης καὶ σωφροσύνης τοῦ θεοῦ μοι εἴρηται, περὶ δὲ σοφίας λείπεται. καὶ πρῶτον μέν, ἵνα αὖ καὶ ἐγὼ τὴν ἡμετέραν τέχνην τιμήσω ὥσπερ Ἐρυξίμαχος τὴν αὐτοῦ, ποιητὴς ὁ θεὸς σοφὸς οὕτως ὥστε καὶ ἄλλον ποιῆσαι. πᾶς γὰρ 25 ποιητὴς γίγνεται, καὶ ἐὰν ἄμουσος ᾖ πρότερον, οὗ ἂν Ἔρως ἅψηται.

ANSWER KEY FOR SAMPLE GRAMMAR EXAMINATION

I. I, indeed, want first on the one hand to say how I ought to speak/how it is necessary for me to speak, then on the other hand to speak. For all those having spoken earlier seem to me not to be honoring the god but to be considering (the) men blessed for the good things for which/of which the god is responsible/cause to them. But being what sort of a someone/a person he gives these things, by no one has been said. But there is one good method of all honor/honoring, by word to go through what sort he happens to be concerning whomever the speech is. Thus indeed it is just also for us to honor Love, saying about him first what sort he is, then what things he gives.

I say then that, all gods being blessed, Love, if it is right to speak in this way, is the most blessed of all, being most beautiful and best. But this one/he is most beautiful in the following way. First, on the one hand, companion, he is the youngest of the gods and is always together with the young. For the ancient saying holds well/is good, that "like is always together with like." . . .

Concerning on the one hand the beauty of the god, these things/the preceding things indeed are enough; concerning the virtue of Love, on the other hand, after these things one must speak, the greatest thing (being) that Love neither wrongs nor is wronged, neither by a god nor a god, (and he wrongs or is wronged) neither by a man nor a man. But in addition to justice he shares in the most/has a very large share of moderation. For all say that moderation is to be stronger than pleasures and desires, but that no pleasure is stronger than Love.

Concerning, then, the justice and moderation of the god, on the one hand, it has been spoken by me; concerning his wisdom, on the other hand, it is left/it remains (for me to speak). And first, on the one hand, in order that I in turn also may praise our craft just as Eryximachos his own/the craft of himself, the god is a poet so wise as to make even another (a poet). For everyone becomes a poet even if he is unpoetic formerly, whomever Love touches.
